

Oral presentation

Open Access

Primary CMV infection: a co-factor HIV-I disease progression in African infants?

Jennifer A Slyker^{*1,2}, Barbara L Payne^{2,3}, Grace C John-Stewart², Elizabeth Obimbo³, Sandy Emery⁴, Barbara Richardson⁵, Tao Dong¹, Dorothy Mbori-Ngacha³, Julie Overbaugh⁴, Vincent C Emery⁶ and Sarah L Rowland-Jones¹

Address: ¹MRC Human Immunology Unit, Oxford University, Oxford, OX3 9DS, UK, ²Department of Medicine, University of Washington, Seattle, Washington, 98104, USA, ³Department of Paediatrics, University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya, ⁴Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, Seattle, Washington, 98109, USA, ⁵Department of Biostatistics, University of Washington, Seattle, Washington, 98104, USA and ⁶Centre for Virology, Department of Infection, Royal Free and University College Medical School, London, UK

* Corresponding author

from Fourth Dominique Dormont International Conference. Host-Pathogen Interactions in Chronic Infections
Paris, France. 13-15 December 2007

Published: 9 April 2008

Retrovirology 2008, 5(Suppl 1):O23 doi:10.1186/1742-4690-5-S1-O23

This abstract is available from: <http://www.retrovirology.com/content/5/S1/O23>

© 2008 Slyker et al.; licensee BioMed Central Ltd.

Abstract not submitted for publication