CONGRESS IN ENGLAND.

Scarcely a month ago and the Labour Conference was opened at Liverpool at the end of September show the tremendous gap that exists between the continent in England and the more moderate members of the Labour Party. The prevalence majority by which the motion for the affiliation of the Committee in the latter party was rejected, and the fact that communists in making little headway in Ireland in spite of the use of violence and insidious propaganda. Communism does not break out naturally and spontaneously, it has to be artificially made and organized, sustained by the most persistent and devoted propaganda. No efforts are being spared in England at the present time to carry the seeds of destruction into the world and industrial fabric on which the heart of the Empire is built. The propaganda are doing their utmost not to advert largely to national questions, whether they directly or indirectly affected by the worker in industry or agricultural pursuits or the Army and the Navy. Special propaganda are being taken against the spread of socialism, against the armed forces of the Crown and it is now evident that the responsible leaders of the workers themselves are prepared to condemn the present methods employed by Communists in the Trade Union. Mr. Ramsey MacDonald reflected the opinions of the vast majority of Labour Convention delegates when he called upon the communists to come out of the Trade Union arena and state their opinions honestly from outside. Nevertheless, the extreme reaction in the movement which the Labour Party represents, has a considerable influence in the deliberation of the affairs. At the Trade Union Congress, the Communists minority succeeded in imposing their views upon the majority to a very considerable extent and by so doing virtually limited the scope in the hands of the moderate party, a challenge which in the past met by substantial opposition concerning the exclusion of Communists from the Labour Party. There is nothing in common between Communism and Trade Unions. The Communists do not believe in the fundamental principle of trade unionism, that a union should be formed for holding a true balance on the issues capital and labour and for the betterment of the workers in some degree the extension of "justice" and "fair play" to him, and it is this feeling that they are in such a distance from as they consider of a world wide community of workers, nor concern the slightest of the respectance as understood in the private ownership of the capitalist. While it permits of opportunities to outworkers as through national terms was a product of capitalism and it is this that it is likely to secure small success in England. Communism is taken to a greater or lesser extent in the various countries, not so in England than elsewhere, and to England, as a result of aggressive activities had been able to attract a large proportion of the working men who might be expected to be attracted to such insidious propaganda as these workers party property and such that are usually referred to as the property of the socialist. Nevertheless, the influence of the communists of the British and American activity

LOCARNO CONFERENCE.

A Crop of Rumors.

(FRANCOIS VERON'S AGENCY.)
 A crop of rumors spread of the past twenty-four hours was the coming of the work by the League of Nations to assist the British Government in the Locarno Conference. It is said that the British Government is willing to be bound by the League of Nations, and ending with a report that the minor nations of the League of Nations was really due to his being isolated.

The latter story was effectively dispensed of by Herr Stresemann speaking at the conference today. A singularly good and sympathetic feeling was expressed by the two hours' session of the Conference has not been reported. The League of Nations has not been mentioned, such as the League of Nations and the world which Germany will enter the League of Nations and the world of the western and eastern part. It is believed the conference will be a success, and with regard to the western part, but differences of opinion, which will be between the French, Polish, and German delegates, will be in the eastern part.

London, October 6.
 Sir Geoffrey Archer has been re-elected to membership of the Sudan Cotton Producers' Association in Manchester. In an interview he said the great Sudan cotton boom in Khartoum is now full of interest. The boom is going to be a very big one, and is expected to reach 80,000 acres of cotton. The crop reports are very good. The completion of the scheme will result in the Sudan cotton boom being available for cotton-growing under the present system of the Sudan cotton boom in million acres yearly.
