THE COUNCILLOR'S SONG.

You must wake and call me early, Call me early, wife dear, For to morrow I'll be arguing. On points which are not clear; I'll be arguing and shouting. Till be arguing and shouting. Till the afternoon has fled. So just wake and call me early. For I must not lie abed.

There'll be our old friend Hempsted,
Huling no one—just the chair,
And we, effertseent Tomus,
Full of dogma, will be there
kindly, elephantine Heaton,
Will be dinning in our ear,
So just wake and call me early,
Call me early, wife dear!

Bayldon with his sleek hair parted,

Will be laying down the law,
And the silken tones of Allee,
Charting some strange sight he saw,
Couper's certain to be "moving."
Though he never stirs—no fear—,
So just wake and call me sarly,
Call me early, wife dear!

Then Ribeiro will be sitting,
Silent, moveless as the Sphinx,
Just alongside stolid Ghandy,
Who won't speak—what o'er be thinks;
And Dundas will sit and wonder,
How his trousers' folds appear,
So just wake and call me early,
Call me early, with dear!

Watson will be silent, dreaming, Watson will be silent, dreaming, Of some bonnie highland glen; And the vacant chair Barnes sat on, Will be vacant—until when? Pompous Notley will be getting, Our rommittee by the ear; Sc just wake and call me early, Call me early wife dear.

So just wake and call me early, For the town has need of me, 'Canse I help to do its bustness— And in Council drink its tea! Drainage, reads and other troubles, We'll get over—never fear, For we're great on sub committees, Though they last for many a year!
