FLYING BOATS AND AIR LINES.

Minister on Coming Developments.

LADY COBBHAM'S STORY.

STANDARD (ROSEBERG) London, June 21. A dinner in honour of Sir Alan and Lady Cobham and the members of the flight of survey route Africa was given by Alderman Sir Charles Wakefield at the Savoy Hotel on Tuesday. Sir Charles Wakefield, who was presided over by Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary of State for Air, Lady Mass Hoare, the Lord Mayor, the Lady Mayhew and the Sheriffs.

Sir Samuel Hoare, proposing the health of Sir Alan and Lady Cobham and the members of the flight, expressed the belief that they were on the verge of a great development of flying boats and air lines. It was a good omen, every that at the time when they were crossing the equator by air.

Sir Samuel proceeded to express his conviction that the flight which they were honouring that night would have direct results in the development of inter-continental air services in the future. Great interest was shown in the progress of the flight out Africa. The Colonies on the eastern side of Africa were shown the importance of air routes for the transport of mail and passengers. Only a few days ago, the first Imperial lines, in which the chairman pointed to the great saving in the cost of production that would be brought about by the introduction of aviation as a means of transport of goods. Evidence of that kind made him hope that at no distant time they would see an air route started from the north to the south of Africa and direct air communications made between the United Kingdom and Cape Town (Oceania). In India.

In recent months the Government had been principally engaged in attempts to develop a flying route to India. When these routes had been organized the route to which they must give attention was the route between London and Cape Town. It was confident that they would secure the successful negotiation of a route of this kind, and when that time came they would remember the flight of Sir Alan Cobham as one of the most interesting and important events in its development. (Cheers)

Lady Mass Hoare, on behalf of Sir Charles Wakefield, presented a silver tray to Lady Cobham, in commemoration of the flight and Lady Cobham acknowledged the gift. Sir Alan Cobham described in detail his air flight round Africa and said it had been the greatest flying flight he had ever undertaken. They had established the importance of aviation to the African continent, and the practicability of the all-India flying boat.

An Anecdote
Sir Alan told a good story of an incident when they were crossing the equator by air. "Alan came into the cabin," he said, "with the remark, 'This is a momentous occasion. I think we ought to do something really out of the ordinary to celebrate it. I think I shall take you'."

When the roar of laughter had subsided Lady Cobham continued. "Alan said, 'I sincerely trust that I might make a few remarks to you'."

Later on Lord Biddell publicly complimented Sir Alan as the first aviator in Sir Alan's crew.

With the advent of East Africa looking forward to the visit of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales it is interesting to know how the hair of the Prince will be treated and to have a glimpse of one of the busiest young men in the world.

The Prince of Wales is the most popular and most travelled of local celebrities... He is a man of many parts, a scholar, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier...

Not to give you, as though you were not, an inside view not only of the Prince's home but of the Prince at home... He is a man of many parts, a scholar, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier...

We are going to look to the Prince as a visitor to the country... He is a man of many parts, a scholar, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier...

There is a policeman on duty near the gate... He is a man of many parts, a scholar, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier...

prep at the personal diary of a day of the Prince of Wales.

As Early Bird

You will have to be an early bird to be up before 10 P.M. Round about seven-thirty a bus takes you to the Prince's home...

And now we see how to face with the Prince of Wales. You need not feel the least bit nervous. He will talk to you very quietly and pleasantly and gently draw from you the topics of your daily life...

Family Parties

We have looked around the house and found how he works in a large portion of his Royal motor. On a small table in the corner are small photographs of all the ladies and gents, and the Duchess of Cornwall and the Royal children of Prince Mary and the Duchess.

And what of our host himself? Prince Edward of Wales looks like a young man of about 30. He is a man of many parts, a scholar, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier...

At noon there is the reminder that his tailor wants him to call. For the Prince has to have a huge wardrobe and "tailor" is a very important item on the day's list. Then there is a probable luncheon appointment—usually at 1.30. This means changing morning dress and changing a great deal of the rest of the plan of meeting.

The thing that the Prince would admit about his own life is that he does not have time to do anything but what he has to do.

A dash back home again and then another brief undressing and dressing for the evening function and so forth, and more often than not does not go to bed until 11.30 when he has to get up at 6.30 the next morning.

The Prince proceeds full of his own speed, and more often than not does not go to bed until 11.30 when he has to get up at 6.30 the next morning.

And so we have this busy Prince's life. It is a life of many parts, a scholar, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier, a statesman, a sportsman, a soldier...

EAST AFRICA AND INTERNAL WIRELESS.

Woman M.P. Quotes an Italian Example.

MINISTER'S SPEECH

Miss E. Wilkinson, the Labour member for Middleborough, asked a Minister of the House of Commons regarding wireless communications in East Africa.

She asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies whether in view of the unsatisfactory telegraphic communication in British East Africa the difficulties of maintaining telegraphic lines, and consequent delay in urgent telegrams, he would arrange for a system of wireless stations which would enable the most points and important to maintain adequate communication and thus add to the safety of life and of trade in those areas?

Mr. Amery: I understand that the Government are considering the possibility of making use of wireless telegraphy for internal communications, but I have had no information to suggest that the present telegraphic service and the wireless stations which are being set up by the Italian Government maintain a very good service of wireless communication in their part of Africa, and that service in the North of Africa is much safer than in British East Africa and so he would think that a good many complaints have been lodged, not only about the difficulty of sending telegrams but also the fact that telegrams were nearly about 10 days after being sent?

No Opposition.

Mr. Amery: It depends upon the district. Obviously, in a great many districts like East Africa, the wireless cannot extend all the stations that exist in the London district. As regards the Italian service in Somalia, I have not got sufficient information.

Miss Wilkinson: Is the right hon. Gentleman aware of any opposition being put up by the cable companies to the establishment of wireless?

Mr. Amery: No, because that opposition could only arise in regard to wireless stations in the communication between Kenya and this country. That would be competition between the cable companies and local wireless services by wireless.

NATIVE LEGISLATORS FOR TANGANYIKA?

Question to Receive Consideration.

SETTLEMENT.

The question of appointing native members to the Tanganyika Legislative Council was raised in the House of Commons recently by Mr. James Smith (Leith, Paisley) who asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies if, when native leaders available in sufficient numbers to form an English language to take part in the debates of the council, it would be possible to appoint natives to the council.

Mr. Amery: The question of appointing native members to the Legislative Council of Tanganyika will receive the fullest consideration as soon as there are natives of standing able to speak on behalf of the various tribes of the country, and otherwise qualified to participate in the proceedings of the Council.

Non-Native Settlement.

Mr. Smith then asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies in pursuance of the policy agreed to in Tanganyika in July, 1922, that non-native settlement should be encouraged wherever the climate was suitable and adequate services were available without depriving the natives of their land. How much land had been alienated to non-natives for use, and whether any final estimate had been made of the total amount of land to be used in this way?

Mr. Amery: The area alienated under the (German) administration is estimated at 1,754,000 acres. Since then, rights of occupancy have been granted over approximately 277,500 acres. It is as possible as present to give even a preliminary estimate of the amount of suitable land available for the purpose in the unadministered or proposed inhabited districts of this territory.

It is useless to attempt to deal here with the wide and almost infinitely complicated subject of artificial feeding... (1) An egg cup for orange juice, and water tapers.

(2) A saucer on which the rubber teats may be dried... (3) A teaspoon and teaspoon lid for mixing and measuring milk for giving water.

There are, however, several practical matters concerning the feeding time of the bottle-fed infant which have a direct bearing on the welfare, not only of himself, but also of the mother and father.

(4) A good paste jar filled with soap for cleaning teats... (5) A bottle cap, however, and any other additions to Baby's diet.

Which is not so prominent as it may seem, for nothing in baby's life so fetters away the mother's hands as the routine of the feeding of a baby.

(6) A double soapbox for holding the nursery milk for bottle teats... (7) A bottle brush.

PREPARATION. (1) All the preparation really used in feeding is that of hot water in which the bottle may be washed.

(8) A tin for sterilizing milk... (9) A tin for sterilizing milk... (10) A tin for sterilizing milk.

PROGRAMME. (1) For the method of food preparation... (2) For the method of food preparation... (3) For the method of food preparation.

FEEDING HOURS. The average hours for the first year are: 2 p.m., 6 p.m., and 10 p.m.

It is to be feared that the bottle should be started with your first child... (1) A good paste jar filled with soap for cleaning teats.

Many people are complaining lately of the plague of fleas that has appeared in their dogs since the commencement of the rains. It is said that it is almost a universal business to attempt to keep one's dog free of fleas in this country. The very sign is full of them, and after a while they have covered the animal almost as every dog. Fleas that live in the house are the most common and most troublesome. They are the only ones that are difficult to get rid of. They are the only ones that are difficult to get rid of. They are the only ones that are difficult to get rid of.

People who have just bought a new puppy for the first time are often surprised to find that the puppy is not so clean as they expected. The puppy is often covered with fleas. The puppy is often covered with fleas. The puppy is often covered with fleas.

DETAILS OF DARLINGTON TRAIN DISASTER.

SCENE OF HORROR

Coaches Forced One into Another.

The Fortitude of Nainja, the Largest of Them.

(“STANDARD” CORRESPONDENT.) London, July 26.

We are gradually being the reputation we have for our train from railway standards. This week there was a particularly disastrous train smash about midnight just outside London, and where there is an important position on the line. The incident and where there is a heavy loop line for cross country traffic. Twenty-two people were killed, 175 were injured, and 47 were injured.

The two trains were on an excursion train which left North London at 11.15 p.m. and was due to arrive at Newcastle at 11.15 and a second train which left Newcastle at 10.55 p.m. and was due to arrive at Newcastle at 11.15 p.m. The two trains were on a collision course and the two engines met, precisely head-on. It was stated that the two engines met on the point—this at the time of the collision the second train was travelling at about 30 m.p.h. and the first train was travelling at about 20 m.p.h. The result was a smash of a similar type with tender smashing into coaches.

Was a Top

The excursion train engine was broken on its left side. The bogie wheel, from one of the coaches of a child's toy, were thrown through the air, and landed vertically over the engine. The buffers of the engine were shattered off, and though the goods train engine remained miraculously upright, the train was completely broken up. It was thrown over the side of the rails and the goods train engine was a trampled maul—both sides of the train were completely crushed.

There were 200 to 1,000 passengers—mostly women and children in the excursion train. The train was on its way to Newcastle in connection with the Newcastle race holiday. The train was the standard and the four engines were completely smashed to pieces. The standard and the four engines were completely smashed to pieces. All-night Sitting on Finance Bill

THE COMING ELECTION

(“STANDARD” CORRESPONDENT.) London, July 26.

The House sat until seven o'clock on Wednesday morning, the Division being taken on this week. There was a very slight Division on various clauses of the Finance Bill. It was not known that the House would sit so late, there being sleepers everywhere, even on the front benches. There was a good deal of humor in the Debate, but it had subsided to do with the subject under discussion.

Mr. Andrew MacLennan, the Leader of the Opposition, made a motion of one of his colleagues on the subject of the Finance Bill. I am afraid a little confusion. It passed among the Members present, but it had not been so much announced. It actually interrupted the Debate.

The Government is getting tired of the Finance Bill without much difficulty and has been instructed to drop it. It is not clear whether it will be up as a Finance Bill, or whether it will be up as a Finance Bill, or whether it will be up as a Finance Bill.

All parties are getting ready for the Election next year, in which the Government will have to face the Women's Vote. The Government will have to face the Women's Vote. The Government will have to face the Women's Vote.
