THE EAST AFRICAN, CHURCH PROVINCE.

Strong Criticism of Some "Dangers" Ahead.

ANGLICAN CATHOLIC INFLUENCE.

An interesting article on the character and spirit of the present (and under construction) of the East African Province of the Anglican Church has been contributed to "The Church Gazette" by the Rev. J. D. Mellish. It will be remembered that at the Nairobi Conference in July 1927 a constitution was drafted. Many afterwards rejected the proposal and, by a majority, accepted it.

Mr. Mellish, in the course of his article writes:

Let us recall we have heard of a somewhat contracting fracture. "The diocese of Mombasa, 12 parishes, Upper Nile, and Central Tanganyika are their relations to the Church Missionary Society, whose missionaries laboured first of all on the East Coast, the greatest number of the early period being King, Robinson and Ishard. Information transmitted from them led to the exploration of Stanley, whose findings led the Catholic Church in 1878 led to the foundation of the Uganda Mission two years later. In its early days the names of Mackay, Hamilton, Pilkington, Parker and many others, not to speak of those still living, have been household words to all students of foreign missions. No wonderfully bound has been this relation that the Uganda Church now numbers about 300,000 baptized members, is largely self-supporting and is chiefly governed by its own clergy. It is the most outstanding success of modern missions, and with a Christian Kingdom under a Christian King. The Diocese of Upper Nile was formed from it two years ago. That of Mombasa contains missions amongst many national and wholly distinct tribes, where Presbyterian and other non-episcopal missionaries are also labouring. Hence the Kilgus Alliance in 1913, by which the then Bishops of Uganda and Mombasa agreed to a liberal measure of mutual intercourse and union with the other Protestant mission in East Africa. The Kilgus Conference and its outcome were hailed by Evangelicals as a great step towards the true union, and were warmly commended by Anglican Bishops, headed by the late Bishop Weston of Zululand.

The C.M.S. Area.

An element in the situation is that during the last twenty years or so, the uplands of East Africa have become colonized by large numbers of British and other white settlers, now numbering upwards of a million. The majority of these are of Indian or South African origin. After the War, the vast area known as German East Africa came under British rule, British missions to the leather were established, and a new diocese, that of Central Tanganyika has just been formed to take the oversight of them. The Anglican C.M.S. has become responsible for the maintenance of the vast area.

The area covered by these five dioceses in several times as large as England; they present a similarity of Christian doctrine; and the number of baptized members in them (about 2,000,000) greatly exceeds that of more than one century of the reformed Protestantism in the British Isles. They are all largely under the support of the C.M.S., and whose they could not exist.

The Anglo-Catholicism.

On the other hand, the Diocese of Southern Rhodesia, Nyasaland and Northern Rhodesia was the beginning of the Union of the Central Africa. Although not prominent among an those of Upper Nile, British and Central Africa, and Nyasaland. These dioceses are strongly Anglo-Catholic in their teaching and practice. Thus, the late Bishop Weston definitely introduced Anglican doctrine, the use of the Book of Common Prayer as part of the rule of the diocese. The Anglican C.M.S. is generally credited under the U.M.C.A. It dioceses are dependent on the U.M.C.A., just as the former four are upon the C.M.S. These four are also dependent on the U.M.C.A. as the Anglican number rather than the U.M.C.A.

At present all these dioceses are separate units, self-governing units attached to the Church of England by the fact that the Archbishop of Canterbury is their spiritual head. It is not proposed that they should be formed into an independent Church in communion with the Church of England.

freed from all legal obligations towards the Mother Church, except such as may arise by its own constitution. The proposal is that to have an archbishop of the Province, who would be the representative of the Archbishop of Canterbury, of the National Assembly, of the National Council of the Anglican Church of the Southern Hemisphere, and of the Anglican Episcopate of America, and that the office of primate should be vacant until such time as the representatives of the four dioceses should be formed.

The chief advantage claimed for this proposal is that of securing unity of action and unity of representation in the relations of the Province with the Mother Church, of the National Assembly, of the National Council of the Anglican Church of the Southern Hemisphere, and of the Anglican Episcopate of America, and that the office of primate should be vacant until such time as the representatives of the four dioceses should be formed.

Dependence.

To the latter there are equal objections. In the first place it is not proposed that the Mother Church when the very existence of the bishops and monasteries is to be provided by one or other of the English dioceses without whose all the work would collapse. On many important questions of policy the diocese must, not the Mother Church, be consulted, and with the consent of the English dioceses. The Church in the United Kingdom, has been treated from the financial independence and, particularly, to a large measure of financial independence, and, particularly, to a large measure of financial independence, and, particularly, to a large measure of financial independence.

On the other hand, the Diocese of Southern Rhodesia, Nyasaland and Northern Rhodesia was the beginning of the Union of the Central Africa. Although not prominent among an those of Upper Nile, British and Central Africa, and Nyasaland. These dioceses are strongly Anglo-Catholic in their teaching and practice. Thus, the late Bishop Weston definitely introduced Anglican doctrine, the use of the Book of Common Prayer as part of the rule of the diocese. The Anglican C.M.S. is generally credited under the U.M.C.A. It dioceses are dependent on the U.M.C.A., just as the former four are upon the C.M.S. These four are also dependent on the U.M.C.A. as the Anglican number rather than the U.M.C.A.

At present all these dioceses are separate units, self-governing units attached to the Church of England by the fact that the Archbishop of Canterbury is their spiritual head. It is not proposed that they should be formed into an independent Church in communion with the Church of England.

LAST FEW DAYS OF SALE. FURTHER SPECIAL REDUCTIONS IN LADIES and GENTLEMEN'S WEAR and HOUSEHOLD GOODS.

Under this year's annual analysis the "Motor" has yielded some very striking figures, showing clearly the trends of certain chassis features such as the six-cylinder engine, coil-spring system and plate chassis. This analysis is based upon approximately up-to-date information on 1929 models, all the individual cars which are available in the British market being taken into account—American, Continental and British.

Multi-Cylinder Engines.

This year's expansion is talking of multi-cylinder engines, and here the figures show 50 per cent. of the models available have six-cylinder engines; last year the figure was 42 per cent. The straight-eight has increased its proportion from 9 per cent. to 14 per cent. in the same period, while the four-cylinder engine has declined to a position representing 28 per cent.

As regards the engines in which engines are being built nowadays the figures show a small change from last year, the proportions being much the same, but both the large size exceeding 1000 cc. and the medium-sized cars of 750 cc. have increased in popularity at the expense of the smaller engine. This is a natural corollary to the increased popularity of size and speed.

The study of the figures relating to valves would seem to indicate that the various systems are fairly evenly distributed in the 1929 models, as the figures do not differ very widely from those of last year.

The above-mentioned slight increase in popularity, and overhead valves retain their lead over side valves. Nevertheless, it should be remembered that several important makes have reverted from overhead valves to side valves in bringing out new six-cylinder cars. The only reason that this has not affected the figures to any great extent is that other makers have at the same time been producing new overhead-valve chassis.

Operating the Valves.

This analysis does not show the means of operation employed, but for overhead valves the push-rod system is probably most popular, despite the fairly large number of new overhead-camshaft power units. Another development worth mentioning is the increasing use of a timing gear placed at the rear end of the crankcase instead of at the front end. There have been no further examples of a central timing gear since the straight-eight cylinder was introduced with a drive of this type last year.

The inlet striking engine development, such a perfection of the increased number of multi-cylinder cars, as the rapid gain in popularity of coil-spring systems. Only 10 per cent. of the models standardized on about 90 per cent. of the chassis available in Great Britain last year the figure was 67 per cent. and this year still suggests are much and much more.

Engineering systems although little change, although pump-and-rod oil-lubrication has gained slightly at the expense of the simple horizontal arrangement. The coil construction of engine and gearboxes has now become universal that this year it was reported hardly worth while to obtain any figures in this connection.

The fact of one of the presents made to Sir Oliver Ailes, the Gold Coast chief, when he visited England a few months ago, has been disclosed by Mr. J. B. Sharpe, Chairman of the Liverpool and Elder Dempster and Co. Ltd. Sir Oliver in a letter to Mr. Sharpe, written after his return to his African realm, said: "You know, I had a case of gin presented to me in London. I brought this case out to the Gold Coast, and on the date that my yachtman returned to the State proceedings were ended by my people. The contents of the twelve bottles were poured out, but my people unanimously agreeing that gin would no longer be their friend."
Sir Oliver adds in his letter that he feels that a very good start has been made towards the reduction of gin drinking on the Gold Coast.

THE KING'S ILLNESS.
The disquieting news received within the last few days regarding the condition of the health of His Majesty the King has caused an anxiety widespread over the whole world. The degree of that anxiety is an indication of the veneration and respect in which His Majesty and the British monarchy is held by all peoples. It is a number of years since the King's health gave rise to any concern and although monarchs, like all human beings, are subject to the frailties of Nature, the wisdom of the latest attack has brought a realisation of the tremendous pressure of the duties which the head of the Empire is called upon to withstand. There is a belief, in all probability well-founded, that His Majesty contracted the disease from which he is at present suffering, during the exposure entailed in his annual attendance at the Comotop to pay his tribute to the memory of those who he respects who he has led, for the Empire he represents, made the fullest sacrifice that man the woman can make. The glow which the news has cast over the East African communities has a personal character through the presence among us at this critical moment of the Her to the Throne, whose acceptance of a position of honor and liability is thus restricted by his holiday which he shares with mil-

The bulletins published from day to day indicate that although His Majesty has made no definite progress, he is holding his own in the severe test of his physical constitution and his struggle will be watched anxiously until the turn of the tide in his favour is reached. To all the members of the Royal Family there will be extended that instinctive and natural sympathy which in times of trouble appears as so fine a characteristic of the British nation, and reveals the personal quality of the regard they entertain for the Sovereign and his family—a sentiment submerged in ordinary circumstances, but the equally instinctive reaction of the national character.

EAST AFRICAN PUBLICITY IN LONDON.

No. 3. The Example of Malaya.

PRACTICAL USES OF A REMARKABLE WINDOW DISPLAY.

Assisting the London Commercial Houses and the Malayan Producer.

In the following article by the Editor of the 'East African Standard,' impressions are given of the very practical help given to production in Malaya by the use of the magnificent range of windows, Malaya House.

The planters and producers of the States are, in fact, provided with a shop window in London.

Why Malaya, a tropical dependency with no white settlement policy, finds it profitable to spend money on publicity in London, is discussed in this article and how public ignorance is being dissipated is disclosed.

THE PARABLE OF THE DRAGON'S BLOOD.

[E. R. Standard Special.]

Some may ask why Malaya is invited to send a series of exhibitions overseas publicity. Malaya is centrally tropical, it has no white settlement policy in the term of the unwieldy, it has no desire to attract the white race, and so it is not in a position to spend money on publicity in London at all. The reason why it does so, and the manner in which it does so, are interesting things to remember when the question of publicity in London for the East African Standard is under consideration.

The primary object of the Malaya States Information Agency is to furnish the public with the attractions of the States, to furnish them with the opportunities they give for investment and the facilities for travel and recreation which they have for the traveller. The great natural resources of the Malaya States are but little known to the general public in this country. It was to disseminate information on these points. Another reason for its existence is to afford information generally on the subject of employment prospects and to bring those districts of available employment in Malaya into touch with employers. The Agency has undertaken to do this in the East African States Government, which does not come into the picture.

A Wonderful Bill. The position of Malaya House, within a series of three from the East African Office, in the corner of Falconer Square, was one of the best. It was a convenient place for the Agent of the Malaya States, who granted me the privilege of discussing the work of his Office, provided the view that there is a case in London to compare in publicity with other countries which are supplied by Malaya House. The fact is that Malaya has an office somewhere in the heart of the City where it has a close touch with the public and those interested in its products. The Malaya Standard, which is published weekly, has a position counted on the Government of the Malaya States, which has been the splendid export building which now houses their general office at 11, Malabar Street (Charing Cross) near Trafalgar Square and the general floor space is a semi-circular range of half a dozen large windows of half an acre, that is the ratio of large num-

EXCISE DUTY SCHEME

A Bill to provide for the levy of an excise duty on matches manufactured in Tanganyika Territory has been drafted for submission to the Legislative Council of Tanganyika. More Petal Theft.

NATIVE'S REVENUE VISIT TO ZANGARI.

Amidst one of the most peaceful of Kingdoms from its peaceful history, the Tanganyika Territory, a native was arrested for the theft of a petal from a flower in the garden of a plantation at the palm plantation, near Mwanza, East Africa.

In yesterday's case a native levy-duty employed by Mr. George H. Jones was seen petal from a flower in the garden of a plantation at the palm plantation, near Mwanza, East Africa. A report of the incident was received by the Chief Commissioner of the Territory of Tanganyika on November 13, from the tax and duty unit. It was stated that the native was seen going into the house of the Chief Commissioner at Mwanza, East Africa, and was seen with the petal. The case was referred to the Chief Commissioner of the Territory of Tanganyika on November 13, from the tax and duty unit.

The second, in a statement to the Chief Commissioner of the Territory of Tanganyika, was that the native was seen with the petal in the house when he was stopped. The native was seen with the petal in the house when he was stopped. The native was seen with the petal in the house when he was stopped.

EAST AFRICAN PUBLICITY IN LONDON. (Continued from page 9) A wide range of data is available to meet enquiries from all angles. There were over 2,000 enquiries in 1927.

The Use of a Window. I discovered an interesting and instructive example of the practical use of the large windowed space. The Malayan Union is a clear indication of this. With British owners' association with the Empire and one window that headed over for a time that organization in order that they might be placed before the public in attractive form, especially the latest issue in which rubber has been put by the manufacturer.

Malaya's only producers and exporters, but the policy of the office, speaking broadly, is to concentrate mainly upon the bulk exports. But there are occasions when other exports from the territories are given the full advertising. Take, for example, the rubber industry. It was desired, during the rubber summer season of the British, to direct the attention of the public to the qualities of the Malayan rubber. To this end, the Malayan rubber was advertised in the "Quality Fruit" and the "Fruit" export trade in a separate column in the trade of Malaya. It was desired, however, that it should be expanded to include the rubber resources of the London Agency. These were called to the aid of the grower. The result was most encouraging.

A London Mission. The Agency is kindly concerned of the value and importance of the window display and it holds in view the possibility of making their windows one of the most attractive sights in London. It is worthy of particular note that since the removal of the office from the situation of Connaught Square, there has been a very large increase in the number of enquiries and the entire district has been fully justified. During eighteen years, unexampled success has followed the use of the window displays. In view of the importance of this propaganda material that the office takes great interest in the window display. There are, of course, other forms of publicity which are commensurate to that of the window display and Malaya participates in them. A part is taken in all exhibitions. It is both useful and from time to time.

TORNADO STRIKES LONDON. Scopes in Windspout Restaurant. THURTEENTH'S BURIEDIAN.

Following yesterday's cables of the storm in England, an article in the "Standard" of London correspondent in an article on the damage done in one tornado.

London which has lately been characterized by such a weather, has become a subject of interest to all concerned with weather experts since on Monday night a typhoon of the worst weather conditions, the ferocity of which was such that many people can ever remember before.

West End Damage. Great damage was done in the West End by the tornado which struck it about 10 o'clock. Roads were ripped off and hung into the street; buildings were blown down; hundreds of sleep windows were smashed and pedestrians were blown higher and thinner as they were pelted by paper. Motor cars and taxis were blown into the streets, and one building was blown down in the West End. In Great Marlborough Street and Lamb Street over 100 shop windows were blown down. In practically every house in the district windows were blown out and serious damage was done to the stock. The roof of the street building in Great Marlborough Street was blown off and Exchange was lifted about six feet.

WEATHER REPORT. Following are the results of observations made at the Meteorological station of the East African Protectorate on Sunday and yesterday. Wind Direction, Max. Min. Rainfall.

Along Regent Street several houses were blown down. The Café Royal three large French windows were smashed and the shop which were being held by party for the admission of goods were forced open, the cars being swept away. The wind blowing through the open doors and windows, the wind blowing into the shops, the shops were blown down. The danger from flying glass was very considerable, and London is said to be concerned on this being a very casual.

KENNEL NOTES

Margaret Collyer

Miss Collyer, Oligi, in whose office correspondence in connection with "Kennel Notes" should be addressed, does not send her name, but is responsible for accuracy of statements made by her which are, in the absence of information supplied by her correspondents.

It difficult to realize in this country that November is well advanced and that at home fairs, hunting has begun in earnest. No more early morning rides to Woodland moor to watch the young entry scuttling round after ignorant sibs and incidentally buying a nice little rabbit hunt on Thursday when for a few moments the eyes of huntsman and whym may be otherwise employed. Serious work amongst the fairs has now commenced but most packs will be in full swing and many weeks past their spring meet.

The following points has been sent me to juggle my memory and recast into my notes. The "Spotted beauty" breed of dogs.

- "Great leg following lovely thing"
- "Rolling and tumbling on every jaw."
- "Tearing at sippers and bones and wings."
- "Wonderful find from ash-bay drawn."
- "Keen and keen ears in the jaws of dew."
- "Lapping her porridge at the water."
- "Cracking a hound, barking at a dog."
- "Braying your trucks upon kitchen floor."
- "Barking a hound when the cockle pops."
- "Faintly barked. Delightful pup."
- "Came to a moment and then came!"
- "Wandering on where the Spotted walk."
- "Breaking for home when the cockle pops."
- "Came and passed and suddenly shy."
- "Faintly barked, Devil-dared puppy."
- "Lone and waddled, and wondering why?"
- "Never smell puppies, your day was done."
- "By the distant corner your kingdom wide."

Miss Minkley did not survive to the effects of the wound, which had healed throughly; the result with a few more weeks, had been more serious. The result would have named some serious interest in what had been done. Nothing to do for a few more weeks. A few hours after death. A few hours after death. A few hours after death. Co. Whether was how to be used by a small group, that offered on the inner surface and extending in some breeds of dogs, the law is scarcely perceptible, but when it becomes formed it is pushed up sometimes quite half across the globe of the eye. An operation is necessary for this and should be performed by a Veterinary Surgeon. The mode of operating is as follows, and there is little or no danger.

It is possible to make an incision in the eye, and the eye should be rendered insensible by a few applications of cocaine. The eye should be explored, a growth to which is attached some soft tissue, which when it is cut away, the eye should be washed with sterile water to stop the bleeding. This sounds very simple, but I have seen the operation performed, and it is not so easy as it sounds.

Mr. Dinkin writes me that she has at last got three young pups into Capt. Heston's kennel. The pups had been bred by Mrs. Dinkin, who had a very nice bitch and a very nice dog, and they were bred together. The pups were born on the 15th inst. and they were all very healthy.

The New Generation.

Youth and the Empire.

The Importance of Travel.

An engaging study of this new generation of youth in the Empire was made in an address before the Hon. the Education Society in the Hotel Victoria, London, on the 11th inst., by the Marquis de Bessol, I.L.D., with Lord Charnock in the chair.

In the course of his address, Dr. Bessol said: "The four pillars of public school education are: study, work, sports, and service."

Let us glance for one moment at the public school boy of today who is meeting the end of his school career. The ideas of the young man of today are different from those of his grandfather. He is brought up in an air of industry and industry, and among the great ideas which he learns, none were greater than those connected with the Dominion. The cricket and football players whom he admires as his heroes are men who are the heroes of England, the heroes of the British Empire, and the heroes of the British Commonwealth.

The years that have passed have done nothing to impair the hero-worship. Agnes school recently I discussed at length, the four corners of a universal globe, and the services and sacrifices as commemorated side by side, with the members of the school. And then two years ago the partial political separation seemed to link the boys of the Empire together, and they were found to link the boys of the Empire together, and they were found to link the boys of the Empire together.

THE FOURTH TRADITION.
The years that have passed have done nothing to impair the hero-worship. Agnes school recently I discussed at length, the four corners of a universal globe, and the services and sacrifices as commemorated side by side, with the members of the school. And then two years ago the partial political separation seemed to link the boys of the Empire together, and they were found to link the boys of the Empire together.

some influence, but one of them is more closely bound by the traditions of the past: the other more by the future. The latter, looking to the future, is more likely to be a man of action. The former, looking to the past, is more likely to be a man of letters. The latter, looking to the future, is more likely to be a man of action. FIRST HAND KNOWLEDGE.
I wish we could expect more of the boys in our chief Public Schools. Boys of 17 or 18, in a country where the boys are only four or five, to go to the front and see the world, to gain first-hand impressions of the world as it is.

London, Nov. 1. October has ended with a red glow in English League football, with 44 games producing 183 goals—just over an average of two per match. The high-water mark was London's 10-0 victory in the first quarter of the season, when seven goals, including one by best Traction North End seven goals to two, and Northampton, with eight goals against Crystal Palace, were the most prolific. Four of the 44 visiting clubs were able to win, but two of these, the two of the Football League champions, were beaten by Welsh United, and Huddersfield Town, ex-champions, lost to Manchester United.

The First Division.

No change, however, took place in the leading positions of the First Division, as the four most prominent clubs were all successful, and Manchester United retained the leadership with a 2-0 win over West Ham United, but their display on their own ground in this match was not impressive, as they missed chance after chance during the first half, when the wind was blowing their way. It did not prove until after the interval, before the finest half of the day was Derby County's 4-0 victory against Bristol City, who were ousted in explosive offside tactics and then appeared twice when their hosts were so generous that they gave a claim. Bedford scored three of his goals, and Manchester played a fine, entertaining game.

Nottingham, who are making an impression down in the Second Division, seem to be specialising in "offside" tactics. They played last week with Chelsea at Stamford Bridge, and they played last week at Huddersfield, and as a result the Pressors slipped down to the bottom of the County. South Hill City were under a curse.

Staying at Dar-es-Salaam for Three Days.

THE KING'S CONDITION NO WORSE.

Problem of Conduct of His Duties During Convalescence Being Considered.

Dar-es-Salaam, November 29. I understand the Prince of Wales received at Ryvu a formal visit from the Duke of York stating that the King is much better.

Consequently, the Prince will remain at Dar-es-Salaam for three days. If the improvement in His Majesty's health is maintained the Prince's plans indicate that he will proceed to Burma and to Livingston.

H.M.S. "Enterprise" is here at daybreak. The Prince stopped the Royal train at Ryvu and liked three miles with members of his staff for exercise.

Dar-es-Salaam's Welcome. The Prince of Wales arrived here at 8 p.m. last night. He was met by His Excellency the Governor and drove to Government House. The townpeople gave a rousing cheer as the Prince drove off and broke through the police in their enthusiasm.

It is understood H.M.S. Enterprise is at present lying in the harbor.

At Dar-es-Salaam, the Governor's yacht "Araani" is standing by.

The Locust Campaign.

Destroying Locusts in Kenya.

Effective and Ineffective Methods.

Recently a report was issued by the Department of Agriculture on the control of Locusts and on the locusts of the East African Standard. There remains on the scene a summary of the methods used in the last campaign given below:

DRIVING INTO TRENCHES.

Suitable only where the land is open and where the day is bright and hot. Requires a number of men, 50 to 60 yards under European direction. A variable percentage of locusts escape. Laborious and not efficient.

THE USE OF GALVANISED IRON.

This was erected in front of the swarms and the swarms were driven across a narrow gauge wire fence. An extension of quickly erected iron-wire was used in the roads driven into the ground enclosed a swart. This is not done with. Numbers escaped, however.

ROLLING.

Useful only on level land where the insects were very abundant.

TRAPPING IN LAID BUSH.

Has the advantage of concentrating a swarm in a tight massing to be destroyed.

BURNING WITH PETROL SPRAYS.

These sprays were improved out of petrol cans using an oil valve and a copper pipe drawn to a fine jet. Air was pumped in and petrol came out of the jet at a fine stream in conjunction with bursts of parallel from a pressure pump. The flames were secured in the bushes in which locusts kept. Method rather dangerous and useful only in the evening and early morning.

BUSH HARROWING.

Very effective if done by a number of harrows closely following in relation.

SPRAYING.

By hand or by motor spray. Most suitable as the effect is continuous. May be practised for a longer time than any other method, under a greater variety of conditions and in more extent. Use of oil or kerosene to a gallon of water. Most important that the water and mixing in addition to the oil be thorough. The spraying of vegetation which is a lot of the swarms will do it as experience shows, not very satisfactory.

We sprayed grass upon which locusts were feeding in the hope that the locusts would be poisoned. This was not done and led to a false report. We found that the spray upon dried and laid to rest deposit. Swarms would nibble round such patches. We also found that where grass was sprayed in a dry or hot area, the locusts entering the sprayed area would move rapidly through it. In one day deeper through and out of a lot of sprayed ground had a more deep forming a dense mass on the opposite side. One evening depositing a dense mass on the opposite 100 per cent.

CONTACT SPRAYING.

The most satisfactory. Sprayer locusts which approached with a power jet such as a hand pump (locust pump) will give it energy used or use a manual pump from a motor truck. Lights may be used at night if necessary. Sprays are needed where they occur so as not to be missed. In the early morning the swarms which were not destroyed may be sprayed.

CONTACT DUSTING.

Dust from the contains on the evening on swarms and again in the morning. Particularly effective if there had been a night rain. Dust applied by a machine which puffs over 20 yards was not so effective as the percentage of swarms.

BEATING.

This is very effective under proper supervision on young locusts. Old motor fly-roller better use most useful and if a young locust is not found a swarm there which swarms will be found holding on the bank after the beating is finished. They may be readily driven off and blown at once. The method is to have a circle of boys surround a swarm and drive it inward and when dense enough to beat the locusts thoroughly and systematically. Use of boys is well trained.

is very effective. Mr. Wainland in the morning said that there were very few locusts at that time but that they were very numerous.

BAIT.

Bait was made of 10 parts of water to 1 part of sugar. Mr. Wainland said that the bait was made by mixing 10 parts of water to 1 part of sugar. The bait was made by mixing 10 parts of water to 1 part of sugar. The bait was made by mixing 10 parts of water to 1 part of sugar.

Wireless Topics.

Care of Receiving Sets.

The Component Parts.

The following is the second of a series of articles contributed by "Q.R.M." on the working and care of wireless receiving sets.

The actual production of high frequency waves or oscillatory currents which have the transmitting circuit do not interest us in these articles, but only the oscillating currents flowing in an aerial, which produce electric waves. It is the job of the receiving set to convert these electric waves into audible sounds. The first essential function of the receiver is to be in tune with the transmitter and whenever a transmitter has an antenna and a condenser, the essential for producing such currents, so must a receiver have an antenna and a condenser. The receiver has an aerial tuning, inductance and aerial tuning condenser. Inductance we may term a coil of wire and a condenser can be likened to a jar capable of holding a certain amount of static electricity.

The frequency of the oscillations depends upon the size of the coil of wire and the size of the jar or condenser in an oscillatory circuit. If you wish to keep the frequency constant and reduce the inductance or coil of wire, you have to increase the capacity of the condenser; if you reduce the capacity of the condenser, by making the jar smaller, you have to increase the inductance by adding more wire.

The Condenser.

A few words about a condenser now will save a good deal of explanation later on. The aerial brings a minute current into the condenser. If the condenser is oscillating at Radio Frequency, the oscillating current does not flow in one direction. It starts to decrease and increase until maximum. When it starts to decrease and then it starts to go in the opposite direction and is recharged once more, then it starts to go in the opposite direction again trying to maximum and falling back to zero. Oscillating current is doing this continuously. The other kind of current known as direct current does not change direction. In a valve receiving set we have direct current in one low tension and high tension batteries. A condenser consists of two sets of plates, one of metal, and usually consists of tin, mica, shellac, glass or oil. If you put the two plates of a condenser across a battery there is a momentary flow of current into the condenser when it is "charged," or filled. The plate becomes positively charged and the other negatively charged. When these are charged no further flow of current takes place. Now, on the other hand, what happens with an oscillating current? I am going to call one set of plates A and the other B. In the case of direct current or current flowing in one direction, A becomes positive and B negative. In oscillating current the direction of the current changes and the charge is reversed, B becoming positive and A negative. In oscillating current, the charge on one plate, in an aerial circuit, is always reversing. It is continually changing, the charge on one set of plates changing and the charge on the other set of plates changing.

Charging.

The meaning of "charging" may not be quite clear. When a plate is negatively charged it contains an excess number of electrons. When it is positively charged it contains an excess number of ions. Electrons are negative particles, electricity and ions positive. If the first set of plates is negatively charged, electrons are driven away from the second and a spark of current takes place in the circuit connected to it. As soon as the first set of plates is again negatively charged, a spark of current in the opposite direction is sent to the second set of plates. A flow of electrons is sent through a circuit connected to one set of plates will cause an equal and opposite flow in a circuit connected to the other set. It would appear as if alternating current pass through a condenser, though actually they do not. The net result and the function of a condenser is that it stops direct current and allows oscillating current to pass.

Detecting.

Now we will pass on to the method of "detecting" oscillating current and converting it into sound. I hope that it is realized by now by my readers that signals or sound waves are not picked up on the aerial, but those of high frequency oscillating electric currents which, if not high frequency, would be impossible to the ear. Last week I explained how a crystal receiver was tuned by moving the slider up and down until the correct amount of wire, or, as it has now been mentioned, has been found. Your capacity of making up the oscillatory circuit is there, though there is an antenna. I will not explain where it is at the moment, but the majority of sets have a variable condenser which is constantly in "parallel" with the inductance, and it is no real practice in tuning to vary the inductance, but by the capacity by means of a variable condenser.

The Phone.

I have certainly gone into the question of detecting. I will explain now the telephone part. A telephone or rather a pair of telephones are usually connected to wireless receiving sets to audible sounds.

A telephone receiver consists of an electro-magnet and a diaphragm. The diaphragm is a small piece of metal which vibrates and that usually sends good sound into the ears of the listener. The diaphragm is supported by the coil of wire and telephone set is held just above the diaphragm. The magnet is made of iron and is made of wire round each of the poles. If a current is sent through these poles so as to create a magnet that they maintain the same direction, the diaphragm will be pulled closer to the magnet. If the current, however, flows in the opposite direction the magnet will be repelled and the diaphragm will not be attracted. It is clear to the magnet as in the normal position with no current in the coil of wire, the diaphragm moves sufficiently quickly it will not be pulled near, vibrating columns of air, which are audible to the ear.

The Governor's Mission.

His Excellency the Governor of Kenya, Sir Edward Grigg, leaves Nairobi this morning on a visit to the East African Territories for the Colonias and with the Governor of Tanganyika, in conference, the recommendations of the Clear Union Committee. It is little over a year since he came back and during those years he has had an opportunity of examining the possibilities and the possibilities of their future development with the definite belief that changes are inevitable and their direction only in the light of the present consideration. The views of every section of the whole community official and non-official have been gathered by a Committee and evidence has been taken in London from circles interested commercially and politically in East African development. Nevertheless little or nothing has been done regarding the probable course of the recommendations. The only information we have been vouchsafed is that the Report will be published simultaneously in London and East Africa and the probable date has been given as the middle of January. It is apparent that the date of publication will depend entirely on the course of the discussion which takes place in London but East Africa will be kept in the picture as little delay as possible should take place. The publication of the report will be followed immediately by a period of intensive work in East Africa. It is believed that the rest of the period of the absence of the East African Commission from their posts cannot be ascertained but we believe that if the Colonial Office is wise, it will delay their departure from London until the end of the year. The publication of the recommendations, we believe it is, the best instance of the administration should be in some degree with regard to the fact that they are being considered and when public opinion will require all the help and guidance it can receive. We believe, too, that unless the Government is satisfied with the proposals, it will not be possible to proceed with the recommendations. It is not possible to say whether the proposals will be accepted or not, but it is certain that the Government will not be able to proceed with the recommendations unless it is satisfied with the proposals. It is not possible to say whether the proposals will be accepted or not, but it is certain that the Government will not be able to proceed with the recommendations unless it is satisfied with the proposals.

of the ultimate benefits that would have accrued from the inclusion of London. The Governor of Kenya has other important subjects to discuss with the British Government. RESIGNATION OF INDIAN TOWN COUNCILOR.

A Transval "Ghost."

POLICEMAN WHO "TOOK TO HIS BEDS."

Protest Against Action of Government.

THE MUNICIPALITIES BILL.

As a sequel to the discussion by the Nairobi Town Council last week on the application by Geoffrey B. J. M. (Magistrate) to the Government of the new Municipalities Bill, one of the Indian representatives, Mr. J. M. M. M., has tendered his resignation. He explains in a letter to the Mayor of Nairobi that he has done so as a protest against the action of Government in hastily applying the new Bill against the advice of the old Town Council.

The letter, dated yesterday, reads—

"I have very carefully considered the question of continuing to work on the Interim Council and my way to co-operate with you through sub-committees. Unfortunately the action of the Government in applying the Interim Council under the new Ordinance and regarding the continuation of the Council under the new Ordinance has rendered in the resolution of the Council that the Bill should be laid on the table. I have had to continue the old Council under the old Ordinance till the new Bill has made the position very difficult.

"This resolution was unanimously passed with very little opposition from the Indian community to gain confidence and assure those that there was no intention on the part of the Indian Young Commission to ever read an ordinance which would undo the Indian Council. I have therefore signed the new Ordinance in my operation, at a moment's notice, and the nature of Draft Rules reached with their letter. They tended on the contrary to highlight the fact established by the Indian community.

"I recognize that Municipal Bill is a matter of great urgency in the town and the Indian one is very anxious to participate in anything which would be for the progress of the Colony. I recognize that, throughout these years on the Council and in the Round Table Conference, the non-official Indian members have displayed a constant and co-operative and understanding attitude. It is entirely wrong to say that the Indian Councils by applying obstructive tactics are fighting for delay. The Bill will be published in a few weeks time, and in many could have been done by deferring the application."

FINANCE AND PRODUCTION

To the Editor, "E.A. Standard."—Your correspondent, "Mad Watie," has registered his considerable no on many important subjects, but there are certain lines in his letter upon which I wish to comment.

Assuming that the Committee in the future rely rather on what the Farmer can produce in his own Country, it is clear that the Farmer who is engaged in the production of food crops, is being asked to produce more than he is capable of doing.

Presently, I have no doubt that the Farmer is being asked to produce more than he is capable of doing. This is a very serious matter, and it is one which should be given the most careful consideration.

"Mad and Watie" mentions several of these points, but it is not possible to discuss them all in detail. It is sufficient to say that the Farmer is being asked to produce more than he is capable of doing.

Your Civil Servant: How do we know this? He seems to be a vulnerable target for all and sundry pointed shafts. If these houses be, in general, well and soundly built, they should be able to stand up to any and every kind of attack.

What? Yes? It is the eternal question of the ages but this time it is not the "Mad and Watie" who is asking the question.

WIRELESS TOPICS
Care of Receiving Sets.

frequently which when struck can be an "diaphragm" vibrator. To make a wireless signal audible in a telephone, the high frequency conditions must be changed into a direct current to work the telephone. We connect an inducting circuit to a transformer and a resistor of current. This is called rectifying and a detector is added.

As I have said a crystal set into consideration, I must take up its position as my first example. It is the property of a crystal and metal, or metal and metal, of having that of an alternating current applied to the crystals will cause a current to pass through them very low and very slow passing through the other way. In exactly the same way as we use crystals. You pump air into it and down on some of the crystal waves on a kind of "valve". This is why the wireless valve is so tricky. It allows current to flow in one direction. If you put a crystal detector in the circuit and have to series with a pair of telephones which have a condenser across its terminals, although it is not necessary at the winding of the telephones themselves but necessary at the winding of the telephones themselves and passing through an oscillating current in phase with the current of the condenser half the period of the wave, you get the current will be changed to half period and the other negative. This change will send a current through the windings of the telephones and cause a noise known as the diaphragm. The action of a detector is to change alternating current into direct current.

Forced, such as speech and sound, as a rapid variation of frequency and is in the frequency of the diaphragm is pulled back and set at a certain value to make music or speech heard.

When a speaker steps into a telephone, the voice on touching the plates of the detector is converted into an electric current and it remains so electric current through the whole process of winding through the telephones, the transmitting circuit, the other, the receiving circuit and the call the diaphragm vibrator, causing sound to be heard.

Care of Phones.

As I have discussed the working of a telephone a few words on the care of telephones which might be useful to readers. Telephone wires are delicate and they do not like rough handling. It is bad for them to be dropped so often on the ground, they are not to be neglected. If you have a magnifying glass you will see the magnifying glass becomes discoloured which take their sensitivity. It is bad for them that one of the tape has some red covering on it, usually the magnifying glass is made of copper or brass covering.

For those with valve sets it should be noted that this set, or positive, should be connected to the positive output terminal which is connected to high impedance in the case of a vacuum tube set, and is to be connected in the opposite direction and in the same case the magnifying glass be their strength.

The diaphragm of this metal case should not be peeked about with a pencil or lost in anyway. It is also advisable to wipe the set over for the diaphragm to receive rust and is liable to other use.

Phones may "rattle": this is usually caused by a loose diaphragm, and the best cure for a rattle is to take the diaphragm out and see if the rattle is there. The cap and round the edge of the cap are in place, and not cracked up. Great care should be taken with these washers in replacing them. Screw the cap up well.

If telephone have become weak it is quite a good tip to take away the inside water tank or covering the diaphragm receiver to the magnets, though, of course, the diaphragm will not touch the magnets. If the removal of this water does cause this, carefully cut out a number of paper, inside the existing water.

Care of Variable Condensers.

I am writing a word about variable condensers this week because wireless enthusiasts would like to know by this means how to take care of their condenser.

If a telephone has become weak it is quite a good tip to take away the inside water tank or covering the diaphragm receiver to the magnets, though, of course, the diaphragm will not touch the magnets. If the removal of this water does cause this, carefully cut out a number of paper, inside the existing water.

The variable condenser is dirt fairly regularly, for dust collect between the vanes can cause a crackle. This is best done with a piece of clean, wet flannel paper but the woolly type, and especially the vanes.

I have been having trouble lately with my condenser. My condenser has a steel ball as a bearing for the moving vanes and when I look them down to cure a crackle I found that they had become rusted due to the wet weather.

Damp is not a good thing for a condenser. It is a good tip to have a little oil on the vanes of the condenser. When lubricating on short waves, condensers should be oiled between the vanes. Check them regularly with a positive "pig tail" contact. When removing contacts from a set take great care that the vanes are not bent for one they are, it is a tricky job to get them true again. Add always remember that should the vanes of a reaction condenser short, you will be shorting your H.T. battery which is by no means a good thing to do.

Broadcasting Notes.

It will interest D. H. historians, which means those who listen for distant stations, that the J. M. station at Sainsbury, and I quite expect in a short time that it will be quite inaudible here, and it remains so for about a month or two.

A reader told me he could not get ANR in 15 meters because his aerial was not high enough. I heard him the other day on 17A meters, but he said that he had not touched on this wave regularly although he is subscribed to the service. I have not heard him since. I was good and clear but I am afraid I could not enter into it with enthusiasm because it was not quite as strong as usual but he was not feeling badly.

The Dealers.

This week I visited Messrs. Bullock and Roy and was very pleased to see that they have added the freight to their new Crystal set which I have already mentioned as being quite suitable for receiving L.O. in Nairobi and the other parts.

They stock the Geophone set which is a very good set, inexpensive, and one that can be depended upon. The timing is done by means of a variable condenser which is of a good type. It is a very compact little set some 9 inches by 5 inches and about an inch and a half high. It is very useful and allows for the adjustment of the sets which.

They have a very varied stock of components all of reputable make. There is everything there to build up a four valve set. They stock a large assortment of valves for all purposes and I understand here are some of the "Old man" condensers both low tension and high tension were there. Geophones, variable condensers I like; they have now slow motion dials which work the same way as the condenser. Some slow motion dial work the opposite way to the condenser and want a little practice to get into the way of.

On the whole their stocks were very good and show great thought in their selection. I was a little disappointed not to see complete valves in stock but I understand that they manufacture sets to order and have every facility for making any type of set.
