SOLICITORS AND THE PUBLIC.

In old countries, with the proprofessions have found it necessary to band themselves into a body for profession has instituted a body called be obtained. We can prowith all matters affecting the profession generally. Accountants and action generally. Accountants and actuaries have also their incorporated society and the Law Society deals with those engaged in the profession of the Law. These societies are not formed for the object of prosecuting members for criminal offences but for mutual protection and the protection of the public against any member of of the public against any member of their society who indulges in malprac-

Malpraetice among lawyers of ourse includes criminal offences but it also includes contraventions of a certain code of morals framed by the members of the Law Society, a contravention of which codes cannot be regarded as a criminal offence but is a required Stang with the words regarded as unworthy of an honours Per per able profession. We have heard onest relicitors described as the sait of the earth and the de is one with which we are in hearty accord and we are thankful to say honest solicitor, owing largel to the Law Society, is in very great predominance over his shady colle-ague. So careful has the Law Society been in the framing of its code that solicitors which come under it's power are forbidden even to act as commission agents from the fear that any possible abuse might arise. It surers and lend money at cent per ent, provided of course they are doubt the Law Society will also put a stop to this practice, as it leaves o large a loophule for dishonest ecessitous. One of the strange monualies of law is that a solicitor can safel, write to an alleged debtor demanding immediate payment of money due either to himself or his clients plus certain cost (which do not exist at the time of writing; with threats of legal proceedings and exposure, it however, any layman were to attempt the same thing and threaten to expose a debtor to his neighbours he would probably be found guilty of being a rascal. a solicitor has a very considerable pull, for some people, will pay a solicitor's demand whether it be a proper demand or not and will also pay the costs (2) rather than enter the portals of a Court of Law. Such Last week we referred to the fact that the Solicitors in East Africa had not formed themselves into a Society and we have approached the Crown Advocate with a view of ascertaining whether or no, he was in a position to investigate charges brought to fin notice by the Public alleging breach part of Solicitors in British East Africa. We found that he has not Excusor—The Bank grants Drafts on Africa. We found that he has not he Bind Office apadistrances at the current that power but that the power rests falls direct to the payors when requested. Solicitor or cancel his licence to practice if the charges made are of a nature to cause such drastic measures This is by no means satisfactory as we consider the last people to hear African standard of misconduct or trickery on the part laymen would make their complaints freely to a Law Society, which would thoroughly investigate before taking. any action whereas they would he sitat about fighting purely for the public good alone and unaided. Possibly now that we have put forward the view that the public should have adequate protection in this country, as the public has in nearly every other country in the British Empire, something may be done. We believe if the Judges of the High Court were to call our gress of civilization, people following practising Solicitors together and assist them in forming a society, which society would be prepared to investigate any charges of unprofesprotection against the malpractices signal conduct brought to it's notice of their own number. The principal sources of aluminium are silicates of alumina known as beauxite and cryolite. It would be possible to obtain, aluminium from rubies and sapphires which are nearly alumina but beauxite and cryolite are the recognized source for commercial Now there is every reas to expect to find beauxite in B. E. A. because a very considerable propor-tion of our land is composed of silicate of alumina. There is hard-ly a country rock in which spinel rubies and garnets do not appear In appearance beauxite is a dirty white, yellowish or sometimes redish brown earthy matter. It, sometimes is made up of little grain's cemented together and sometimes at appears e a very light clay. In British East Africa we can expect to find it colour-ed by iron exide.
