East Africa's Place in Continent's Destiny.

General Smuts, who is Rhode: Lecturer this year, has selected Africa as his subject. in the first of the series, which is published below General Smuts devoted his attention to white settlement in East

The great Imperial Statesman supported wholeheartedly the policy of co-ordinated and accelerated land settlement throughout British Africa as the soundest contribution the Empire can make to the civilisation of the African peoples.

He attacked the criticisms of the school which believes in the policy of "Africa for the African", pointed to the success of settlement in Rhodesia as a proof of the wisdom of the aim of Cecil Rhodes and urged the application of a progressive policy in the

A notable part of General Smuts' lecture was his plea for the provision of adequate land for the African races, the failure to provide which was, in his view, the cardinal mistake made in South Africa.

own experience that mining is the most potent agency for the settle ment of a country. He therefore welcomed mining, both for itself and for what it led to in the way of general development. It is not unreasonable to expect that min ing will continue to play a great part in the future settlement and part in the future settlement and development of Africa. Southern Africa is beyond doubt one of the most highly mineralised areas of the world.

In the race between the Central and East African States the lead will probably soon be taken by Northern Rhodesia. This Cin-derella among African Colonies is the lucky possessor of enormous copper deposits, besides other mineral resources which are only now beginning to be scratched. It a not improbable that within the is not improvable that while the next ten years Northern Rhodesia will have a mining field second only to that of the Witwatersrand. Rhodes's work in Rhodesin did not stand alone. Circumstances seemed to favour his settlement policy farther north; the idea of European settlement throughout Eastern Africa seemed to find a ready response. The British Government encouraged settlers to occupy British East Africa, and built the Uganda Railway to faci-litate occupation. The German Government, farther south, copied population in the Usambaras, the slopes of Kilimanjaro, rous Mount Meru and elsewhere. all appearances the settlement of a white population on the highlands of Eastern Africa seemed not only to be Rhodes's policy, but also the British and the German policy. After the Great War the British Government established soldier's settlements on most favoural terms in Kenya, and apparently regarded such settlements as a satisfactory way of dealing with

At the beginning of this week wo published for the information of the coffee industry a comprehen sive statement of the present mar-ket tendencies by one of the pro-minent firms in London interested in the East African crop. The statement was intended to convey to the industry and to Kenya particularly a warning. The effects of the describt of too nest two water ! quality of the coffee placed on the narket a few weeks ago and with little of attractive quality offer-ing buyers have been turning attention to Costa Rica. Offerings have been very small and tion buyers have only been filling is the most important in the position and what has been expected and feared for a long time is threatening now. The position briefly is that the production time heisely is that the production of the control today, a speech assumed to the control today, and the control today of the control t of soffee is outstripping the preproportions, Statistics suggest that at the end of the current season

FINANCIAL POSITION OF ZANZIBAR.

Island Living Well Within Its Income.

A REPLY TO CRITICS:

Surplus Balances Reinvested in Sound Improvements.

Mr. W. Grazebrook of Zanzibar, member of a commercial house intimately connected with the development of the Island, replies in the following important article to criticisms of the financial position of Zanzibar.

He points out that Zanzibar has consistently lived within its income and such portions of its surplus balances as have been used for public works like roads and harbour improvements, are regarded by the community as sound reinvestments.
