A NATIVE POLICY FOR AFRICA.

They are also acquiring a sense of responsibility, and when necessary to lead, they feel able to do so.

After the new spirit has been inculcated, the time will come when the African will be able to take his place in the world of the Union, and to be regarded as a full-fledged citizen.

The new departure is most far-reaching and has come into effect throughout the whole of Africa.

With a knowledge must be provided to a man which will enable him to maintain in the future the status which he has acquired.

A knowledge of anthropology would have enabled the minority to differentiate between what was barbaric and degrading in the native culture.

The Sacred Trust

ELDORET CALEDONIAN DINNER. Mr. O'Shea Foreshadows Opposition to Native Lands Bill Changes.

At the conclusion, Mr. Newton fell confident that the land we live in is on the eve of a new period of development and prosperity, in which the best of all times is ahead, and that all will give their aid to further the welfare of Kenya. (Applaud.)

Mr. O'Shea, in reply to the most eloquent and best appreciation of the complaint paid by the society, moved the adjournment of the evening. He welcomed the resolution of the Caledonian Society, and was very glad to see that the lead notes now find their adherents sufficiently well to be able to attend in the numbers of the Scotch friends. As a business and industrial country, the Caledonian Society was not only the headquarters of a thriving agricultural community, but it was a very busy one.

It is thought that the naming of the new province of which 'Kenya' was designated, was a very happy inspiration, combining as it did the districts to the north and south of the River, and by a happy coincidence, the name of the Caledonian Society was not only the headquarters of a thriving agricultural community, but it was a very busy one.

The resolution of Kenya has always maintained that their aim was to be a self-governing, self-sustaining, self-reliant, and self-respecting community. They did not want to be a colony, but they did want to be a people.

Mr. O'Shea's speech was a very interesting one, and he was very glad to see that the lead notes now find their adherents sufficiently well to be able to attend in the numbers of the Scotch friends.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the Government of Tanganyika should be so anxious to improve the harbours of this coast.
