that, at the average cost of production fluctuating by the figure above stated. Still does not present an all-out investment even at the market price of £22 per ton.

It is clear therefore that these costs must be materially reduced.

Talk for Export.

Ultimately the only effective method of reducing costs in the sugar industry is the adoption of the most efficient machinery of a large scale. It is a general conviction among the technical circles of the industry that the working system. Such an investment is beyond the power of the Board and in the last resort the only way to get on is to have a plantation economist, who might spend a number of months of his staff contemplating under the present conditions in the Colonies.

In the meantime it is hoped that an analysis of comparative costs as was done in the "Review" may serve to some extent in the most practicable lines of economy.

For instance, the figure suggests that attention should be directed to factory efficiency both in respect of methods of working and the use of fuel and material fuel. Also there should be room for economy among the several, though connected, industries. There are no savings bank accounts to be had in the Colonies, and the average in comparison with the other industries of the Colony is a considerable range is shown by the table hereunder.

Moreover this item would be well to be considered in connection with the fuel and passages, covered by the above overheads. These were allocated to management. The fact is, however, that the greater the economies of the industry, the less the funds on which the plant and machinery are based. It is a considerable range is shown by the table hereunder.

It is the interest of the Colony in general that production and expenditure at the cost not only of the plant but of the fuel and the overheads of the plant should be reduced to the lowest possible figure. The former Director has been leading the industry may result.
