AN UNPLEASANT SURPRISE.

Effect Upon Cost of Living in Great Britain.

The decision by the British Government to depart from the gold standard came as an unpleasant surprise after the desperate efforts to balance the Budget. This action was caused by the heavy withdrawals of gold from the Bank of England during the preceding few weeks.

considered probable that the cost of living will go up, as a result, to some extent, although it is anti-cipated that the rise will not be more than 7½ per ceah during the coming six months. Dertain of the leading newspapers, however, strongly wel-ceme the change on the ground that the export trade will improve.

cent developments have complicated the political stuntion more than ever. It was anticipated during mail week that a general election would take place either in October or November.

issue of the election had not been decided when the last air mail left Britain, but it was expected that a joint-appeal would be issued by Mr. Mac-donald, Mr. Baldwin and Sir John Simon. Mr. Snowden it is stated is anticus to retire, and Sir Herbert Samuel is opposed to tariffs.

The Labour Party are anxious for an election and will appeal to the country on the grounds that they will restore the cuts in the Services and uneupployed benefit, and will raise the equivalent by further taxation of the rich.

With regard to the reduction of wages, this is widespread and each community is suffering as much the other. "I doubt very much as to whether this kind of strike in this country can be successful. If people go on strike like this, the employers will perhaps engage native labour which will lead to a sudden end of the strike and consequent hardship to the strikers.
