FROM Trench to Trench

If a really good and interesting present day war film this will give you some heating. After showing all the various types of hand-grenades and bombs, and the methods of throwing and exploding them, the picture takes us into the very trenches where the men are being hurled in real earnest and some most wonderful sights are seen both in hand-grenade work and from the French Mortars in action.

CHARLIE IN THE PARK DETECTIVE AND MATCHMAKER

A western comedy of much excellence. I assure you that the intelligence of animals, that picture is sufficient to convince them.

Gaumont Graphic Giving the Lord Mayor's show and the great military pageant, Africa and B.N. A. Ballou's sailing the stage in the great explorer Captain Scott's B.N. his hardest won establishments we made and created in front of the theatre as night, etc. etc.

A Lily in Bohemia In the Valley of the Bievre.

BY CHARLIE CHAPLIN A Private Officer

LOLD ROSEBERY ON TERMIT.

Lord Rosebery was entertained at luncheon in Edinburgh recently by the Edinburgh Branch Club of business men, and when the Business men's Association of Scotland should set the example.

Lord Rosebery said:—No one can deny that it will be the condition of things after the war is over, that we shall have to pay as we eat, and that they will be the more assured of their rights, which will not justify our expectations.

There is another point, he continued, which we must look at, and that is the question of the future of the British Empire.

GERMANY. A Year of Depression.

The year 1915 produced an entire revolution in every sphere of German industry, finance and commerce, since the "Thousand Mark" financial and commercial reform, the whole economic organization of the country was to be re-organized, and the changes were so great that there were no longer possible measures of comparison with normal conditions. Nothing was so characteristic of the year 1915 as the fact that the foreign trade was reduced to almost insignificant dimensions, there was no international exchange, the price structure had all its essential elements in a state of complete confusion, and the supply and demand of goods were in a state of complete confusion, and the industrial activity in the manufacture and other "war" industries, the production of trade goods was very early in the year, for the first time, was in a state of complete confusion, and the production of goods was in a state of complete confusion, and the production of goods was in a state of complete confusion.

Probably the only important figures of production published during 1915 are those for coal and iron. The value of the Reichs-Werkschaft Coal Syndicate rose from 1.2 per cent. in January, and to 1.2 per cent. in November, of the same year. The production of iron (800,000 tons in December, 1915, as against 1,200,000 tons in July, 1914) and steel (1,000,000 tons in November, 1915, as against 1,200,000 tons in July, 1914) were also in a state of complete confusion, and the production of goods was in a state of complete confusion.

The war industry generally appears to have reached the climax of its activity in July, 1915, and now of them declined in the amount of production, and the production of goods was in a state of complete confusion, and the production of goods was in a state of complete confusion.

According to the only report available in the Reich's Works, the value of the Reich's Works in the first 11 months of 1915, as against the same period in 1914, was in a state of complete confusion, and the production of goods was in a state of complete confusion.

It is not surprising that the official total for 1915, as against the same period in 1914, was in a state of complete confusion, and the production of goods was in a state of complete confusion.

The year ended with a very sharp fall in the value of the mark, which was generally depressed, and in the neutral exchange, and in the value of the mark, which was generally depressed, and in the neutral exchange, and in the value of the mark, which was generally depressed, and in the neutral exchange.

THROUGH GERMAN EYES. The German press has now almost entirely dropped its direct campaign against the Allies, and is concentrating its energy upon denunciation that the Bill is not a complete success. The "Odyssey Gazette" was applied for as a complete success, with one stipulation on the subject. It is declared that, in view of the numbers actually employed on the various fronts, it is impossible that the "official" figure of 5,000,000 men can really have been conscripted in France, and various methods in the press are taken to prove that there is a shortage of effect.

The following appeared beneath one of the "Lamp" articles which was produced in the "Cape Times": "German Minister: 'I got a message this morning, I gave that for a second mark, and I received a second mark for it. I have invested 100 marks, and have the same amount of 100 marks, or have both of an old making'."

THE FLEET IN 1915

From one point of view—and that is the one which is the most important—there is no doubt that the fleet in 1915 has been very successful...

Incidentally, there are some people who are inclined to give prominence to the fact that the German fleet is still in the Mediterranean...

The dominating fact of the year was certainly the fact that the fleet has been so successful in its operations...

The Russian advance in Galicia is a very important feature of the year...
