IT has always been our endeavour to treat our country customers with special consideration in view of the long distance from which they have to obtain their supplies. During the war, it was impossible to do this to our satisfaction, although every attempt was made to despatch goods with promptness.

We have pleasure, however, in announcing that we have now our full staff. The Mail Order Department is treated as a distinct Department under the charge of a competent manager, and customers may now rely upon having their orders executed with the minimum of delay. Any goods not in stock are always procured locally, when possible.
