PROFESSOR'S FAITH.

The mystery of Mars remains unsolved.

Strong signals in a kind of Morse code were sent to the earth from the planet Mars in America, and continue to be received in London, working on a wave-length outside the radio but inside the broadcasting station band.

Through this is not the first time the mysterious "Mars" has been noticed—Mars is usually being investigated by "Mars" in the form of a "Mars" which is not to be taken seriously.

Dr. Richard Gregory asked what he thought about the "Mars" signals, answered "Astronomers as a body are not concerning themselves overmuch with these manifestations."

The French astronomer, M. Camille Flammarion, is interpreted as: "The appearance of the world is absolutely surprising." He asserts it is impossible to present to communication with Mars, though the progress of science may enable us one day to put messages to the planet.

He is so convinced as he was 40 years ago that Mars is inhabited, though not by beings like ourselves, and he bases his theory that Mars has an existence which compares with ours on the fact that life on earth is sustained by oxygen, which our atoms release to exist on Mars.

UNDERTAKING LABOUR PROBLEM.

The Government of Uganda has long been living, by circumstances, to investigate the labour problem in the Protectorate. In Kenya also, we have a labour problem which is now subject to investigation. It is not nearly so acute as that in Uganda where several hundred estimates have been threatened with revocation to banish some serious action to be taken. The Government of Uganda has chosen his ground well. He has called possible attention to the labour conditions, as he sees things, at a moment when there is in the Colony a Parliamentary Commission with the special task, at least though not the only one, of considering the lines of the transport; of the Indian from the point of view of the Home Government and the local standards as well.

The action of the Government of Uganda and the revocation of the workmen of the present system of task employment will not be without their effect on the same. It is to be hoped that we have done so that they will be brought to see that other employes in other colonies need be considered, even in Uganda. But they will only obtain the full story when they come to Kenya and we can tell them in the speech which will be made by the Government of Uganda which is being made by the country in its regard of the labour problem in Kenya. Lord Delamater tells us will be discussed when the report of the Economic and Finance Committee be made available.

It is maintained in Kenya, and it will be maintained until proof to the contrary is forthcoming, that the present cotton-growing policy of the Government of Uganda is dangerous to the future because the impression is given to the African, directly or indirectly, that the main inducement a quantity of cotton to the common export pool, his residence in the State have ceased. It is contended, and that the comparatively easy living which is provided by the industry of cotton is in the end, harmful to native character which requires the stimulus of hard work and his dignified industry to overcome the indolence of nature which past African conditions have been found to be in the native people. These beliefs can be disproved or modified only by time and by evidence but a useful contribution to be included to the report which the country awaits with some impatience. We are told that, on the evidence of officials from Uganda itself, the cotton growing policy as at present followed has been found to be harmful by its reports and Lord Delamater has expressed the relief that the policy adopted in Kenya does not include the other responsibilities which a grown man, black or white, owes to the State of which he is a part. We have no doubt that the D. A. Commission will perhaps review the views on the subject of the most importance and value of the country as a developer of native resources. Responsibility of all states in the world, more especially those which they discover that the work is not being done, according to the original
