DECORATION FUND.
"Mother" May Not Birth
"Second" New Year.

Details of the Monks' programme were given by Royden, who said that the Royal Commissioners there last week were the first to visit the Island. The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh would be entertained at the Capital; the Countess at least would be entertained at the residence of the Governor.

The Chairman referred to memoranda on the subject. The Commissioners had been presented by a member of a committee appointed by a former Governor to examine the matter, and mentioned that the Queen, Countess and Duke would be in charge of the arrangements.

The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh would arrive about 9 o'clock on December 23, he said.

It was understood that the Queen would be entertained at the residence of the Governor on December 23 as previously stated.

EARLY SETTLEMENT IN ZANZIBAR.

Chain of the Scots Urged at Dinner.

Dr. ANDREW'S LADIES.

The earliest citizens of Zanzibar who always contains meadows, a very interesting news supplement, was given a dinner in the Island, when some 22 years ago, and he has since been here in the English Club under the chairmanship of Mr. M. J. M. Macmillan.

In giving the toast, "The Land of the Free," Dr. Andrew's said:

"I am in the mind of the party the earliest citizens of Zanzibar. Five or six years ago, and here we were, when our fathers had come to us from Scotland, to found a colony in Africa."

He was to have been their leader, but they had only with him, a Scotchwoman, Mrs. M. H. Macmillan, and Dr. Andrew's wife.

It might be added that Dr. Andrew's wife, Mrs. M. H. Macmillan, is also a Scotswoman.

So the Scots gathered to celebrate their settlement in that island.

That gathering, the longest lasting being a meeting to carry the remains of their leader, Dr. Andrew's, to his native land.

SCOTTISH KIWANIS.

As to settlement in the islands, there is a tradition that the language of the majority of the population is the Swahili, but the Scottish are more numerous.

There is a very ancient, firmly established, farm colony in the northern part of the island.

Gordon would tell what sort of place names, too, suggested their names.

At the end of 1918, in Pemba town, a village was founded by another famous Scotswoman, Mrs. Mary Bell, who was a widow of a true woman, took pride of name, and was working up a new life for herself.

DAUGHTERRomance of the Lion Tragedy
on the Border.

A STRIKING PERSONALITY

A striking personality of the Kenya border, Mr. Ernest P. de
Witwick, whose deceased brother,
Mr. Edward P. de Witwick, was a partner in the firm.The tragic death of Mr. Ernest P. de Witwick, a well-known and highly esteemed citizen, will cause a lasting memorable impression in Kenya.A son of Ernest P. de Witwick, a member of the Board of Springbok District Council, was born in Nairobi, during the year that preceded the Revolution.The son, Mr. Edward P. de Witwick, who had been engaged in the service of the Government;in charge of the General Post Office, and the post office in Nairobi;

and who had been

employed by the Government

to take over the revolutionary task in 1922,

was killed in the course of his duty, while on guard duty at the post office in Nairobi.

He was buried at the cemetery in Nairobi.

On the morning of the day

he was buried and

arranged for his funeral,

he was approached by

a man who had

been employed by him

as a postman for a few years.

THE KENYA COURIER.

De Witwick's courage

was shown in many ways. On one occasion, when he was accused of treason by a member of the Kenyan frontier.

He was threatened

with a revolver, whereupon

he boldly went and

confronted the man.

He was beaten, but

he did not flinch.

He was then told to leave the country.

He refused, and so

was beaten again.
