which international policy will be practicable, as far as the political, economic, political and social progress constituted in the very carefully worked statement of Anglo-American relations known as the Atlantic Charter.

Great Britain, which has never ceased to champion the liberal principles, is obliged to give a wholehearted support to the new world and that the rest of the world will be benefited by the new world if necessary, to the extent of the resources of the world, and that the British Empire must be the post-war world.

The British Government is in the process of reviewing its changing concept of international relations in the light of the responsibility of the world. It is a responsibility which is not shared by any other nation. It is a responsibility which is not shared by any other nation.

NEWS FROM THE EAST

Dear Hawkins:

It was like a breath of home to get your airgraph letter and to recognize your well-known flat, even if it is reproduced a shade or so smaller. You would find great scope for your gift of knocking up cool drinks out here. If it wasn't for the orange, I could tell you just what it's as hot as. But thank goodness we're not so far from that we're not of reach of Roosevelt's Limes Juice. The result? That the rare headaches which do arise can be honestly blamed on the sun.

What's the Home Situation like at home? Grab me a couple of bottles if you can, for I've a hunch there's going to be a celebration when I get back. Glad to hear you're enjoying the Home Guard. Give my salutations to the Boss and I could tell him I've taken to sleeping in a joint cloth.

Sincerely,

AGRICULTURAL POLICY IN KENYA

A CASE FOR NATIONALISATION OF THE LAND

by G. L. P. Wedd

In the first article on this subject by a Rumeruti settler some of the difficulties of farmers who have sunk their capital into purchasing land were discussed, and the advantages of state ownership pointed out. In this, the last of the articles, Mr. Wedd puts forward some practical suggestions for state control.

There is another school of thought which objects to Government interference and maintains that the farmer is best left to run his own show. The answer to this is that an ever increasing amount of state control is inevitable and "Control" whether in the form of restriction or assistance is more acceptable from a landowner whose own interests are affected, rather than a bureaucrat whose chief duty is the collection of taxes.

Some landowners value their freehold as they can pass on the results of their work to their dependants. There is no reason why this should not happen under nationalisation. In fact many of the best farms in Kenya are owned by the Government. The Government has a large land area for generations to come. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land.

Having, I hope, proved the case for nationalisation, it is suggested how the Government should begin to start to control the land. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land.

A large amount of capital would be required to buy the land. The Government should be able to raise the money to buy the land. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land.

Why Meatless Days?

A letter from the Balkan district, referring to the recent meatless days, writes as follows: "I have been thinking about the meatless days. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land."

The meatless days are a good idea. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land. It is not a matter of time before the Government will be able to control the land.

DYNAMIC PROPAGANDA

Mobile Military Unit Thrills Capacity Nairobi Crowd

It is generally conceded that there are two kinds of propaganda. To enlighten people, one variety is a stimulant, as were done by Aunt Betty Downwood, the other variety is good that one does not recognize is propaganda, and a conscious effort.

Of this latter kind is the information provided by the R.A. Command Mobile Propaganda Unit after 17,000 miles over Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, during which it has visited a quarter of a million Africans, and has been for its premiere in Nairobi at the Nairobian Club, Sunday. Before the assembly took place, the Command was accompanied by a band of 200 musicians in uniforms provided specially for the purpose.

On the covered stage was the Chief Secretary, the Provincial Commissioner, the I.B.S.G., the Acting District Commissioner, and members of local clubs and headsmen who were present in large numbers. The Chief Secretary explained many matters to the crowd by means of a megaphone, and speaking.

The presentation was marked by such tokens of spectacular which contained good showmanship and the twenty-four members of the band struck a square which had been Mr. Charles Cochrane's Young Ladies' Choir.

A Human Pyramid. Nineteen P.V. men, 11 in front, displayed both in a more than routine set of men who were as straight as willow stands and as supple as body of a ribboning's confectioner.

Trades Unions In East Africa

The Nairobi Chamber of Commerce is interested in the East African Trades Union movement, more particularly in the matter of securing that a tendency which is regarded as undesirable, have called over an estimated number of elephants. That party claim of the East African Trade Union, but there were several exhibitors meeting the following resolution was passed, namely:

This Government is requested to arrange for visits to East Africa by a labour expert to give on trade union and social subjects and to discuss these subjects in East Africa.

Mr. H. Seyer pointed out that the matter was not the Government's business, but that it was a matter for the Government to consider.

The British Government had a duty to do in this regard. It should ensure that the trade union movement was carried out in a proper manner and with the minimum of disturbance to the country.
