Details Of Nazi Invasion Gliders

According to the Times correspondent, the gliders were used by the German forces to land the invasion force on the coast of France. The average number used by the Germans was two, but it is possible for one to be towed by a Ju 52 transport plane. There is no confirmation that the gliders were used in the invasion of the Channel Islands, but the explanation seems to be that most of the gliders came down too late for the landing troops were dropped from the gliders on the beach. With Germany openly announcing that immediate aid was not forthcoming to assist the programme, these are the first signs of revolt since the outbreak.

Business in Yaguivira has practically come to a standstill. The German staff has been called out to deal with the situation. According to the Russian Agency reports, British troops were ordered to be ready for the outbreak of the revolt. When news of the revolt was received, the British troops were sent to the area. # Tell me, doctor...

Are you sure? I can't believe that all this should have started with a skin on the face! There must be some way of preventing such awful results... Tell me, what is it to do?

The smallest cut or scratch is enough for the germs of blood-poisoning to enter. There is only one way to prevent their invasion: they must be killed-out-dead. 'Dettol', the Modern Antiseptic, can be applied internally. 'Dettol' is gentle and tender on human tissues, non-poisonous and non-staining to the skin, yet death to germs. Your chemist has 'Dettol'.

GERMANS ADMIT BOAT FLEET AT EAT GREER

Say U.S. Destroyer Attacked First

September 7. (AP)—President Roosevelt is to broadcast on Tuesday the subject of a talk has not yet been disclosed but is being translated into various languages and its importance is obvious.

The announcement of the broadcast came soon after the arrival of the German submarine fleet in the Greer incident. This admits that the submarine was not a German vessel, but according to a statement by the American destroyer and having their first in the Atlantic.

The military experts of the New York Post declare flatly that an eye to his right mind could see that the American destroyer was not a German vessel. "When the submarine is found," said President Roosevelt in his broadcast, "it will be immediately shown to be a German vessel."

The Greer was not a German vessel. It was a United States destroyer. It was not a German vessel. It was a United States destroyer. It was not a German vessel. It was a United States destroyer.

U-BOATS IN NIGHT

Surprising Comment In Semi-Official Journal

September 7. (AP)—An overwhelming majority of Americans are of opinion that the U-boat campaign against the people of the world should be checked and stopped.

In the latest Gallup survey the question was asked: "Do you think the United States should now take steps to keep Japan from becoming the most powerful nation in the world?" Seventy-five per cent of the people answered "Yes."

Surprising anti-U-boat comment from the editorial issue of the Japan News Week, which often reflects the official views of the Government in Tokyo. The newspaper says that the situation existing in the mid-year of war is such that, although there is no indication that the U-boat campaign is being definitely arrested and that by the end of the third year of the attack of the German navy on the Atlantic the U-boat campaign will have been defeated. It does not mean that the U-boat campaign has been defeated, it does mean that the U-boat campaign is being definitely arrested and that by the end of the third year of the attack of the German navy on the Atlantic the U-boat campaign will have been defeated.

probably that for a few months while the settlement of the public peace will require both firmness and tact in the approach by Authority to their solution.

In Mombasa recently there have been "incidents" between taxi drivers and soldiers and seamen. In Nairobi, on the other hand, the disturbances are of a different nature. The disturbances have occurred in the form of a general strike of taxi drivers and troops have been in conflict, vehicles have been damaged, and one driver is reported to have died in hospital. It is not to be supposed that in the conditions of Nairobi these disturbances can be completely avoided and it is important that all concerned, both civilians and troops, should not be encouraged to exaggerate their significance. It is more than likely that the blame can be fairly equally apportioned.

There are many who are too much to drink, and on the part of groups of men in uniform in conflict with taxi drivers who are not always courteous and polite as they should be, disputes about charges and heated argument together have led to blows in a country of mixed races and a lax sense of individual responsibility to which we conditions give rise.

But though everyone concerned will be prepared to make every allowance, it is not to be supposed for a moment that the people of Nairobi, or the residents of Mombasa either, will be prepared to close their eyes to disturbances of this kind. Public peace should these fringes become too numerous. This is the time, before disrepair for the law gains complete ascendancy, to argue along the lines that we should remember that in the last war we were thankful that Nairobi has escaped a similar repetition. It is useless, indeed, to make any excuses for disturbances and the resulting danger to life and property.

Here is a joint duty for the authorities and the police. Strengthening of the police forces, both civil and military, is the obvious step. Hitherto so far our information goes, military police (never sufficiently numerous) have not been on duty in the town after midnight, and this is a serious deficiency in the early hours of the morning not infrequently the peace of those staying in hotels and in the streets of the town is disturbed by noisy and indelicate troops who, high spirits should not be allowed to give licence to officers. Sometimes the offenders are one or two men who have had too much to drink; not infrequently the noise is caused by larger groups whose sole excuse is that having been to a party they apparently did not know where to go. The police are to be congratulated that their patrols outside in the streets. Conditions do not yet appear to have become bad enough to require military pickets but if the police should be unable to maintain the public peace it might become necessary to consider that alternative.

This matter of taxis is obviously a problem which can be approached from many angles, but attention at specific points. The engaging of these public vehicles can be controlled at the rate before we have seen, if police authority is reinforced and is active on the spot to settle questions like charges, take taxi meters, and give simple directions, provide a measure of protection both to the driver and his passengers. There should not be any excuse for crime around looking for fault. If the ranks in use after dark are limited in number and controlled in the terms of their use, the problem of control will be simplified.

Nairobi taxi drivers are a section of the population who require supervision. The East African Standard has no infrequently heard suggestions which would have the effect of increasing the number of taxis for purely military purposes, and even for the sale of illegal drugs, and there have been cases in which highly respectable soldiers, a licensed Nairobi, have been driven to jump, collect, and

The Public Peace

As an active theatre of operations with its whole population increased to many times the normal figures, and particularly in the case of its ordinary life distorted and altered, Kenya has every reason to be grateful for the high standard of conduct which has been maintained throughout the period of existence. Compared with many military areas, and particularly with those we have gone through our times of strain and difficult adjustment of relations, Kenya has been remarkably successful in the maintenance of the civil and military communities. Now that the campaign is over, the monetary of garb and transport, and particularly a licensed Nairobi, have been driven to jump, collect, and

The Fire of Crusade

THE FIRE OF CRUSADE

The Individual And The War

In the course of a commentary we published this week on the lessons of two years of war there occurred this sentence: "If during this third year of war the fire of crusade possesses the hearts and minds of every member of the nations of the world the result will follow." The group comprises the British Commonwealth, the United States of America and the Soviet Union; the "rest that will follow" is Victory. Within the world group headed by these three great nations there is all the man power, all the metal, all the wealth, all the material resources to finish the job that has been undertaken. But mere material strength is not enough. We must bring to its use moral force, the crusading spirit. We must feel that we are going to win; even more, we must be determined that come what may we shall win.

DEFEAT OF HITLERISM IS A PRIMARY DUTY

Today the peoples of the British Commonwealth and the Soviet Union are fighting for their homes. The spirit which such a fight inspires in a people whose national life is sound, and who have regard to the traditions, is always magnificent. We have seen evidence of it in the stout-hearted attitude of the British Empire in the hour of its trial and testing. We see it today in the remarkable determination and sacrifices of the people of Russia. In the hour of crisis the spirit of both has been revealed. We have seen it too after Dunkirk, after the fall of France and Greece and Crete.

to conquer on the eastern front—but Russia cannot defeat the Germans in Germany. That is our job. One day we have to face the task of carrying the war into the enemy's country for until we beat the Germans to their knees in their own countries they will not be defeated. That is one of the lessons we learned from the war of 1914 and the peace of 1918. Germany, though morally, militarily, economically and politically shattered had not seen the invader cross her borders, and in her own country that false pride in invincibility British built.

THE BATTLE OF THE LAKES

CHARGE BY THE KING'S ARMY

This article is the first in a series by Mr. G. K. Hassan (who uses the East African name of Hassan) and is a contribution to the East African Standard... The story really began a wonderful day when the King's African Rifles captured a strong Italian position on the narrow neck of land...

KEEN AND CLEVER WRESTLING Good Exhibition Of Weight Lifting

On Saturday evening last the United States Sports Olympians staged a very successful Wrestling tournament at the Theatre Royal, before a well filled house. The winners were well witnessed as well as the splendid exhibition of weight lifting by the South African champion, Sgt. H. C. Long. An added attraction was that Officer Major, of the Royal Australian Air Force, who made an unexpected appearance and appeared with Long in his weight lifting efforts. It was unfortunate that Major had not had any chance to lift, as he was unfortunately injured, having had a severe strain of his back. He was, however, the more sporting of him to turn up and offer his services. He put up a very good showing in his lift of the combined weight being a masterpiece in the "spring and jerk" class. Long lifted a combined 260 lbs. from the back of his neck to a full, two-arm stretch above his head in less than ten seconds. He also lifted a 160 lb. weight with one arm, with a full extension and repeated it with the other arm. With one arm the stage as a whole with his man sitting on his outstretched hand. His "plier de resistance" was lifting a combined weight on a bar of iron. This was placed across his neck; one arm was suspended from each end of the weight, and he supported the bar with his hands. He finished his performance with a full extension and repeated it with the other arm. The wrestling programme was confined to one bout in each weight class. Featherweight, lightweight, middleweight and light-heavyweight. Sgt. Howland, of the Ordnance, drew with Pte. de Villiers of the S. A. Forces in a very tight contest. Both put in all they knew and gained one fall each, but neither could finish before the end of the first round. For featherweight it was a very good show. Sgt. Newton, a Provincial runner-up of the Western Province, A. I. met Pte. Mananekera, a Transvaal runner-up, in the lightweight. The bout was very strictly amateur and made not only an interesting but a professional bout, produced some hard holds and breaks. Newton's biceps were so sore from the work that he was unable to go to the second round. Sibbort, the Northern, and Jacobs, the Western, produced some fine freestyle wrestling in the middleweight up to a state of considerable exhaustion. Sibbort was a "real man" attitude which pleased the fans in the crowd. He pinned Sibbort in the second round with a submission. In the light-heavyweight class, the Canadian missed his opportunity completely through Sibbort's cleverly handled leg. The referee completely "deflected" the orchestra pit. He was unable to come up for the second round and was declared a winner. The main bout, low gave the crowd all they expected of it. Ted Knoblauch and "Ironhorse" Davies faced one another in the light-heavyweight division and the vigilant eye of Gen. "Panther" Purchar, George evidently knew his man, as he was able to handle the "bull" well. Both men looked the picture of confidence and opened without waiting for sparring or feinting. Immediately they gave us "Boston Crab" "Death Locks," "Wolf Baiting" and the absolute trade of the wrestling game and their exhibition from these various holds were clever indeed.

Kilbucke against the first fall in the third round with a reverse arm hold and a power throw. He was declared right from his corner in the next round and caught Kilbucke quite out of the body and almost blind, without ceremony with a body break out of which he could not escape. The next round saw Brewster's back going up for the first time. Kilbucke, after being in a body position, was able to clinch on "Judas' Death Lock" on Brewster's back and was able to get out of it. Davies could do nothing but submit. Kilbucke thus won his title in one after a direct, clean display of excellent wrestling. Altogether an exciting spectacle with a display of Berlin and a pleasure to witness, especially the physical condition of all the contestants.

 Invaluable Training For Africans

The Italian "heroes" during the last week or two have been the subject of the "gondar resistance" of Gondar. YEAST VITE
 FOR LOSS OF APPETITE, SLEEPLESSNESS, INDIGESTION, HEADACHE AND HYSTERIA.
 Dear Sir:—At one time I was a patient sufferer from indigestion, insomnia, and many other disorders. After the trial of many remedies, a friend recommended Yeast-Vite Tablets. The result after the first few days was most effective. At the end of the first week I was able to eat and sleep as my own liver desired. That was the end of my troubles. I feel my whole body returned to its normal functions and I feel better in every way.
 I am now free from anxiety. Thanks entirely to Yeast-Vite Tablets, which I am now a constant user of, and can thoroughly recommend to all who suffer from loss of appetite, sleeplessness, indigestion, headache, and hysteria.
 Yours faithfully, Mrs. O. T.

the civilian population, having reached them that their safe and comfortable view of the war had been possible because they were guarded and protected by the splendid East Africa Force which has given our nearest enemy into the sea. But it will not be enough to rest satisfied with what our men have done. It will not be enough to say that the civil population has done all that was asked of it and regretted that it could do no more. It is the responsibility of the heads of States of the humbler member of the community to seek and to make opportunities.

We can begin by denying ourselves much of our comfort 10 by doing so we can ensure that the money saved will be re-distributed for war purposes, and if by any possible means we can make available for the war the assets of British some of the commodities which we can do without. We need not in these young countries face the prospect of market place with feelings of shame and humiliation if we encourage our spirit to be stirred within us in a great determination to do what we can in the way of sacrifice and to serve. There is no evidence of such a determination. The community has not called upon its leaders to show them the way to personal effort. There is no well-known sign of a healthy discontent with our leaders. The decent comfort and plenty.

Mr. Gilmore's night returned with his daughter after visiting his father in the hospital. "People began to take shape and I saw a better world," he said. "I couldn't understand it. I was afraid to tell my daughter but she was not too far from home I said. 'Are you not in the line?' 'I can see them and I can see them.' The restoration of her sight has attracted the attention of the medical profession and an incalculable amount of interest.

The British War Office announced yesterday that the two camps through the good offices of the United Nations Commission for Refugees. All the officers have been taken away from the camps—Stalag 21A at Thorn and Stalag 21D at Posen.

The German Foreign Office are to give the United States Embassy a list of the names of the British officers who have been transferred. Details will be told on a later date.

Allegations that the Canadian camps were proved to be wrong. The question of the Polish "reprisal" camps was raised in the Commons.

Allegations have been made about them. That had, in fact, been proved to be wrong. The conditions were some of the conditions which were being reported to the British Government. It was stated that it had been living in a miserable condition with no plumbing and no daylight.

Some time after the occupation of Norway had been completed a German military detachment consisting of three officers of military experience and a number of men, but they limited their activities to inspection of the coal mines in order to obtain the necessary fuel for the German Navy. They were to remain in the country for a long time.

Immediately came into the zone of our operations. Until then the island had been allowed to continue their work without interference and was supplying a considerable number of miners. But Spitbergen assumed of some strategic importance when Germany invaded Russia and the mines made it doubly important.

Reports which have been received from Germany reveal that while preparing their campaign against the Soviet Union the Germans had their hands on all the supplies of fuel they could find in Norway and these included coal from Spitbergen. The German High Command needed particularly for their operations in the Arctic region. It was necessary during the winter months to have a supply of fuel to keep the ships in a state of readiness to sail to the north.

Quite little ago there were brief references in the press in Kenya to the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross to Pilot-Officer John L. Allen, who, co-operatively, was killed shortly afterwards. It was not widely known that the gallantry of Pilot-Officer John L. Allen, of the O.C.U., is with the East Africa Force while a younger pilot, Macgregor, is a V.A.D. nurse in England.

Having gathered details of the late Mr. Allen's exploits from various sources, a correspondent of the East African Standard contributes the following:

One day John Allen was above from Germany, a mission which he considered likely to be successful. He was flying over the coast of the Indian Ocean, and was probably a German bomber. He was flying over the coast of the Indian Ocean, and was probably a German bomber.

WAR OF LIBERATION FOR WIDER FREEDOM

LONDON.
A BRIEF report of the 15th anniversary of the Russian Revolution has already been published. A more comprehensive report of this speech, now available, in which the Russian leader reviewed the bold strategy the Russian had received a share of the world's admiration, and the world would be surprised to see the world's most powerful nation, the Soviet Union, in the hands of the German and Japanese aggressors.

In spite of the heroic resistance of the Red Army, in spite of the fact that the Red Army had been reduced to a fraction of its former strength, the Red Army had not only held its own, but had also won the hearts and minds of the Russian people, and had also won the hearts and minds of the Russian people, and had also won the hearts and minds of the Russian people.

same kind of regard for the private property of Allied nationals and when the war is over there is a general accounting for the stewardship. It is also obvious that the property is managed by the Public Trustee local for the estate of a deceased person, so that as a creditor one is as far as possible, paid what is due to them. When the war is over, a title deed is given there is a sale of ex-cess property goods such as farms and, as happened after the last war, there is an opportunity for the public by ingenious wangling through agents (usually non-British) the one time money is able to enter again into possession of his estate. Whether that is true or not we are unable to say, but we know that the public know very little about the whole question of control and disposal of ex-cess property and have an altogether little interest in it. Perhaps it would be as well for everybody concerned to know more about the subject, so we know, the Custodians in the various East African Territories will be glad to supply public information any report of their actions since this war began two years ago. We do not know what property was taken over, or what is happening to it. Particularly we have not been told what the farms and plantations go being maintained as going concerns or whether some of them have fallen into the hands of the enemy. If the latter are unattended. Nor have we been made aware of any report of the actions of the Custodians to the public to take over these farms and whether they are based on the tender system or the farmland to the highest bidder, or whether there is some method of selection by the public. All these questions are not only interesting, they are important. In British East Africa at the present time we are engaged in building up our economic war effort. We are engaged particularly in maintaining the economic structure and where possible strengthening the foundations on which we can build a stronger Empire settlement after the war. We are today trying to get the maximum from the land in the form of the crops required for the war, in so far as our greatly reduced man-power will permit us. We are trying to expand our production and to do so to maintain intact the economic structure so that when the war is over we can get straight back to normal.

On the assumption that necessary conditions overseas may eventually force a sharp rise in gold against sterling, with which the South African pound is linked, this is the question of the possibility in the future of a gold strike with all its subsidiaries appeared to offer the greatest scope. Mr. Meyer also emphasized the necessity for developing the markets of central and northern Africa as an outlet for the products of South African industry.

INDIGENOUS FLOWERS, Part II

Africans in the Garden

It is over twenty years now since I started gardening in this country, and in those few days I remember very few folk who were keen on the flora of the country. Personally I was thrilled, and started collecting things at once; but now, if I find a new, quite pretty plant here, which has indeed proved to be the thing, then the gardeners of those days mostly considered all plants from the bush—but then the same criticism can be made in our gardens, and when experimenting, most take risks.

There is no need to go to exotic flowers. I remember in those early days, I had taken a box of seedlings to the market, and one of them, which was practically unknown at home, was taken back to me and, after a few days, I found it was not a seedling, but a young plant of the species, which I had seen in the garden of an English man who had been in the country for many years.

I had seen a plant, which was a young one, and it was not a seedling, but a young plant of the species, which I had seen in the garden of an English man who had been in the country for many years.

The shrubby Red-hot-chili (Crotalaria retusa), of which I have seen a great many specimens, is a native plant of the country. It is a very hardy, upright, bushy plant, with a woody stem, and the leaves are pinnate, with small, round leaflets. The flowers are yellow, and the fruit is a long, thin, cylindrical pod, which is covered with small, dark seeds.

Harequin And Quail

(By "TWENTY-NINE")

D Van Someren's report on Harequin Quail in the Standard of August 18 is so good and so interesting that it is not possible to do justice to it in this part of the article. His authority cannot be questioned; he has always rendered nice statements on ornithology, and has been of great assistance in fixing the dates for the above game, which has but only been introduced in the Rift Valley Province.

It would be appreciated, however, if the harequin and quail by other means, so that they may be put in the hands of the birds.

The harequin and quail are two different species, and the harequin is a much larger bird, with a more robust build than the quail. The harequin is a member of the Coturnix genus, while the quail is a member of the Turnix genus.

PREMIER'S REVIEW U-Boat Attacks U.S. Destroyer

RUSSIA'S NEEDS MEAN MORE SACRIFICE

STARTLING FACTS IN GREER INCIDENT

London, September 10.—IN A REVIEW in the House of Commons, the war cabinet, under the Prime Minister, gave special attention to the U-boat attacks on the British Empire and the need for more ships for our Allies. The speech lasted fifty minutes.

Mr. Churchill said there had been no available data on the help to Russia. We had already delivered very considerable quantities and more were on the way. But there were other things which Russia had asked for which could not be provided entirely from the British Empire or allied resources and which would have to be the subject of discussion in Washington and during the Moscow Conference.

With regard to advances the Government of the British Empire had been asked and their names would be published in due course. We were awaiting the arrival in Britain of the American Mission under Mr. Harriman.

Russia's need was urgent and it was on the largest scale. A considerable part of her requirements in the U.S. had fallen into the enemy's hands. The Soviet was still thought to have anything from ten million to fifteen million tons of equipment for nearly all of them, but to enable Russia to realize their requirements the Government had organized their supplies. That would require services by Britain of her own supplies of munitions and of other things which she could not produce. To make up this deficit would require a production effort which would be required, greater quantities, both here and in America.

In addition, said the Prime Minister, there was the problem of shipping and the difficulty that only three routes to Russia were open to us. The shortest and most important was the Arctic route, but it was the most dangerous. The other two routes were the Persian Gulf and the Indian Ocean. The Persian Gulf route was the most dangerous. The Indian Ocean route was the most dangerous.

The United States Navy Department announced early today that the American destroyer Greer was damaged by a submarine while on the way to Iceland with mail.

The torpedo went wide and the Greer was not seriously damaged. The submarine was not sighted and its depth charges, with what result is not known, were not used.

Preliminary reports of the fast attack on the Greer were confirmed by the United States Navy in the Atlantic do not indicate that the submarine's nationality had been determined.

The Greer is a brand of 1,000 tons and is similar to the American destroyers transferred to Britain last year.

A later message said that the Greer was damaged by a submarine while on the way to Iceland with mail.

The New York Times says: "The attempt by an enemy submarine to attack the Greer is a serious matter. It is a serious matter. It is a serious matter."
