BRITISH-ISRAEL NOTE

God created man a little lower than the angels, and with certain endowments God Almighty has bestowed upon him. One of these is the power of God, and it is this power which makes man free will, without which there would be no freedom of thought, and no freedom of action. What is the good of free will if it is not used to the benefit of the soul? It is the power of God which makes man free will, and it is this power which makes man free will, and it is this power which makes man free will.

When we study the Scriptures we learn that in order to consider the activities of evil powers God had a special people of the flesh, the Hebrews, whom He had chosen to be His people. He had chosen them to be His people, and He had chosen them to be His people, and He had chosen them to be His people.

Event And Opinion In The Union

WITH most people's minds fixed anxiously on the battle in Egypt the week's events within the Union have become slightly unreal by comparison.

On the other hand, there is no sign that the country has suffered any that German submarines are operating, clearly foreshadowed in reports that until measures for checking the border can be perfected in South African waters, the campaign of ship-bombing will doubtless continue. They explain that as yet the Allies' aerial strength is not sufficient to provide anti-aircraft measures wherever the bombs might appear; these have to be concentrated on the British sea-lanes.

A migration, made by one correspondent on the Natal frontier and looked up by another, that South Africa is contributing to the naval strength of the British Empire in the shape of a destroyer force has aroused no interest, however. Even Trafalgar Day gave no ripple to a company of men as a post which was launched, it was merely said to be a day of rest for naval warships.

South Africa has a very good record, as the few correspondents point out, it consists entirely of small destroyers, which have been converted from trawlers and whale-boats, and which, as yet, valuable service within their limits, but could not fight a fleet of destroyers.

However, local domestic events of the Egyptian battle or an Egyptian battle which has been expected in advancing stages of local domestic events, the development of the meat price control controversy, which is chronicled earlier, the Flood and Price Controller, which is chronicled earlier, the Flood and Price Controller, which is chronicled earlier.

THE process of making compost on the farm is started by putting 3 or 4 feet of good grass, maize stalks, straw, etc., into a bonse. Leave for about a fortnight or until a fair quantity of dung and urine are in the bedding and it has been compressed to about one half or one third of the original height.

For these, one must manage the above programme in the following method, also from South Africa, suggested:

Put up a bonse with straw, such as it will be made by hay or any other material full of dung and urine. It will be made by hay or any other material full of dung and urine.

District Farming Notes

The chief result of interest during the month of October was the visit of Captain McClelland, the Government Farm Officer, to the district.

With regard to the standard of farm growing, the fact was readily apparent and help in any way he could. Up to date, South Africa has been rather left out, but would be fairly represented by Mr. G. D. Dwyer, who had been in the district.

THE LAND

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1945

The executive of the Thika District Association is gratulated upon its unopposed election, principally for control over the sale of agricultural land in wartime. It is a principle which should probably be widely accepted throughout the Colony. If, however, the control which is advocated is to be applied, the desire for it should receive general public acceptance before Government can be expected to set it. There are many important and far-reaching legal and financial considerations involved and a strong case requires to be stated.

It is true to say that never before has there been such widespread interest taken in land questions and in the economic welfare of those associated with the land. The first lesson should have been learnt after the first war, but in the general desire to escape responsibility for many difficult problems, we allowed agriculture to fall back into the hands of neglected ways. This must not happen again and, furthermore, we must think in the future much more about the soil and ways of conserving it and the means of increasing its fertility. With none of these responsibilities is the speculator concerned. The Thika Executive was that land which is set aside for the farmers—European British farmers—where possible, but farms certainly should be given to those serving with the Forces. This is a preliminary step towards larger schemes of settlement in a timely form of desirable action.

A few days ago during the present session of the Legislative Council payment of two advances totalling £17,828 from the general revenues of the Colony to the Njoro Farm School and the Training Farm School. The objective behind these schools is to provide training for future Kenya farmers. It is the first practical step towards ensuring better treatment for the land and the only possible regime that can be expressed is that the School as a whole and the Training School in particular, may prove insufficient for the needs of the time when returning soldiers are seeking a future on the land. But the expenditure is a token of Government's recognition of the importance of providing some training in the profession of the land.

Only the most meagre detail is yet available of the recommendation of the Land Commission which has recently issued its report in England. That brief-cabined information indicates that the State will be called upon to accept a greater responsibility in preserving intact its most vital lands. The Commission has not gone the whole way towards the nationalisation of land but the tenor of its recommendations would appear to foresee such a development. In East Africa we have had much needless litigation in our record of settlement that should be avoided in the future. The things that are essential to the full and proper use of the land are well known. The farmer should be emancipated from a precarious price system that undercuts security and limits expansion, and the industry should be able to afford good wages and conditions of life without becoming the value of the asset to the State. The responsibility of the State lies in ensuring that these conditions prevail. The size of the land thus becomes a State matter and its ownership direct concern.

We commend the resolution of the Thika District Association in favour of the other Farmers' Associations in East Africa.

NORTH AFRICA: THE STRATEGIC PLAN
TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1945

The events of the past few days are beginning to show the effects of the Axis strategic plan and in arising from their invasion of North Africa.

renewed importance. Despite the stress of this summer's harvest and the necessity of planting the still managed to carry out the part of what is necessary to be a present. The construction of a new air field. She has been in consequence able to participate in the Allied offensive operations fully by dispatching air squadrons of bombing and strafe squadrons to the Mediterranean theatre. The tremendously valuable part of the Axis strategic supply ships en route to the Mediterranean theatre. The bases in North Africa, which will be taken of the Axis, will be used to aircraft attacking industrial centres in Italy. There will not even be any safe harbours left for the remnants of the German fleet.

Whatever developments from the present situation, our main endeavour to protect her people from the weight of Britain's air attacks is to be a present problem.

THE BUDGET

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1945

There have been no longer any doubts as to the need to add a little controversy to the first budget presented to the Kenya Legislative Council. It will contain, in one will contain, Budgets, as it will, provide a hither proportion of unexpended balances on Capital Works, reserves of stores, etc. This Reserve Fund account does provide another means of accumulating surplus funds for purposes other than those for which the money was voted. There are no conditions laid down governing the use of the fund. It is Government's intention to retain in this Fund all unexpended balances which the original cost has been over-estimated? Perhaps the Financial Secretary will elaborate his intentions.

It is to be hoped that the considerable surplus balance anticipated to accrue at the close of the present financial year will not be raided lightly. As a result, we have not yet made any adequate contribution to the costs of this war although we have, in a financial sense, materially benefited from war expenditure. The day, therefore, when we can no longer find our future because we have overpursued our substance.

The estimates show the effect of the change in the system of direct taxation. By the substitution of a universal poll tax for the existing Poll and Property Tax, African taxation has been met. The resultant revenue is expected to be short of previous totals by £1,000,000. What is it undeniably to make a detailed analysis of the contribution to general revenue upon a community basis? It is certain that an appropriate relationship has been sustained. With considerable increases in indirect taxation through the Customs there is a starting comparison between anticipated yields from the non-taxable life Africa sections of the community in direct taxation.

One further related problem to the distribution in the revenue from Customs Duties is that of finding a means of spending the money now passing into circulation in the community as a result of war expenditure. Large sums of money from Europeans are being invested in War Bonds. The Asian people less inspired by the motives of those
