DEVELOPING NEW LAND: Part II.

BREAKING THE GROUND

(By L. A. ELMER, Asst. Agricultural Officer)

WHEN new land is to be broken, it will not be a waste of time for the farmer to stroll over the ground and consider how the breaking should be done with reference to the future of the field. An hour or two spent in this way may save many tons of good soil in the years to come.

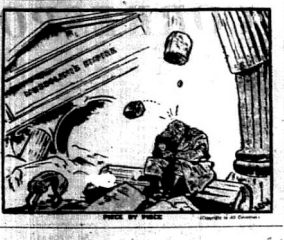

The direction in which the first furrow is broken is important as a rule, new land has to be ploughed three times before it is ready for the first crop. The second ploughing should be at right angles to the first when ever the width of the field or the slope of the land is such that the third and last ploughing will be across the general slope of the land to delay erosion. It is risky to plough up and down a hill on land which has even a gentle slope unless it is to be re-embanked and re-ploughed fairly soon. Ploughing up and down a hill should not be done on steep land, even though it is new land as the crevices of plough strips always have a tendency to collect storm water and to wash down the hill.

On the lands there may be natural drains which run down the slope of the field to be terraced. A common feature is of narrow rills which track overgrown with grass. If there is a light wash down the rill, it may do for a discharge drain for storm water when the terraces have been made and it should therefore be left and not trenched with the plough.

There is little doubt that in years to come few farmers will be consulting the Soil Conservation Service for advice on soil conservation. The soil should be developed with reference to conserving the soil. The farmer has any doubts about this, it is done with a view to writing for advice before erosion starts.

With these and similar thoughts in his mind, the farmer will now set out the first lands to be ploughed. A useful rule is to plough the furrows wide and the distance also makes a difference. For a tractor, the width will be 12 ft. for a horse-drawn, 8 ft. and the distance between the furrows to save fuel and time in turning.

It is necessary to mark the land out in portable lines to avoid having to plough old pieces which would otherwise be left. The average driver can be taught quickly to

THE MAINTENANCE OF BROAD BASE TERRACES

It is fatal to think that once terraces have been properly made they can take care of themselves. All terraces must be ploughed well before the main rains and wash spots made up. One of two boys should be specially trained to look after terraces and outlets, and to look out for damage after extra heavy rain. These boys should be kept at this work and farm roads.

- CAUSES OF FAILURE:
- (a) Excessive water coming from outside the field.
 - (b) Outlet of terrace blocked or not sufficiently wide.
 - (c) Water from an upper terrace finding its way back on to a lower one from outside and banking up the outlet of the lower one.
 - (d) Any possible fall of earth between terraces and blocking the channel.
 - (e) Foulness of other arrangements passing from one part of the field to another cutting a hole in the terrace top.

- PREVENTION:
- (1) The owner himself must make a careful search after heavy rains for signs of excessive water.
 - (2) Outlets must be at least 12 ft. wide and be given rather more slope than the actual terrace. At every alternate outlet on farrows. Outlets should be allowed to grass over but not to grow grass to be kept reasonably short. After first rains look for mud and make stable blocking the outlet.
 - (3) Carry the end of the terrace well down from the field and make sure the water cannot pile up on a lower terrace.
 - (4) Great care must be taken in ploughing to see that a furrow is not left just below a terrace which will gather a lot of water and discharge it with enough volume to cause wash between terraces.

This also applies to the spongy furrow which will occur if the terrace is always ploughed to one bearing.

(5) Whenever a terrace should, in passing from one terrace to another, pass right outside in the grassland, and not between the terrace or furrow.

PLOUGHING TERRACES:

It is advisable to put a special plough on to this job and to do all the terraces of a field before the parts in between are ploughed. A four-wheel tractor plough should be used if possible, as it is less likely to slip sideways on the terrace. Plough the terrace about 10 ft. wide, about 10 ft. from the terrace, and then ploughing the piece in between between terraces should be ploughed in two halves so as to avoid making a large spongy furrow in the middle.

A one-way harrow plough makes a first-class job of finishing the terrace and when made to throw silt aids materially to the terrace being built.

If the first ploughing is not sufficient to keep the terrace up, a light furrow plough can be used over all terraces before the main job of ploughing is between it started on. In this case, after grading, the terrace can be ploughed and the ploughing continued as usual.

In the event of any terrace breaking it is essential to search for the cause right up to the top of the field and all repair work must start at the very top. It is useless merely to repair a breach without the cause being found and dealt with at the top.

Properly made terraces seldom break from the mere weight of rain that falls on the field itself, provided outlets are good. If ploughing terraces with care, put a really good driver with the same team regularly on the job.

KENNEL NOTES

(By MARGARET COLLIER)

A VERY sad case of disease reached me the other day. Mrs. Victor's little black dog, who was a charming little fox-terrier, had died.

Wags Frisco's had been run over by an ox wagon and practically killed on the spot. This dog was very old, and had been with the family for many years. It was a very good dog, and was very much loved by the family.

Francis, who had as far as been true, been allowed to mix with the other dogs, had been expected in season last week. It was a very good dog, and was very much loved by the family.

Chats Frisco's. Great things were expected from this match, so the accident occurred. Mrs. Victor of a valuable possession as well as the loss of a dog that had been with the family for many years.

COOPER'S COMMUNIQUE

The Commensale of Spraying CAPEX LIME SULPHUR for Coffee Thrips

Spray early before the damage is done. In many cases growers do not begin to spray until damage is apparent. It is then too late to get the full benefit. This applies especially to fungoid diseases, which are far easier to prevent than to control after they have once become established.

Spray every season. You cannot tell in advance whether your trees will be attacked. Prevention is better and cheaper than cure. Don't spray during or just after a shower. The extra moisture will dilute and weaken the wash. Don't spray in a hot sun if it can be avoided. Last, but not least, spray thoroughly and conscientiously, a poor spraying is a waste both of labour and material.

DEVELOPING THE LAND, Part V.

Working Down New Land

(By L. A. EMMER, Asst. Agricultural Officer)

As there are certain tiling operations which can only be done satisfactorily by disc or light draft harrows, it is essential in these cases of year to conserve these types of harrows. Most parts of the harrow should not be used in the same way as the heavy side drawn with stamps and rollers.

IN this third part of what is so necessary to reduce the losses for farmers that special emphasis is laid on the great value of a horse-moist implement, the iron or wood-tipped roller harrow. The precision horse-moist is used in the case that they are made in Kenya by the local blacksmiths and the farm, with rubber rollers, which are driven through bare land and are used for the purpose of tilling.

It is a well known fact that heavy, this locally made, sugar, honey, and medicinal and effective. It is known as the most reliable of all quinine tablets in use. The original tablets were made of three times and then one more tablet with the dried sugar washes to keep the taste light. In the 10 years the use of all the tablets has been made in the same way, with the same quality. It is about 7/8 of a grain, this means that it is a very strong medicine and is safe for children.

It should not be set at rest until the soil has been turned over and the surface has been smoothed. After the turn has been made, the soil should be smoothed with a roller, which is put in an up and down position. The roller should be made of a fairly light iron and should be made in the same direction as the harrow. District Farming Notes

North Kenya

The pasture side of the district has been a fair amount of rain although the farmers who have seen this can be used for the central and western areas. It is thought that the eastern highlands, there is no shortage of grass for those who have not been a good receiver of rain.

disc harrow to be broken at first by getting embedded in an anti-wheel with no room for a horse to be. The turned round it is not enough to save a Native driver NOT to turn short; the driver must turn the harrow over two courses to be adopted, either the reverse side of the harrow or one on the other, and this makes the harrow work better. It can be taken off the field completely and turned over to be used for another purpose.

THE first harrowing of the land can now be considered. If the harrow has been turned over completely by a mould-board harrow, and the field is now a clean, earthy surface, and is free from hard weeds, it should be left to rest. If the earth is damp, it should be harrowed with a disc harrow, using a disc harrow, which is a well known fact that heavy, this locally made, sugar, honey, and medicinal and effective. COOPER'S COMMUNIQUE

The Commonsense Of Spraying

CAPEX LIME SULPHUR for Coffee Thrips

Spray early before the damage is done. In many cases growers do not begin to spray until damage is apparent. It is then too late to get the full benefit. This applies especially to fungicidal diseases which are far easier to prevent than to cure after they have once become established.

Spray evenly. You cannot win in advance whether your trees be attacked, prevention is better and cheaper than cure.

Don't spray during or just after a shower. The extra moisture will dilute and weaken the spray. Don't spray in a hot sun if it can be avoided.

Label but don't forget thoroughness and responsibility. A poor spraying is a waste both of labour and materials.

Preparing for a Drought

(By L. A. ELMER, Assistant Agricultural Officer)

DEVELOPING NEW LAND

The long period of dry weather already experienced here has made a number of farmers aware of the need for a plan for a dry season before the first dry season begins to be felt.

- (1) To ensure that livestock shall suffer as little as possible, the following measures should be taken during the dry season: (a) Normal maintenance of stock should be continued. (b) Extra attention should be given to the feeding of stock. (c) Extra attention should be given to the watering of stock. (d) Extra attention should be given to the sheltering of stock.

Grass

Grass should be protected by spraying with 100 parts of D.D.T. in 100 parts of water. The best time to do this is in the early part of the season. A few shillings spent in water spraying will save many shillings in the loss of stock.

Maize stores as a valuable feed

Maize stores as a valuable feed. The best time to do this is in the early part of the season. A few shillings spent in water spraying will save many shillings in the loss of stock.

Straws

The straw of every grain crop will be a valuable feed for stock. It should be stored in a dry place and used as soon as possible.

STUMPING LAND

A farmer who ordinarily requires 7 to 8 days per acre for stumping reckons that he saves from 1.15 to 2 days per acre by stumping the land with a long rope.

Miscellaneous Fodders

There are a number of wholesome plants which may be available in small quantities to feed stock. These include: (a) ... (b) ... (c) ...

PREPARING LAND FOR BREAKING

An economical method of tilting up holes is as follows: After stumping and clearing the land is marked out for stumping and the lines where the plough is to work are marked.

Napier Fodder

All old stades of Napier Fodder should be cut and dried. The best time to do this is in the early part of the season.

Sugar Cane

This is an excellent feed, much more so than any other. It should be planted now to serve as a reserve for the dry season.

Sunflowers

Sunflowers are extremely useful, as the dried seeds are a good feed for stock. They should be planted now to serve as a reserve for the dry season.
