TRIPOLITANIA

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1942

German propaganda, in finding the greatest difficulty in breaking to the German people the news of the rout of Rommel. Just as this week they blantly told their public that the Russians had been heavily defeated at a place which for many months has been the scene of the Russian lines, giving exact details of number of guns, tanks, etc., captured or destroyed, so in respect of Tripolitania, press and radio have been busy with reports of the repulse of the British Eighth Army. Piece against piece, was manufactured in Berlin for the African front, heavy British losses were invented and added the important fact that Rommel had abandoned El Agheila was omitted. In Germany—and more important in occupied Europe—the official propagandists are increasingly concerned with the maintenance of the German people's prestige now that the Axis have lost the offensive on all fronts.

Until we know the extent of the success which resulted from the capture of deserted, so in respect of Tripolitania, press and radio have been busy with reports of the repulse of the British Eighth Army. Piece against piece, was manufactured in Berlin for the African front, heavy British losses were invented and added the important fact that Rommel had abandoned El Agheila was omitted. In Germany—and more important in occupied Europe—the official propagandists are increasingly concerned with the maintenance of the German people's prestige now that the Axis have lost the offensive on all fronts.

While the Axis bridgehead in North Africa remains, the United States will be directed to control of the Mediterranean by the longer range by any device, including direct control of the victory of the Eighth Army to better the chances still left to the enemy to strengthen their position in the vital region of Tunisia where alone the fate of the Mediterranean will be decided.

AFRICA

MONDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1942

Major General Dan Pienaar whose tragic death is announced, was more than a fine soldier. He was a symbol of the spirit of South Africa. There is something of exceptional value to the British Commonwealth at this time of trial in the fact that a simple minded soldier with simple purpose came from the Free State to fight beside the rest in this battle for freedom. Mistakes or misunderstandings were made no place in his outlook. He had no patience with those who queried why South Africa should be in the war. Pienaar was the first place in South Africa and close upon that he was a soldier who loved his profession and all that it meant and entailed. Fighting anywhere came as a second nature to him but above all fighting in the African bush brought out all his talents, the nimbleness of brain and body that were his.

Yet in all these things, in the great struggle in which he had already played so distinguished a part, General Dan Pienaar was far as the typical South African rather than merely the brilliant individual. He had all the qualities that South Africans have brought in such generous measure to the aid of the Commonwealth and particularly to the cause of the freedom of Africa. His Afrikaander simplicity and directness, his impatience with the inelastic system and bureaucracy, his open and unbounded mind, are the contributions which all typical South Africans have made to the common pool of the characteristics of the nations of Commonwealth. Nor was he really disgraced by his death. He was a hero of the highest order in other people's eyes. The young South African nation has had a great example in his life to follow. His death was a working example of the problem of sacrifice to an appreciation of which Nature has to offer to every man. It is a lesson which all Africa is known to all who have followed the sons of South Africa.

PRODUCTION AND SUPPLY COUNCIL

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1942

Last week the details of the reconstruction of the East Africa Development and Supply Council were made public. The reconstructed Council is a highly comprehensive body. It can fairly be said today that the Council has not only set up a plan for the reconstruction of the East Africa Development and Supply Council, but it has also set up a plan for the reconstruction of the East Africa Development and Supply Council.

It will have been noticed, also, that Agriculture has been divided into two sections, each with a Director, and that the Director of Agriculture is to be a member of the Council. It is a very important body which will direct the Executive Board of Agriculture. The Executive Board will have its own authority to apply the powers of the Executive Board to the various members who are named "Directors".

Whatever difficulties—and they may be—made the idea of this Council must be made to work. It is a very important body which will direct the Executive Board of Agriculture. The Executive Board will have its own authority to apply the powers of the Executive Board to the various members who are named "Directors".

And finally though it is regrettable that the occasion is a funeral, the members of the Council particularly those who have taken measure up to their job will be remembered. It is a very important body which will direct the Executive Board of Agriculture. The Executive Board will have its own authority to apply the powers of the Executive Board to the various members who are named "Directors".

still the only standards by which members will continue to hold public opinion. It should be true that if they then get out and make room for somebody else.

A VANISHED EMPIRE

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1942

When Rommel decided to abandon El Agheila, he turned his back finally on Egypt and the dream Hitler and his strategists had had to adapt to the new situation. It was the beginning of a vast pioneer movement through southern Russia and the Caucasus in the east and along the African shore of the Mediterranean in the west. The aim of the plan was to crush the empire of our world, connecting the Suez Canal, and with the Japanese, threatening India, bringing about the final collapse of the great empires of the world which has always stood in the way of German domination of the world. Whether the war was instigated by ambition or by a desire for a cause, Nazi Dictator, the aim is always the same: the destruction of the British Empire and all that it stands for. To understand this, we must remember that there is born in the German mind a desire to see the world a one, a one, a one. He suffers from a psychological complex through the knowledge that his desire is frustrated by the British Empire, which is the only Empire across the path to unchallenged world superiority.

The removal of that obstacle was the main purpose of the war. The world was to be a one, a one, a one. He suffers from a psychological complex through the knowledge that his desire is frustrated by the British Empire, which is the only Empire across the path to unchallenged world superiority.

FACTORIES IN TOWN

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1942

We view with some concern the attitude of the Local Government Authority of Nairobi to the wartime development which has brought into being a number of small manufacturing businesses in premises which at least in some cases are apparently called "factories" merely by courtesy. Approval was given of a recent shunting to a number of recommendations made by the Committees the effect of which is to permit, "in a wartime measure," the employment of premises in residential and localised factories, have come into being in Nairobi, and it is most probable that those intended will continue to seek sanction for some other premises.

Experience is accumulating from every front discussion that a not considerable number of localised factories, have come into being in Nairobi, and it is most probable that those intended will continue to seek sanction for some other premises.

Measles in Relation To Beef Production

A MEMORANDUM ADOPTED BY THE STOCKOWNERS' ASSOCIATION

THE incidence of cattle measles in South Africa has during the past few years assumed a considerable importance to the cattle industry. So widespread has it become that there can be no longer any doubt of its extent in the borders of Eastern Africa, and farmers must face the fact that they are producing for a market which in the past has been almost entirely free of the disease.

The importance of the disease to the cattle industry is therefore essential to the development of the beef industry in this country. It is of the nature of attaining it with the knowledge of the disease, which has been found to be a variety by his own efforts, perhaps himself against measles have been a completely new factor.

The most important of these is the nature of the causal agent, viz. V. rubeola. The importance of this virus is that it is a very contagious disease, and it is of the nature of attaining it with the knowledge of the disease, which has been found to be a variety by his own efforts, perhaps himself against measles have been a completely new factor.

Food is a munition of war. It has to go further. The most has to be made of it. Electricity helps, for electric cooking is without doubt the most efficient and economical method. Heat cooked electrically retains more nourishment, loses less weight. The valuable minerals, vitamins and the vitamins content of vegetables are preserved. There's another important advantage too, electric cooking means less labour, less worry. That counts a lot in wartime.

A CLASSIC THIRST

ANTAEUS, according to the poets of antiquity, was sentenced in the infernal regions to drink a river, but every time he bent his head to drink, the water receded beyond his reach. Hence, of course, the word 'antiaesthetic'.

In these enlightened days, however, only cause and gentlemen who won't read Homer are content to make their thirst. Good citizens drink Rose's Lime Juice, the classic quencher of thirst. Refresh your glowing anatomy with fresh lime juice in all glasses surging with soda and tinkling with ice—in many coloured cocktails of delectable handicraft—in that grand old stand-by, the Ginlet.

Rose's is a pure lime juice and nothing else. Just the juice of the lime. Like all good juices in this world it costs just a little extra—but the wise man knows better days to tamalise his palate with some inferior concoction for the sake of a couple of coppers.

CONTROL OF IMPORTS

Business houses in East Africa are entering upon a period of acute difficulty. Stocks are not very plentiful or in great variety and some lines which have been plentiful hitherto are now scarce. It will, in future, not be so readily obtainable owing to the greater concentration of restrictions in the United Kingdom and other countries. The situation is particularly acute in South Africa, where the turnover to war industry is rapidly increasing and the supply of imported goods available for general consumption is being cut down even a few months ago. The responsibilities resting upon the Importers' Controller will become more onerous than hitherto, and the operation of the system of granting import licences to every business house in East Africa is being reviewed.

We make the point not because in charge of the far-reaching restrictions on imports, but because of the unimpaired of the interests in the past—the contrary—but because of the fact that this has come to our notice in a report submitted to the Controller of the ramifications of a system which has been in operation since the war. The fact is, in some cases, that the licence has been issued to a person who is not a resident of the State of Africa to Kenya.

We do not propose to argue whether importing goods is a justifiable or not, what does interest us, as we believe it will interest every one, is that every organisation representing the business community that the authorities have granted the licence to a firm which is not a resident of the State of Africa, and that the licence is issued to a firm which is not a resident of the State of Africa, and that the licence is issued to a firm which is not a resident of the State of Africa.

It is not necessary to state that the licence is issued to a firm which is not a resident of the State of Africa, and that the licence is issued to a firm which is not a resident of the State of Africa, and that the licence is issued to a firm which is not a resident of the State of Africa.

Department's Big Task

United States Washington, D.C. - The Department of the Interior, under the leadership of Secretary Harold I. Smith, is engaged in a major task of maintaining internal security in the United States. The department has been instructed to investigate and report on all activities which might be inimical to the national defense. This includes the activities of subversive organizations, espionage, and sabotage. The department has been authorized to conduct extensive investigations and to take appropriate action against those who are found to be guilty of such activities.

(2) The prohibition of the disclosure of information which might be injurious to the national defense. (3) The prohibition of the disclosure of information which might be injurious to the national defense.

On a less spectacular but no less important level has been the department's work in investigating for purposes thousands of facts of land, an investigation of the legal work in connection with the activities of the department. This includes the investigation of the activities of the department in connection with the activities of the department.

At Harlem, in South Kentucky and at the River, River seven miles north of Harlem, there were several periods of violence. The violence was caused by the activities of the department in connection with the activities of the department.

When Kavirondo Was A Desert

(By Archdeacon W. E. Owen)

THE Kavirondo country has been a desert for many years. The land is now a lush green plain, but it was once a barren wasteland. The people who lived there were nomadic and survived by hunting and gathering. The land was so dry that even the hardiest of animals could not survive. The people who lived there were nomadic and survived by hunting and gathering.

At various localities round the coast and north shores of the lake there are well developed river banks and the remains of old walled-in lake basins. They occur at heights of 150, 160, 75, 90 and 250 feet above present day lake level. All four of these basins are in the eastern base of the hills. The basins are well developed and the remains of old walled-in lake basins. They occur at heights of 150, 160, 75, 90 and 250 feet above present day lake level.

What a happy hunting ground the Kavirondo country would be for the hunter and gatherer. The land is now a lush green plain, but it was once a barren wasteland. The people who lived there were nomadic and survived by hunting and gathering. The land was so dry that even the hardiest of animals could not survive.
