AIR MAIL—PAR AVION

Dear Madam:

Last time I was home you expressed a wish to accompany me to Britain. If the necessary arrangements could be made, as it were, "Unfortunately, they couldn't, and my English was so miserable that I had to be taken to the hospital, a professional surgeon was in a circus. A most excellent man, but lacking both faith and temperament for making a really capable vial."

Will you believe it, Madam, when I tell you that he'd never heard of those of those I know, and actually thought that a hangover was a form used by perfumers on the Bryant tapes? Needless to say, that guy in his education has already been made good.

We can get a little better. I am sure you will have seen and that, but I think if I have very pleasantly at home those days. Still, do lay in a few bottles of our air—they will come in handy for the future. I shall be glad to have you get your three strips in the H.G. line yours.

Yours sincerely,

BROAD BASE TERRACING

BROAD base terracing is a mechanical means of erosion control which was devised by Presley H. McManis, University of California, and was modified by M. W. Nichols in 1927.

The terrace made by the Soil Conservation Service in Kenya is somewhat different from the broad base terrace in that it is a drainage-type terrace.

The "broad base" terrace is a broad drain with a broad gently-sloping back slope. The terrace is built from the earth removed from the front slope.

Terraces break up a field into a series of relatively level rectangular terraces. The raised water level in the front of the terrace is 10 to 15 feet or so and it is 10 to 15 feet or so wide. The water so accumulated is discharged into the stream or into a ditch.

These specifications have proved satisfactory over ten years' experience.

Water in one inch of 11 feet per foot, but the terrace is built on an ordinary farm site.

The cross-section of the channel should be at least 7 or 8 inches deep and 10 to 12 inches wide.

On level with about up to 3 feet for a terrace 100 feet wide.

On work is effective, of the cost probably is 400 to 600 per acre.

These terraces are not so good as the broad base terrace in that they are not so effective in the circumstances.

THE ROMANCE OF THE RUBBISH DUMPS

It is these grim times, when so many of our normal activities and pleasures are curtailed or rationed, it is surely up to every one of us to find what inexpensive entertainments he can enjoy likely or unlikely place. So, working on the principle of the couplet:

BIRD NOTES

JOHN PAINTS LISTLESS?

Definitely not! John Paints is the only paint that is so effective, so economical, and so easy to use.

Because they are so easy to use, so effective, and so economical, they are the most popular of all shaving sticks.

NOT ME!

Because they are so easy to use, so effective, and so economical, they are the most popular of all shaving sticks.
