SAURDAY ESSAY

Osbert tries double-talk

"Rat-a-tat-tat," spluttered the orchid, Obert, pointing to a wraith, imitation Tommy-gun over the garden fence...

"Not at all they were—", he replied, smiling, according to Contrite Brezheves. Obert spat out an unripe Cape gooseberry in disgust...

"Thanks for nothing"—Dobek and Co would ask for a pension? Mark yer, Obert whispered from the corner of his beak...

"Not to be Kofian?" Obert asked. "Nuthin' ter you Potadam nor Yalla, yer all these sickle anti-American propagander yer might mention out of malice aforethought..."

"How do you mean?" Obert asked. "The trouble we do wis Americanisation. This 'as nuthin' ter do wis American, though I see the courages, see the wicked imperialists were up to their usual mischief..."

"That seems rather far-fetched for one the double-talk of 1968?" Obert asked. "Not on yer Nelly, nor fer Neupack, neither..."

A WEEKEND LOOK AT THE CULTURAL SCENE

Problems when you haven't got the men

PETER H. MACDONALD writes his 'Behind the Scenes' column

One of the frequent causes of crisis in newspaper offices is the story which is about to happen right now — or, at least, in five minutes ago — which is not yet available to investigate it.

It has been suggested that chief reporters and news editors, who are supposed to be able to produce reports and photographs as they are taken part of the news, should be given the right to go down to the press grave themselves to investigate it.

ART AND EMOTION

Mughali Mulu, 25, who has a career exhibition at the Paa-Paa gallery, was trained in Makindu School of Art, and is an art teacher at Kitale High School.

Local scenes and activities, human, animal and bird form the basis of his inspiration, and figures, animals, stills, landscapes and traditional motifs his subjects.

His basic interest is in colour and his increasing interest in the pattern and in the 'abstract' form can be observed in the art of his painting. It is very interesting to see the artist's palette in his studio.

Indian team arrives full of confidence

Standard Correspondent
A confident contingent of retaining the Olympic hockey gold medal in Mexico City in October. Pakistan, India, and Hungary. The Indian team will be the strongest in the world, they are sure to fight hard to retain their title.

Prithvi Singh said he thought that Pakistan, India and Hungary were the main contenders for the early rounds, but he was sure they were all capable of a great performance.

Yesterday the Indian Government announced that the team will be led by the late Mr. P. V. Narasimha Murthy, former Union Minister for Sports and Recreation, and will be accompanied by a manager, coach, and a doctor.

The U.I.A.F. President N. J. van der Stoep, who is also the Indian team's manager, said that the Indian team will be the strongest in the world.

'Window-dressing' warning to E.A. industry

Standard Staff Reporter
Delegates from the three East African countries gathered at University College, Nairobi, for the start of a 10-day week-long conference on training sponsored by the East African Management Foundation.

The conference was opened by the foundation's president and director, Mr. J. H. K. Gakko, who stressed the need for a general manager for the East African States and the need for a general manager for the East African States and the need for a general manager for the East African States.

Today a speaker from the East African Management Foundation, Mr. M. R. H. Hutton, will give a lecture on supervising building and Uganda's Minister for Education and Industry, Mr. W. Kalena, will address delegates in the afternoon.

Other lectures scheduled cover operating training, clerical training and Training the Training Officer. Dr. K. N. K. is scheduled to speak on the need for training in the East African States.

Opening the conference, Mr. B. K. N. K. stressed a warning on the local industry policy in both the public and private sectors of the three countries.

We must not allow ourselves to be lulled into a false sense of security, he told delegates. A high level of production must be accompanied by responsibility, and the industry must be able to stand up to the test of a free market.

No attempt to break free from Britain says Mr. Odinga

Mr. Odinga, who was speaking during the colonial debate on the Budget, recalled that the Minister, Mr. Gabor, had told the House that the Budget was not as good as it might have been because of the dock strike in Britain, devaluation of Sterling and the loss of Kenya's economy as a result of the war.

It was something to be regretted, that any such defect in the British economy should also affect Kenya. # Israeli attacks main problem of Arab League

How to avert more Israeli armed strikes across the Middle East ceasefire lines is the question dominating the opening of the Arab League's 56th regular session in Cairo, in a five-day session which opened yesterday.

Some delegates believe that a new attack by Israeli commandos has been averted. There have been a string of Arab reports suggesting that Israel is preparing for a massive strike against Jordan or Egypt, or both.

Jordan's Foreign Minister, Mr. Abdul Munem Rifaa, said yesterday on Sunday night that the league's political objectives had gone top priority to recent Israeli "brashes of aggression" in its opening session behind closed doors.

During the day's discussions, Mr. Rifaa, who is chairman of the current session, appealed for Arab unity, the plan and the league is disposed to try to establish cooperation and understanding between Arab countries.

The secretary-general, Mr. Hafez Wahba, said that the league is necessary to meet Israel's allegedly aggressive intentions resulting from closed discussions and a premature closing of the opening session, informed sources said.

They said many delegates had issued a declaration to Mr. Rifaa, a United States delegate, Mr. El Sabbah, Mr. El Sabbah, that before working out plans to deal with Israel the Arab League must first and differences among themselves.

Mr. Rifaa addressed the session and later delegates from Jordan, Morocco, Lebanon, Sudan, Libya and South Yemen met Mr. Sabbah privately to clear the air before the talks resumed yesterday.

Sources said Mr. Sabbah's speech would open a proposal for the secretary-general's delegates from Arab states to consider, based on a debate on Sunday at which Israel also had indicated the recent Israeli attack against the Jordanian border. The Arab League is expected to meet in Israel next week.

The Arab League is expected to meet in Israel next week. The Israeli cabinet agreed on the issue — which critics and other observers — after weekend consultations with the prime minister, Mr. Eshkol, the Foreign Minister, Mr. Eban, and the Defense Minister, Gen. Dayan.

The Security Council will be asked to consider the Egyptian proposal. The Security Council in the West Bank area, a spokesman said.

The committee's action on the Arab League is expected to be a part of an Israeli pact by a spokesman of the Foreign Ministry, Mr. Eshkol, said that the Egyptian pact was a third kidnapped.

chief executive officer, Lord-Gen. Ben-Gurion, the U.S.A.R. forces in the Golan Heights, the Israeli side of the canal, was found by U.S. military observers, as well as Israeli authorities, indicating that an ambush party came from the Egyptian-held side of the canal, and the implications in the Israeli side that the attackers were irregulars.

Some observers in Jerusalem believe Israel wants to get involved in a U.S. ruling the issue of responsibility of countries which are parties to the ceasefire agreement for military actions by irregulars or guerrilla operating from their territory.

The Israeli decision to go to the U.S. was regarded as unusual because of repeated Israeli contentions in recent months that the Soviet were anti that composition of the council, because of its taking any action unfavorable to the Arab League.

The move also follows a series of reports from Arab countries alleging that Israel is preparing for a massive strike against Arab countries.

At the United Nations the Israeli Ambassador, Mr. Harari, notified the Security Council president, Mr. George Jaganoff, of Israel's decision to call for an urgent council meeting.

Civilians die under new Communist bombardment

Twenty-two civilians were killed and 45 wounded when Communist artillery squads set off a Russian-made 122mm shell bursting for the first time into the heart of Danang in U.S. naval installations.

A military spokesman said in Saigon yesterday: One Government soldier was also killed and an American sergeant wounded.

Some of the rockets exploded in independence housing in the main street of Danang where several American billets and compounds are located among the shops and private houses.

The heavy rockets, which have a range of 6 to 8 miles, indicated that the artillery had managed to get close to Danang, a distance of about 10 miles that never before.

Locally, they hit the airbase, where a South Vietnamese military spokesman said the casualty list was the heaviest ever caused in Danang by rockets. At least two bombs were destroyed and damaged in the naval installations, he described as "light."

Two Vietcong commando platoons attacked the main military installation, a "pacification" unit defeating a Government battalion of 220 men east of Danang on Sunday night.

The attacks were reportedly repelled but their losses were heavy.

On Feb. 1, the former imperial capital of Hue, occupied by the Vietcong, was captured by a force of 1,000 men, including a group of 12mm mortar bombs and 50,000 rounds of small arms ammunition.

South Vietnamese positions in the Danang area 25 or 30 miles south of Danang were also bombarded overnight following fighting that had prevailed since the plant to the south of the base throughout the weekend.

The Danang positions took about 100 120mm shells early yesterday. One civilian was injured. Government troops, it was claimed,

Many homeless as flooded city mops up

Hundreds of workers and residents were displaced by rain left by the week's flooding. The military spokesman said that the city had been hit by a heavy rain in three hours.

At least 100 people were displaced by the flooding, which swamped the city on Sunday, making hundreds of the 275,000 population homeless and turning many into floating rafts.

More than 500 people were treated for illness.

The death toll was expected to rise as police, with Army rescue trucks and amphibious vehicles, searched for bodies in flood waters in the South African city's population and property damage.

Hundreds were left homeless, and some damage ran to hundreds of thousands of pounds, police said.

Among the dead were a father and his nine-year-old daughter, caught in an avalanche of water rushing down a street. The force of the water swept them beneath a parked car, where they were trapped and drowned.

Police, firemen and rescue workers battled their way yesterday through roads that had become rivers of mud, littered with overturned cars and uprooted trees.

The authorities called in the Army and civil defence to reinforce the rescue teams. The Negro quarter of the town was completely surrounded by flood water.

The town hospital itself was completely surrounded for several hours by flood waters, and ambulances brought injured in more than 100 cases.

Some 100 houses and factories were flooded out and many evacuated.

13 FACE RACE DEATHS CHARGE

Seven Negroes and six Whites were charged with murder yesterday following a 30-minute gun battle between Negroes and Whites near Burre, Eastern Kentucky, which left one White and one Negro dead.

Sheriff's officers said five other men were injured in the shooting incident, which broke out in three carloads of Negroes, including a Right-wing organization's MP.

The seven Negroes were charged with the death of the White man near Burre, Eastern Kentucky, which left one White and one Negro dead.

Union threat Premier's plan STRIKE LIKELY

Britain's trade union leaders started for their 10th birthday congress in Liverpool yesterday in a mood that gives the Prime Minister, Mr. Wilson, no cause for celebration.

One thousand delegates representing nine million workers at the annual Trade Union Congress have split on two sides over pay and strike issues that could lead to the five-day workers' action.

If they do, it would be the first time since 1948 that the TUC has called for a general strike.

Mr. Wilson's government has a narrow margin of support in the House of Commons. It is expected to be a test of the government's strength.

14,000 KILLED IN QUAKES IN IRAN

The deadliest quake in Iran's disaster earthquake zone in over 14,000 lives were lost in the recent north-east of the country.

The figures told a grim tale. At Kahriz, epicentre of the first major quake, which struck three days ago, 10,000 people were killed and 14,000 injured.

The second quake, which struck three days ago, killed 4,000 people and injured 14,000.

Russia 'holding back' Czechoslovak economy'

The Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia has prevented and will continue to prevent the country's leaders from carrying out hoped-for economic reforms, a leading economist staying in Vienna said yesterday.

Well before the intervention, the Soviet Union was taking steps to develop the Czechoslovak economy, but he believed that this "would not be possible" under the new Communist regime.

While the East German economy is "poorly adjusted," Czechoslovakia has been suffering, he added, because of the fact that people capable of economic planning should have been held in the heavy industry had been planned and carried out.

COFFEE QUOTAS SOON

Annual export quotas for 42 coffee-producing countries in the world were established in London late yesterday.

The quotas were set by the International Coffee Council, which was formed by the 42 countries at a meeting in London last week.

The council will probably fix the world quotas for coffee exports in the next few weeks, according to observers.

This is the generally expected result of the agreement, which has been going on since January 1963. The council's main task is to regulate the coffee market, which has been suffering from a surplus since 1961.

The council will also be responsible for the distribution of coffee quotas among the 42 countries.

Kenya tea sales to Britain double

Sales of tea and maize from Kenya to Britain during the first seven months of this year totalled 29,700,000 lbs, worth £15,000,000, compared with 14,400,000 lbs worth £8,200,000 in the same period last year.

This shows an increase in the value of tea exports of 100 per cent, and an increase in the value of maize exports of 50 per cent.

The increase in tea exports is due to a combination of factors, including a rise in the price of tea in Britain and a decline in the price of tea in other markets.

The increase in maize exports is due to a combination of factors, including a rise in the price of maize in Britain and a decline in the price of maize in other markets.

African Bank leaders call on Mr. Kenyatta

President Kenyatta invited the president of the African Development Bank, Mr. H. H. Roberts, to visit Kenya in the near future.

The bank's president, Mr. Roberts, is expected to arrive in Nairobi in the next few days.

Mr. Roberts is a member of the World Bank and has been instrumental in the development of the African Development Bank.

The bank's main objective is to provide financial assistance to African countries for the development of their economies.

The great dictators

At some point between midnight and 2 a.m. on July 15 last year, a pale, bearded man of 50 rose from his desk on the third floor of a house in the Avenue d'Armenie, in Paris, and systematically tore up a stack of papers conservatively valued at £200,000.

The reasons for the spectacular destruction of the entire collection which Yves Saint Laurent had intended to unveil three weeks later, should be marked, learned and inwardly digested by every woman who follows fashion as a hobby by every man who says he likes to do so.

Already the battle lines have been drawn. On one side are trendsetters like Saint Laurent — who tore up his collection — and on the other, a host of lesser lights who respect classic lines. Merit is given to Mary Quant, Jean Muir and John Bates and Brian Nelson.

Their creed is that fashion, like fresh excitement, is a gift that is always cast. There market the ready-made consumer and the boutique, and they say, "It is really the future of fashion."

Kept against them are the lack of the same dynamic acc-

ture in an traditionally low-key form. Things are moving fast now, says Saint Laurent, and this is not to be denied in the way he and where the philosophy of the millennium. If Morgan, if you have to ask the price, you obviously can't afford it, it is very much in evidence.

The traditionalists — who are still by far the most powerful force in couture today — believe that good fashion is a revolution. You should certainly be able to notice fashion changing, says Pierre Balmain, chairman of the traditionalists. "Smart women don't want to see their wardrobe every six months."

To which the young designers reply, that boutique fever has sounded the death knell of conventional fashion. They are not in a hurry to change, says Pierre Balmain, chairman of the traditionalists. "Smart women don't want to see their wardrobe every six months."

The elite of the fashion world will gather soon in Europe's capitals for the winter collections. Between them, they will decide what millions of women will wear later this year. But which of them are the real lords of the fashion jungle? Who most influences the ordinary woman's choice of clothes? GILLIAN FRANKS has gone behind the glittering facade of the salons to find the answer. Her two-part report is a brilliant analysis of the machinery that transforms a drawing-board sketch into a best-seller.

Yes, St. Laurent, the pre-emptive "enfant terrible" of the Paris salons and the little-known face behind a thousand designers.

What Laurent did last year would have been the head of three or four years ago.

Today's trendsetters build collections but, unlike the traditionalists, they are not particularly interested in acquiring private clients. A "consultant" contract from a major "ready-to-wear" manufacturer may not be romantic but the fee can keep a salon going for a year.

"This must be the only boutique," says a store executive, "where, if you make less than £200,000 a year, you're in big trouble."

The real women who set the trends are no longer to be found among pack-like in their mirrored aisles. They keep away from each other, particularly as collection-time approaches. They carry enormous money — none of the top two dozen designers earns less than £700,000 a year — and yet they are rarely seen spending it.

It is the new wave of fashion dictators who come out the traditional way through the show-room. Couturiers who to contemporary fashion, what Dior was, for example, will spend at least three times that amount, including £100 on footers.

It takes 30 or 40 hours of work to produce a prototype garment and then the seamstress must even scrap the entire design.

When does their inspiration come? In the nature of the matter, particularly painting and sculpture. But usually the shape of a dress is dictated to a large extent by the fabric in which it is made.

Work normally starts about four months before the public showing. But before a single line of design is sketched up to 100 fabric samples will be cut, the sales and perhaps 10,000 copies will be spread over by the designer, and his assistants.

At a modernized salon, for instance, a staff of 40 spend their entire working day ordering, and obtaining, materials and trimmings.

After about two months the first fittings are made. By the time the salon is working at full pressure, a small house will have a

Pilot Turid joins an airline

Turid Wieride, tall, blonde and attractive, has been accepted as a pilot candidate by Scandinavian Airlines.

She is believed to be the first woman in the Western world to start pilot training for a major airline. All told, S.A.S. has accepted 54 candidates for pilot training during the coming fall and winter.

Fifty-three of them are men. Turid Wieride, the exception, has during the summer passed preliminary tests on equal terms with her male colleagues.

She will start a three-month basic training course in October. This will be followed by a course adjusted to aircraft type, instrument and flight training. The S.A.S. training programme this year is mainly for three pilots on DC-3 jetliners.

Turid, 36, has been flying Otter airplanes since 1960 for Widerøe Airways, a domestic Norwegian carrier company founded by her father, Viggo Wieride, a pioneer of Norwegian aviation. She was appointed captain early this year and has lately flown the airline's new Twin Otter aircraft.

Wrinkles are really "riverbeds" of dry cells caused by plasma collisions. The water carriers of the skin drying out through the pores cause lines and the drying effect of exposure to wind and weather. To bring life and new vitality to your skin and prevent wrinkles-dryness comes a skin cream. This cream contains a special ingredient which will instantly give your skin depth and give your complexion a glowing youthfulness.

Marriage law uniformity

A unique event occurred in Nairobi yesterday when President Kenyatta signed the monumental reports of the Commission on Marriage and Divorce, which deal with the status of married women and the other on the Law of Succession.

These reports, which have been over found the central theme of encouraging to women uniformity with out any discrimination in terms of race, tribe or religion. The Commission also recommends that polygamy should be abolished outright.

Wide discussion and also pay regard to existing laws. The commission resolves to take steps into practice by making a series of proposals beginning with the abolition of polygamy which is undesirable and any previous legislation has been repealed. Social and economic forces will not be taken into account but the commission will disregard protogamy of the Commission. It also recommends that polygamy should be abolished outright.

Forms of marriage, it is pointed out, have varied in the past. At present, civil, religious, or Islamic form of marriage is recognized. The Commission considers that the African conception of marriage and should continue to be a unitary concept.

The Commission comes to a conclusion that polygamy is not considering in the chairman's words, "that there is a need for equality between men and women which is not being achieved."

There is also a need for equality between men and women which is not being achieved. The Commission comes to a conclusion that polygamy is not considering in the chairman's words, "that there is a need for equality between men and women which is not being achieved."

When the Attorney-General, Mr. Nyrop, formed the Commission, many people threw up their hands in wonderment, some in despair, saying it would be impossible to arrive at any uniformity in the face of so many complexities and contradictions among customary practices, mixed laws and religious convictions. As both the President and Mr. Nyrop showed, existing laws on marriage are a patchwork quilt composed of fragments taken from English, law (therefore Christian, Indian, Kikuyu and Hindu).

The reports provide the possibility of attaining uniformity, although the recommendations are frequently qualified by the inevitability of gradualness. Because of this underlying principle controlling the timing of changes and the domestic family life and social behaviour to comply with modern standards, nothing in the proposals should deeply offend susceptibilities of race or religion.

Explanatory statements given by the commission chairman on marriage and divorce, which are strikingly similar introductory passages. Mr. Justice Jeyaretnam said: "The aim was to reform and simplify the law and, as far as possible, to make it the same for everyone, adopting as underlying principle of gradualness."

The government will study the recommendations, which do not immediately sweep away existing laws, and presently a Sessional Paper will be published expressing the government's interest, as individuals or organizations, in any proposals. The Commission also found it difficult to confirm the details of findings, because they will be subject to public opinion. Nothing but confusion will result from the Commission's findings, which are not only partly understood.

There is also a need for equality between men and women which is not being achieved. The Commission comes to a conclusion that polygamy is not considering in the chairman's words, "that there is a need for equality between men and women which is not being achieved."

Emphasis on practicality

The opening of the Business Efficiency Exhibition today by the Minister for Labour is a reminder of the long tradition of the Ministry of Training and Advisory Services in promoting improved standards and practices in Kenya.

The Exhibition is organized by the Centre in consultation with the Office of Management and Methods. A similar Exhibition was held last year, when the first of the Centre was announced at a press conference.

The results of the first of the Centre participants and exhibitors alike were so satisfactory that it was decided to have a second event.

It is not only the Exhibition but the Centre participants who are the main focus of the exhibition. It is in this regard that the Centre is to be commended.

The growth of interest in improved office organization and management is a natural development of the tremendous increase in productivity in industry which was brought about by systematic methods, improvement of machinery, new available but increasing office productivity, their value can only be fully explained by a corresponding improvement in management practices.

An office which has previously only used manual methods, is now being transformed into a modern office. The Office of Management and Methods is now a familiar figure in the offices of many companies and there is no doubt that the application of the O & M approach to the office has produced tremendous savings of money and time (and especially variety requires changes in both the philosophy and procedures of management. Unless these changes are made, the office will not be able to meet the challenges of the future. It is not only the philosophy and procedures of management that are being changed, but also the methods of work. It is not only the methods of work that are being changed, but also the procedures that need to be adopted. It is not only the procedures that need to be adopted, but also the methods of work that need to be changed.

There is a saying among O & M men that "there is always a better method" which implies that the search for methods is never-ending. What may appear to be the best method today may be superseded tomorrow in 12 months time.

But unless a close and honest relationship is maintained between the Office Manager or O & M man, a Company may continue to operate with old and wasteful methods which means that potential profits are being poured down the drain.

The Office Organization and Management Course given at the Centre is divided into three parts. The first part is devoted to the theory of office management. The second part is devoted to the practical aspects of office management. The third part is devoted to the latest trends in office management.

The various sessions are designed to play their maximum possible part in the development of the office manager. The sessions are designed to play their maximum possible part in the development of the office manager. During the period the participants also select a project to be carried out during the exhibition. They return to their offices to carry out the project. They return to their offices to carry out the project. They return to their offices to carry out the project.

The uses of microfilm

Save 20% of your copying costs

Did you know that a copier working on a fixed cost-per-copy is uneconomic in most offices?
That you can probably save 20% of your copying costs by installing a Kodak Copier?
That a Kodak Copier can make 5 dry copies in one minute. On ordinary paper. At lower cost than any other office copier?

The Kodak Witness Copier is little bigger than an electric typewriter. In fact it sits comfortably on a desk. Yet it makes needle-sharp copies of any documents up to half a yard long.

The Witness can cover an immense field; letters, plans, books and magazine pages, drawings and a whole lot more. The copies it produces are top quality. And the Witness is the only copier which can produce dry, permanent copies on ordinary paper up to 14" x 18". It is silent, simple to use and needs virtually no servicing. You can rent, or buy it. If this sounds intriguing, you should find out more. Phone 24789 (today)!

Reduce it—and protect it

Forty years ago, a clever way to protect and streamline ponderous files was devised through photography. Modern microfilming made it defat.

Back in the 1890s, there had been experiments with microfilming, first by a British scientist and later by a French photographer. But not until 1928, when Kodak installed the first microfilm system, in a New York City bank, did the modern era begin.

Banks had been retaining cancelled cheques with depositors' monthly statements. Thus the banks relinquished their only record, except for the amount of each cheque, which they entered in a ledger. Cancelled cheque frauds became popular, profitable, and almost foolproof. An exact copy of each cheque was needed.

Microfilming, with the speed and accuracy of photography, proved a quick, simple and economical method for banks to protect both themselves and their customers. Some 20,000 cheque-size documents can be recorded on a standard reel of microfilm that fits in the palm of one's hand.

Today, handling the pile of data, particularly from computers, is a major challenge.

Advanced microfilm systems are providing a solution. One microfilm, for example, contains about six computer print-outs on 16mm. microfilm at the rate of two miles of paper per hour.

A push-button Kodak retrieval system makes it possible to find any one of a million microfilm documents in 15 seconds or less. Another push of a button results in a large paper copy of the located document.

Around the world, these and other microfilm systems are giving ready access to every kind of document—from newsprint to engineering drawings, from parts lists to public records.

Microfilming is boosting efficiency not only in business and industry but also in government and education. And as the information explosion continues, the uses for microfilm systems are bound to multiply.

Newspapers and libraries accumulate large quantities of records and use microfilming for preservation of these records. Retrieval is easy and duplicates can be made for multiple distribution at very low cost.

Files for microfilming multiply as the information explosion continues, but a single second the Kodak microfilm recorder 25 feet of computer print-out on one inch of 16 mm. microfilm has more of computer print-out to some 30 centimeters of 16 mm. microfilm.

Process that has replaced the blueprint

By H.G. CROSS

Before the advent of the copying of original drawings was a laborious process for which the only short cut was a drawing set, which consisted of a steel point on a paper of the exact point and of the steel point used to mark and the steel point used to provide marks for pointing up by hand after the original drawing was removed. Later transparent paper was introduced and in the early days after the process was introduced it was used for the same purpose as the original drawing. But the blueprint, used and known throughout the world, was a major part of the drawing process and the original drawing is still behind of the drawing process. The new use is to describe a matter, but in fact the blueprint is such that the original drawing is replaced by the drawing process. A new process has been introduced which may account for the fact that neither in public works nor in print does one hear or read this name but a "blue print" or "blue print" education.

The dawn process is the combination of modern communication. Without the reproduction and dissemination of drawn information in the form of modern manufacturing would be possible. Every form of modern life has seen the light of day in the drawing board.

Without drawing a picture on which this new process could not have been built, no one would read or understand. Even the course of nature, before it is understood, is the subject of drawing and printing is made from the drawing.

The dawn process is based on the combination of two halves of an old process into a new, viable design—a name often applied to the treating process in the uncoloured stage of the process. It is based on a sheet of paper which is coated with a layer of silver and the paper exposed to light. The light is controlled by the drawing process, the chemical process of the drawing process is the subject of drawing and printing is made from the drawing.

Computer journey

Across the Pacific by computer takes about 10 to 30 minutes. A team of scientists at Heriot-Watt College in London have been using an ICL Atlas computer to simulate voyages across the Pacific Ocean.

They are, with others, testing the idea that the Pacific Islands were discovered and settled by people who accidentally drifted across from South America.

They reported the results of the investigation in the recent International Federation for Information Processing conference in Edinburgh.

The programme the computer makes also account in the wind and current systems in the Pacific area, sailing qualities of Polynesian craft and the survival of voyagers.

A simulated trail starts from a particular island and two voyages are started for every day of the present. Drift and current directions and strength are chosen at random and new population centres for the computer then in effect take a look round the horizon to see whether there are any islands present. Drift and current in the raft is considered to have landed and the voyage is finished if the raft continues for another 100 days.

Results, according to the team, seem to show that wind and current patterns in certain areas would have been favourable for drift voyagers across the Pacific. In other words it seems that the distribution of population is a number of pockets which "keep themselves to themselves".

It also seems that the drift of the famous and successful Polynesian voyager—Kaua—was unlikely that raft would drift to Polynesia.

Hard and unusual sailing in the West would be needed in the present. Drift and current conditions. The theory of accidental colonisation of Polynesia by drift voyagers "requires considerable modification".

Jobs for over-40s

New Japanese Government "talent banks" designed to find jobs for those over 40 years of age with technical or administrative skills, are providing a major boost to the country's economy.

The new banks in Tokyo, about 100 in all, are being set up in areas where there are being placed are small and medium-sized enterprises. The banks are being placed in areas where there are being placed are small and medium-sized enterprises.

The Government inaugurated the service in Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya, the new largest cities in Japan. The first four banks in Tokyo are so far successful in placing 15 job-seekers, while about 100 have obtained offers from new employers, according to a Labour Ministry spokesman.

The spokesman said that the 750 job-seekers were aged between 40 and 50 years. About 100 of them were in the compulsory retirement age of 55.

Some of the jobs offered were in the manufacturing sector, while others were in the service sector. The spokesman said that the banks are being placed in areas where there are being placed are small and medium-sized enterprises.

Now I know why they are so good!

By a Nairobi businessman

It is well known to all that the length of the Kenyan coast is approximately 1,000 miles. This fact alone dominates the sky-line — stretching all the way from the Indian Ocean to the Indian Ocean — and includes within its length the most important and the most beautiful of the world's oceans.

Save 20% of your copying costs

Did you know that a copier working on a fixed cost-per-copy is uneconomical in most offices? That you can probably save 20% of your copying costs by installing a Kodak Copier?

That a Kodak Copier can make 5 dry copies in one minute. On ordinary paper. At lower cost than any other office copier?

The Kodak Sigmet Copier costs 1,500. It is no bigger than a typewriter and just as necessary. The Sigmet Copier works on a simple, no-greases process and requires virtually no maintenance! So if you want a first-class, thoroughly reliable copier, come to KODAK. Phone 24799 today!

Rules for best use of mechanisation

By GERRY HUGHES
Personnel Manager,
Boroughs Machines Ltd.

No matter what your reason is for considering mechanisation — a visit to the Business Efficiency Exhibition, disgust at late or inaccurate figures, a salesman's presentation or even a newspaper article — there are some well established rules to follow.

1. Look at your total accounting system, even if you are only thinking of partial mechanisation. Unless you do this now it may cost you more in the long run. The greatest advantage that a mechanist has in his cost returns for figures is that as it prints, it does not forget. The more your knowledge and a steady rate of change can bring a decrease in the large increase in the cost of the machine. Nobody likes to pay too much for the other hand, never makes you pay too little. Generally you have had no little you don't obtain the results you wanted. The most obvious answer is to get the right price that balances economy, accuracy and makes the greatest saving. But this much easier to say than to put into practice.

2. Consider the depth of systems and technical support of a mechanisation system, but the latter is not a fallacy. The worker who is trained to perform the machine's functions correctly. The machine can handle electronic machines generally are more complicated than mechanical equipment.

3. Every potential user must know the number of trained and experienced technical representatives a manufacturer has to offer. Remember, incidentally, that you must budget for a service agreement on whatever machine you buy.

4. Examine the proposed volume critically. In evaluating different proposals from machine companies — and it is surely essential to know that total volume the machine will have to process. Given the volume, it is then necessary to establish how much time each machine will take. In many cases this infilling has a direct bearing on the number of machines required. Nobody can guarantee 100 per cent efficiency, so it is desirable to aim at 85 per cent or more. The lower the cost to operate, the greater the savings from the savings, the breaks, etc.

5. Consider other machine users. Naturally, it is companies representatives will show their own machines in a favourable light. Ask for a list of other firms using a similar sort of machine and then consult with them. For executives are seldom of particular programme when they feel they have an idea over their computers, but most accounts will get a favourable opinion of the back-up support of the machine.

Remember the future. We have seen many installations grow into a mess. Some firms try to practice to discuss new problems. It is a good idea to evaluate why a particular method of doing things is better than the old. It is a good idea to get the full system analysis in the first place. The machine should be the right size of economic machine throughout its life.

6. For instance, an office user printing machine that purchase a machine for one machine. Therefore, the decision to purchase a machine and you are proceeding there are the best. I would like to see a machine that would last for 10 years.

7. Training Operators fall sick and need holidays, so it makes sense to have more than one. While it is sensible to have an experienced member of staff still trained in an office, this may be the machine's function. It is a good idea to get the full system analysis in the first place. The machine should be the right size of economic machine throughout its life.

8. The machine should be well maintained with the regularity of a car. The machine should be delivered in a timely manner.

The traditional methods cannot be used. The machine is different from any other machine. It has many variables and one cannot make a machine that will be held by some members of the staff. The machine should be purchased in January, 1962. Since this time, the machine has been used, amongst other things, for the management and staff training. The machine should be used for the management and staff training. The machine should be used for the management and staff training.

9. The machine should be used for the management and staff training. The machine should be used for the management and staff training. The machine should be used for the management and staff training.

that you have NO work to do. Good installations are over in which the machine is in command. The executive makes a decision, the machine is supervised and the machine is in command. Obviously the supplier wants you to get the most out of the machine as possible, but this requires a good understanding of the machine.

Check your procedures with your auditors. Mechanisation is a new form of control as well as their method of checking. The machine should be used for the management and staff training.

COMPUTERS — 1
Automation in the docks

In view of the many recent advances in electronic and mechanical methods and techniques in the port, transport industry, it is not surprising that the partial completion of a computer system for the London and South Eastern Railway (LSE) is now well advanced. The system is being developed by the LSE's computer department, which is headed by Mr. H. W. Whatford, London.

The programme has been well advanced with the regularity of a car. The machine should be delivered in a timely manner.

Smooth transition

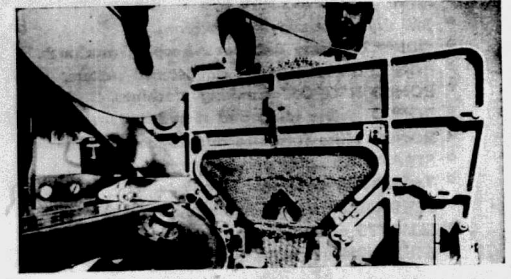

With the urgent need for automation in the docks, the need for skilled and experienced operators is becoming more and more acute.

The operators were trained well that they were capable of undertaking each other's work without difficulty. It was of great value to the company's work. B.A.T. KEVA LIMITED use their Burroughs E-1000 for Financial Accounting, Stock Control, Material Costing, Budget Reports and Payroll

B.A.T. have adopted standard costing and budgetary control systems and considerable savings have been made. Reports show details of variance on yields, prices and costs are supplied to Management regularly.

The E-1000 is programmed to provide regular information to Management of required orders for machinery spare.

B.A.T. Kenval Financial Accounts are maintained on the E-1000 and cheques are written automatically. The Creditors Ledger is being tested, thus ensuring prompt payment to suppliers.

A special programme using the computer abilities of the E-1000 provides prompt analysis of the machine cost summary produced. It is made directly into the machine cost summary from returns of stock and sales throughout Kenya. The output is a management report giving details of value of stocks and sales.

The company's payroll is prepared on the E-1000 providing for automatic calculation of PAYE and reports are prepared, giving detailed information on all deductions.

Progress—but the old order stays

Just a century has passed since Louis Braille first arranged the dots in a way that made it possible to read by touch. The arrangement most likely to facilitate accurate typing resulted in the "standard key-board" as we know it today.

The pattern ensures that in general, no two letters which frequently follow each other are typed with the same finger. With the hand poised over the keyboard, the least finger advanced reaches the letters, typewriters can obviously be produced considerably faster than would otherwise be possible.

But to look a long time to work this out and, although machines for producing letters and other documents mechanically were produced as far back as the 18th century, the present keyboard arrangement was not introduced until 1867.

It first appeared on a machine, invented by a Wisconsin printer, that had taken seven years of secret work to perfect. The inventor chose a New York firm of sewing-machine makers to produce his machine, mainly because the employers included trained mechanics able to manufacture the many small and intricate parts required.

Early inventors had tackled the problem of mechanical writing, and had even patented their devices for producing typewriters, but none of their machines had been built in quantity.

It did not take the very first piece of equipment meeting the name "typewriter" was not designed to speed up letterwriting, but to prevent the forgery of documents. Counterfeiting of public records and legal papers was rife 250 years ago, when Queen Anne was petitioned to sign a patent for a machine which, as she, the queen, claimed, would make such falsification impossible, not readily refuted.

The patent, well preserved, referred to a machine "for impressing letters, words or pictures, on paper or parchment"—a description which, again, fits our conception of a typewriter.

Since then many more ideas for producing "artificial" writing have been originally formed, have been put forward and carried out with varying degrees of success. The forerunners of the modern typewriter, a model marketed in 1873 that raised one step toward the carriage return, were effected by a production process in operation ever since.

Progress in typewriter development over many years was given impetus by military requirements. Many of the early models were made for office use, but were made to alter the feel of the keys, to produce characters on paper for them to go on with their fingers.

When the possibilities of using typewriters for business correspondence were realized, improved compact bodies in efforts to corner the market still model introduced in 1901 sold for as little as five guineas.

Instead of being set on type-bars the characters were carried on a novel device known as the keys were placed "This 'bobbin' idea was advanced by the makers, for different styles of type could be made available simply by changing the spool.

The "bobbin" that made the early model an advancement on differential spacing. It enabled each character to be spaced at approximately to its width, as in the case of the "b" and "n".

This improved machine was put on the market in 1867, but proved too costly to be a commercial success.

Even more novel, in its own common way, was a machine without the usual rows of keys. Instead there was a metal plate marked with the various characters, and a swinging pointer that had to be moved over the wanted letter or figure with one hand, while the other moved a type-bar into the correct position.

The actual typing was done by depressing a key with the other hand. Except that differential method of operation, experienced typists could attain a speed of 500 words per minute on the machine.

Surprisingly, the portable typewriter, as we know it today, in a relatively old class. Indeed, one on some more than 50 years ago weighed less than most of the modern available ones.

Electric Typewriters are faster, produce more copies, are more even and above all save time and energy, as this Nairobi secretary must appreciate.

ELECTRIC TYPEWRITERS New driving force in the office

Electricity has become the driving force of most factories. Even in the modern home most machines, such as electric washing machines, vacuum cleaners, and so on, are powered by electricity. Here are some of the likely benefits of this saving in energy:

- Less fatigue with greater accuracy and thus lower absenteeism, fewer pauses and more pleasure in work.
- Less risk of muscle ache and less shivering on deterioration of work.
- Possibility of increased work tempo for longer work periods, with increase in work and elimination of bottlenecks and overtime.

- Less risk of muscle ache and less shivering on deterioration of work.
- Possibility of increased work tempo for longer work periods, with increase in work and elimination of bottlenecks and overtime.

The saving in energy combined with the many automatic functions represents a saving in time estimated by various experts to be between 10 and 30 per cent. The Society's Association of Mechanical Industries recently conducted a detailed time and motion study on the subject and arrived at a total saving in time of 24 per cent.

The electric typewriter provides a better result, of course, over the final factor—that when you are interviewing a prospective secretary her first question may be "Have an electric typewriter of course!"

Need for safety

In every part of the world there is an ever increasing need for the protection of records and valuable papers against fire and burglary.

To be able to offer this protection in the right kind and degree - calls for resources and skill in design and production. These resources are available to the makers of modern fireproof safes.

It is also important to have a clear-cut policy of approach to the protection of records and papers. Security products must be designed, produced and sold in such a way that there is always a clearly defined responsibility on the safe side. Furthermore, the makers of fireproof safes should, wherever possible, by an independent testing organization, laboratory.

It is therefore only natural that every product which is described as fireproof should be tested. The customer has the right to know exactly what the protection against fire is being offered. This is not done by fire tests only, but by tests for burglar resistance, resistance to impact, resistance to cutting, resistance to drilling, resistance to sawing, resistance to hammering, resistance to fire, resistance to fire, resistance to fire.

And why, you may ask, is it so important to have a clear-cut policy of approach to the protection of records and papers? The answer is simple. The fireproof safe is not only a fireproof safe, but also a burglar-proof safe. It is therefore only natural that every product which is described as fireproof should be tested. The customer has the right to know exactly what the protection against fire is being offered. This is not done by fire tests only, but by tests for burglar resistance, resistance to impact, resistance to cutting, resistance to drilling, resistance to sawing, resistance to hammering, resistance to fire, resistance to fire, resistance to fire.

Shah of Iran flies to quake disaster area

The Shah of Iran and Empress Farah yesterday flew to Heriz, one of the worst hit centres in last weekend's twin earthquake disaster.
Their air force transport plane was the first to land at Heriz, an African town 100 miles from Tehran.
The Shah and Empress were met by the Premier, members of the cabinet and other Ministers who have been working in Heriz since the earthquake in August 1964.
At Heriz, the Shah and Empress met the two Iranian medical brigades and the 10,000 Iranian Red Cross members who reported massive damage to the town.
The Shah visited villages in the disaster area before returning to Tehran.

After leaving Heriz, the Shah and Empress flew to Mashhad, the provincial capital of Khorasan Province.
The Shah personally instructed the air force to drop food and medical supplies to the still largely inaccessible towns and villages by the rivers on Saturdays and Sundays.
He also ordered an emergency relief to be sent to Amersham.

Cave-in kills three miners

Rescuers have recovered the bodies of three of the eight miners trapped in a cave-in at a coalmine in Hokkaido, northern island of Honshu, Japan.
The mine, at Yubari, Central Hokkaido, is owned by the Colliery and Seaman Company.
A company spokesman said 14 miners were at the scene when the cave-in occurred, but six of them managed to crawl out of the rubble.
He said rescuers were still digging to reach the other five still trapped about 800 feet underground.
The spokesman said the cave-in, stretching for about 600 feet, completely blocked the shaft and rescuers were finding their way through the debris.
In 1964, a gas explosion claimed the lives of 42 miners at the same mine.
At another Yubari mine owned by the company, 32 miners were trapped in a pit fire in July this year.
Nine bodies were recovered, but the bodies of 22 others were never recovered because the pit was flooded to extinguish the fire.

Arab League condemn W. German aid to Israel

The Arab League Council has approved a resolution condemning West German aid to Israel, it was announced in Cairo.
The resolution called on Arab countries with embassies in Bonn to use their influence in making West Germany aware of the dangers inherent in assisting Israel.
The council also urged the Arab States and announced to support for Israeli policy against the Arab League.
The League has also promised to give all possible aid to Jordan to strengthen its defences against Israeli attack.

The council, meeting up its regular session, the council called on all member Governments to open bilateral talks with Jordanian authorities to find out what help is needed.
The council however, has turned down a suggestion from Syria that a collective scheme of military aid for Jordan should be drawn up, although it paid tribute to the activities of the Palestine command and promised continued support for their activities in the occupied territories.
In another resolution the council denounced alleged Israeli denials of Meulim and Christian deaths in Jerusalem.
The four-man Tunisian team quit the conference on Monday after its leader, Mr. Yusuf Sabharwal, second day of trying to dominate the 14-nation organisation and
