Famous 'chase draws' half-million crowd

The Gloucestershire Handicap will be held at a track tomorrow (March 19) which is the first day of the season's racing season. This one-day race has been held since 1850 and is the first of the year to be run at an all-time high of 150,000 spectators. The year before there were 100,000 spectators, the highest being in 1929.

Called a lottery

It will be called a lottery because in the first 20 years of its existence it has been run as such. That was in 1834, when the race was first run as a lottery. It was then run as a lottery for the next 10 years. It was then run as a lottery for the next 10 years. It was then run as a lottery for the next 10 years.

GAMATOX No. 2 DIP

The original and still the best

In the K.L.O. Particular, No. 183 dated 27th December, it is stated by the Veterinary Department that Gamatox No. 2 is an effective dip provided its strength is maintained, and their recommendation is that 1 dram of dip should be added to the water for every 1,000 head of cattle dipped. This adjustment is in addition to the normal procedure of topping up the dip both with water and dip.

Our own experiments in East Africa show that for the control of 2 and 3 bed ticks which are common throughout Kenya, Gamatox No. 2 should be used at a concentration of 100 parts per million. Gamatox Dip used at 1 dram to 500 gallons provides this concentration, and with a replacement rate of 1 extra dram for every 1,000 cattle dipped, sufficient gains can be expected.

Gamatax, at 80/- per drum is a cheap price to pay for an effective and safe dipping material, which will kill all parasites without harming the cattle. We are not offering an optional B.I.C. Dip because our extensive experiments under East African conditions have shown that with such a preparation the rate of exhaustion is too high to make it use economical.

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE TO MANUFACTURE A BETTER DIP — COOPERS WOULD MAKE IT.

McCORMICK International self-dump hay rakes have been standard equipment on farms for many years. The teeth are properly curved to run underneath the hay and gather it cleanly without digging into the ground. A simple adjustment permits setting the teeth to carry at different angles. Adjustment can also be made to regulate the height to which the teeth raise when dumping. Cleaner rods strip the teeth when dumping and also prevent the hay from being rolled into roapy form. A convenient foot control lever permits holding the teeth in a raised position when turning corners or when passing over obstructions. It may also be used to hold the teeth down in heavy work.

These rakes are light in weight yet surprisingly strong and durable. They are made in 8, 10, 12 and 14 foot sizes to suit all needs.

Marketing of farm grown fruit and vegetables

Agricultural Correspondent

Marketing of horticultural produce on farms is carried out in a haphazard manner in East Africa at the present moment. It is a fact that there is tremendous scope for such a system in Kenya. And it is quite certain that the marketing of produce in the growing domain of all sorts of vegetables and fruits is a task which appears to be one of the most important in the country.

It is not only the marketing of produce on farms which is a matter of importance, but also the marketing of produce in the towns. The marketing of produce in the towns is a matter of importance because it is the only way in which the produce can be sold to the consumer. East African Standard, Fri, March 11, 1949 13

"A flying visit is a longer visit when time is short!"

I can remember the time—oh to long ago, either—when an overseas assignment for my firm usually meant several months of the job was finished. My leave was too short for a holiday at home, so I was content to "fly" to my home.

That's all changed now, though. When my leave comes I pack a bag and fly straight home by Speedbird, 150,000 miles means that "home" is usually only a matter of hours away, or a day or two at the most, instead of weeks. I spend roughly an extra six days at home out of every seven when I fly by Speedbird.

Yes, I prefer—a flying visit is a longer visit, especially when time is short! What's more, I'm not travel-worn when I get home. I've rested and relaxed—and can enjoy my holiday. As for the actual flight, it's a dream of speed and comfort. The fine meals, the courteous attention—everything reduces credit on B.O.A.C.'s 30-year-old reputation of Speedbird service and experience.

CREATING A BACKGROUND

If you are setting out for the first time to furnish a new home you should try to work on some sort of system. It is as important to a writer of entrancing detail. Result, if you can. They may live you on and land you in trouble. Your plan need and smug; neither should you indulge in a orgy of random buying.

Charming but irrelevant possessions may scream at each other and refuse to live together in peace.

The path of common sense and distinction lies somewhere between these extremes. When you start to make a home, you should start with a picture in your head. Not a picture of a room, but a picture of a life. It is the picture of a life which leaves your impressions.

Balance

Should be the first sound which strikes your ears. A balance of colors, a balance of textures, a balance of styles. A balance of light and shadow. A balance of old and new. A balance of the whole.

The large room

The central space of the house is the most important. It is the heart of the home. It is the place where the family gathers. It is the place where the guests are entertained. It is the place where the life of the house is lived.

Military nonsense

The fever must be given its head for a little longer. Spring hats for instance, if all the young men's fancies can stray from Zulu to Bananas, every young woman must be forgiven for wondering if there dreams in the direction of scraps of military nonsense.

The mountain seemed alight when forest fires blazed on Mt. Kenya

MOUNT KENYA, WEST FACE
MOUNT Kenya's twin peaks, Nelson and Batian, are just over 10,000 feet above sea level. The many rugged peaks and contrasting glaciers are admired by most people from a great distance, but a closer view from the moorlands reveals the beautiful colours in the rock formation.

The mountaineers may want to get on to the rock faces. Rock climbing is a thing that many people cannot understand and yet the many attempts on Everest were news and followed with great interest all over the world. Books have been written on the subject, George Mallory, the great Everestist who was on three expeditions, and who did not return from the 1921 attempt was once asked "why do you want to climb Mount Everest?" Considering a mountaineer's point of view, I think that is the most reasonable answer to the question and applies to any mountain. From the mountaineer's point of view:

Have let me issue a word of warning to the inexperienced. Nelson and Batian are fine class climbs and I found the Mountaineers and the Mountaineering Club and Sir Nan Gillies as being comparatively simple.

Fire

There remain many unexplored peaks and points around the mountain which are open to the experienced mountaineer. It is not, however, as simple as you think, and your physiology should be taken into account.

The wonderful view-point, Lematana, is a scramble from the south that a group of ten have done. It should not be confused with mountain peaks, but a fine view of the peaks involves no danger in good weather and would form part of an ideal holiday of, say, seven or eight days.

Fire is a good servant, but a terrible master. Quite recently I saw a small outbreak and to tie out the undergrowth and I left for home some eight thousand feet lower down, avoiding the black, burnt, and where ash and charcoal have been beautiful.

The tussle

The Mount Kenya National Park is essentially a game preserve and during the 1939-40 season the game was very poor. The Nairobi Game Department has a very good staff and during the 1939-40 season the game was very poor. What costly consequences of a mere sport for hunters—a complete loss of the mountain's beauty and the game which has been hunted there.

LARGE CROWDS AT AIR RALLY

COOL summer clothes, wide C-strap hats, full skirts billowing, in a crisp wind were greatly in favour with the hundreds of spectators at the extremely well organised Annual Air Rally of the Aero Club of East Africa last Sunday afternoon.

When the sun was still almost overhead and shadows were not yet long, the air was cool and comfortable. The first D. H. Barkner, in a sports biplane, was the first to take the air. He was followed by several other pilots in their own biplanes. The most interesting of these was the one piloted by Mrs. J. D. Barker, who was the only woman to take the air.

Experiments will reveal important dietetic facts

How synthetic proteins avert death and cure chronic illness

RESEARCH that will reveal the facts about which and how much of each amino acid a human needs has been carried out by the University of Illinois in the middle-western part of the United States.

Such information is valuable for proper nutrition in both health and illness. Participants in the experiments have been students volunteers.

For two months they are kept on a diet of special crackers with basic amino acids. They drink only water and eat sweet condensed milk and white bread. There are plenty of vitamins and carbohydrates in the crackers and sugar, but no other vitamins and salts especially sodium. What is missing is the amino acids. In its place are the amino acids.

Every living thing is composed of proteins. They are the material of muscles, of the skin, of the hair, of the protoplasm of most cells and blood. It is not clear whether the protein comes from vegetable or animal sources, but unless from animal sources it has no nitrogen compounds in it. This has long been known. They are now being synthesized in the laboratory.

The amino acids are like proteins in that they contain the necessary elements for the body to make them. They are the building blocks of protein. They are the amino acids that which human beings can get along with. The body can make all the proteins it needs from these amino acids.

WESTERNEUROPE MUST PULL ITS WEIGHT IN DEFENCE

By ANTHONY EDWARDS
As is usual at this time of the year in Britain, the costs of the fighting services are being made known to the public. These figures plus those for other countries in the Brussels Pact—France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg—give some idea of the strength of western defences and of the extent to which each country is engaged in defence preparations.

It is not only the scale of the arms of the last year, the following table shows that the increase of expenditure on armaments has not been great over the past few years. Defence Expenditure (£millions)

Year	1948	1947	1946	1945
Britain	1,428	1,400	1,360	1,310
France	2,100	2,050	2,000	1,950
Belgium	140	135	130	125
Holland	110	105	100	95
Luxembourg	20	18	16	14
Total	4,800	4,700	4,600	4,500

The ratio

Can the Brussels Pact Powers afford to spend so much on armaments? It is a question that is being asked by many people. The ratio of defence expenditure to total national income is a useful measure of a country's military effort. In 1948, Britain's ratio was 3.1 per cent, France's 4.5 per cent, Belgium's 1.8 per cent, Holland's 1.4 per cent, and Luxembourg's 0.4 per cent.

PROMOTION QUEST IS NEVER-ENDING

Division II sides hope to make history

WRITING on the never-ending quest for promotion among football league clubs that while Cup ties and inter-annual matches have a magnetic appeal that draw huge crowds—the league competitions are the very salt of the game. They maintain a lasting interest through a system of promotion and relegation.

The league championship is something in which to score the most Division I status in the two bottom clubs, one way or another, is the aim of the two top Division II sides as seen in their clever and cunning manoeuvres.

Division III has several general problems the South and the North. The former is a somewhat anomalous Division II side, containing a number of struggling clubs as well as one or two strong sides.

None immune

The best side in the west of the club, are no immune from the effects of relegation. Periodically such sides lose form, or are run out of business. Famous ones like Everton, Liverpool, Manchester United, Preston North End, Tottenham, and others, have been relegated to the second division.

Only Sunderland of the 22 clubs in the First Division are immune from relegation.

Wolves and Walsley, one of the best sides in Britain, are playing for their lives. They have lost the Championship, and they fought their way back to the Championship, but they were relegated to Division II.

As many as 13 of the present 22 Division II sides have since 1920, been relegated to Division I. It is not they who have to worry, but the many others who have learned by bitter experience that it is far easier to drop out of the top league than to get back.

Cardiff's example

This is an old saying in football that it is never twenty days ago. Cardiff City were relegated three years later they were the Cup two years ago and Cardiff went into the Second Division. Cardiff had a long struggle before they were relegated. Cardiff tried hard again this year to avoid relegation. Cardiff has a long history of relegation. Cardiff has a long history of relegation. Cardiff has a long history of relegation.

Intensive use of farming capital means higher profit

HIGH profits from a more intensive use of capital is the maxim of Mr. D. H. Dinwiddie, the manager of the 300-acre farm, included in 'Farm Management Survey Report', 1947-48, by Mr. D. H. Dinwiddie of Durham University.

Six high profit farms in the group carried on the average 11 more acres and six more cattle than did six low-profit farms. They were more intensively stocked with mechanical equipment and, on the average, their total valuations exceeded those of the low-profit group by about £2000.

Intensively, the least profitable farms were much more heavily stocked with machinery and other sources of expense, Mr. Dinwiddie says. The most profitable farms were those which were most heavily stocked with machinery and other sources of expense, Mr. Dinwiddie says. The most profitable farms were those which were most heavily stocked with machinery and other sources of expense, Mr. Dinwiddie says.

Labour bills

Labour bills and rents were similar in the 1947-48 season. The average cost of the most profitable farms was £170 per acre, but the average cost of the least profitable farms was £170 per acre.

Table 1 shows the cost of the most profitable farms and the least profitable farms. The average cost of the most profitable farms was £170 per acre, but the average cost of the least profitable farms was £170 per acre.

British farmers protest about taking land for mining

The British Minister of Fuel and Power, Mr. H. Gaitskell, told the Commons recently that the value of coal extracted by open-cast mining was the highest. He was greater than that of coal mined in a traditional way.

Mr. Gaitskell said that the value of coal extracted by open-cast mining was the highest. He was greater than that of coal mined in a traditional way.

In October, 1947, the Ministry of Fuel and Power said that 75,000 acres of additional agricultural land would be used for the purpose of 1951.

It was important that the farming community should realize that open-cast coal was being used for power and that the value of coal extracted by open-cast mining was the highest.

The next step was to take over this year's output and to get on with their idea of the new way to get coal. It was only later upon them that the Ministry of Fuel and Power said that 75,000 acres of additional agricultural land would be used for the purpose of 1951.

The Ministry tried to give the farming community a better picture of the situation. It was only later upon them that the Ministry of Fuel and Power said that 75,000 acres of additional agricultural land would be used for the purpose of 1951.

Britain's food: Farmers make good the gap

During a recent debate in the House of Commons, Sir Stafford Cripps said that one of the most important jobs in the U.K. programme was that of the farmer.

Farmers had a great expansion programme in 1947 and Sir Stafford said it was launched last year and already some of the main items of foodstuffs had gone up in price. He said that the increase in the cost of foodstuffs was not less than the net annual value of our exports.

This, he said, would ensure the highest output ever known from our land and would surpass the peak wartime achievement by some 15 per cent.

Consumption rise

The lower level of imported foodstuffs, said Sir Stafford, would be more than offset by the increased output from home agriculture and consumption of foodstuffs should rise above 1947 levels.

Mr. R. A. Butler pointed out that with the vast output of agricultural products from the United Kingdom which was placed on cereal, and particularly wheat, production he rather the great view of the need to maintain a sufficient deficit on the balance of trade.

He said he did not think that we were having a fair deal, or that the agricultural community was having the full benefit of the purchase of foodstuffs abroad.

Feeding stuffs

Mr. R. A. Butler said: "I ask the Government to reconsider the policy of feeding stuffs, if that is possible, no answer to the question, the University of Manchester, England, therefore has begun a series of researches to discover the connection between colour factors and the nutritive value of foodstuffs."

Universal cutter and chopper

The robust universal cutter and chopper is planned at the most effective means of increasing production and at the same time decreasing costs in dairy farming. To produce properly balanced rations for the early feeding of livestock, a most high quality grass, clover, kale, cabbage and high sugar content sugar beet tops, turnips, mangolds can be chopped by the robust cutter in one operation, thereby giving the required mixture. The machine is manufactured in three sizes to suit the small and large farms and also the crop grows as well as industrial users. This machine shows its own merits, which sets it apart. It is already being exported to Denmark, Norway, South America and Southern Rhodesia.

COLOUR AS WELL AS TASTE AFFECTS FOOD SALES

IMAGINE that you were in a restaurant and that the waiter gave you a meal consisting of green root beef, dark-brown cabbage, red potatoes and violet carrots. Your first psychological reaction would probably be dismay, just because you were unused to foods of such colours, and that would be scarcely surprising, for the mental associations connected with the appearance of a food of a certain colour have grown up in everybody, until they have become ingrained in the mind. Children constitute the only exceptions to this rule, as up to the age of eight they lack experience and are primarily attracted by bright colours.

Every innkeeper knows, however, that by a mere red set green would hit his guests as they would think involuntarily that the meat was decaying. Such an example, however, would provide no answer to the question, the University of Manchester, England, therefore has begun a series of researches to discover the connection between colour factors and the nutritive value of foodstuffs.

From childhood

The earliest colour associations which the infant acquires are those which are associated with the food which he eats. These associations are of great importance in the infant's life, for they are the basis of his later reactions to colour. The infant's reactions to colour are of great importance in the infant's life, for they are the basis of his later reactions to colour.

Base	Desired	Color
Pale yellow	mauve	Sold
White	red	100
Light green	orange	87
Dark green	dark green	75

Popular colours

Chocolate with white decoration was selected by 1 per cent of the customers and the least popular was a red base with a white decoration. Only seven cakes with this colour scheme were sold, but the colour combination reversed, the cakes popular second place in the statistics.

White crepe-de-chine blouse with very convenient lace trimming the square button cuffs. Pine with gorgonzola is used for this blouse. The deep pointed yoke is of hand-made lace.

Edwardian blouses and old fashioned lace collars make their appearance

BY VICTORIA CHAPPELLE

FINE handwork is returning to fashion. It was, perhaps, not quite so noticeable that longer skirts and more elaborate hats would be responsible for such a revival, but fashion critics, on the whole, regard it with equanimity.

It began in the spring collections when deep-old-fashioned "lace collars" were used on some of the evening dresses, now it is spreading to blouses which are trimmed with fine lace and handwork.

One of the most attractive models we recently saw was a simple geometric blouse with full sleeves ending in a ruffled cuff and a magnificent deep collar of hand-made lace. The lace seemed like a veil of Edwardian days. Edgewise to yokes and sleeves are an obvious way of introducing lace on afternoon blouses, and although lace started with lace-trimmed blouses, it is spreading to the delectable. It has a certain amount of charm.

Cocktail suit. Beige jacket over ballerina skirt of black tulle.

These models are, of course, reminiscent of the Edwardian blouse but competing very strongly with them is the blouse which is a pretty 1930s blouse. It is a blouse which is a simple, clean design but follows the line of a dress with perhaps, a simple collar or a front gathered into a fitted waistband. Indeed, this type of blouse can be used with a suitable skirt to give the impression of a "one-piece" dress, especially if it fits over the waistline to bedecked with a heavy crease for instance, in which case, it should be carefully selected so that, with accessories, it helps to complete the perfect whole.

To the question 'Should education be confused with religion?' a well-known Kenya educationist, writing under the name of E. D. Ward, answers —

Without a religious foundation educational systems are doomed

A SHORT time ago a letter appeared in a vernacular newspaper on the subject of Religion and Education and was signed by two correspondents. The letter bitterly criticised the practice of some school authorities of dismissing teachers or pupils solely on immorality accused those who allow their religious principles to influence their educational system of obstructing the progress of the country and indignantly asked the question "Why should Religion and Education be confused since they have no connection?"

The "blame and confusion" I thought unwise, by such statements did description, but unfortunately they are not correct. It means an inaccurate expression of the views of many people to say and particularly the African.

The idea that a man is "born" and if he can keep "them" (English and European) from "contaminating" his "purity" is very far from the truth. Education means a purification process. The acquisition of knowledge or the possession of a certificate however impressive.

The chief aim of the present all-Party educational programme is that it leaves a child out of school the ultimate purpose of which is to give him a better life. We have not but a lasting utility. The result of this completely gone out of the world and the child is left to himself. It is the duty of a parent to see to it that the child is properly trained in the home and in the school.

Will and intellect. The two most important faculties in man are his intellect and his will. It is the possession of these faculties that differentiates him from the lower animals. He is to become a great man or a great leader, along with all his faculties, must be developed as fully as possible. Their development is the chief aim of education.

Man, a creature. He is not a mere animal. He is dependent on the Supreme Being for his existence. He is a creature who is dependent on the Supreme Being for his existence. He is a creature who is dependent on the Supreme Being for his existence.

What he should have his people to be. The spirit of a school is in part the spirit of its students. The prevailing tone and atmosphere of a school is largely the result of the character of the children who attend it. The school will tend to develop in the direction of the character of the children who attend it. The school will tend to develop in the direction of the character of the children who attend it.

At the school, the student faculty which shows man above the animals is his intellect. The intellect and the will are complementary to each other. The intellect is the faculty which enables a man to think. The will is the faculty which enables a man to act.

Daily conduct. As stated above, the student faculty which shows man above the animals is his intellect. The intellect and the will are complementary to each other. The intellect is the faculty which enables a man to think. The will is the faculty which enables a man to act.

HOUSEWIVES THRONG TO IDEAL HOME EXHIBITION

TWELVE acres of modern exhibits, many of them of special interest to housewives and all others concerned for the welfare of the home, attracted thousands of women to Olympia on March 2, when the Daily Mail's Ideal Home Exhibition opened its doors.

There are many good exhibits, and they are most of them of a kind which will be of use to the housewife. The exhibition will be open for many more days.

One of the general features is a Pavilion of the Home. It is a thing of beauty, with a roof of glass and steel, and a floor of polished wood. It is a thing of beauty, with a roof of glass and steel, and a floor of polished wood.

AT NAKURU RACE MEETING

DAILY silk and cotton "new look" frocks were the order of the day. Many were a feature of the weekend race meeting at Nakuru, and indeed in the refreshing atmosphere of intense heat and dust, even heavy linen suits looked a little out of place. Considerable pity was felt for the jockeys as they trudged round the well-watered but completely grassless course, surrounded in a dense cloud of dust.

Young brides

Those here racing today Mrs. V. Spinning and Mrs. Olive Macdonald were both, too, in the vanguard of the young brides. Chattering to them from the shadowy depths of her car, Mrs. Tommy Day was smart in an ensemble of London Town. "Bob-a-licious" Tatham was another who looked very chic in a triple suit of the same colour, worn with a quaint, one-piece-shaped hat.

Two of the most attractive ensembles seen at the course were worn by two of Kenya's recent brides Mrs. Alan Hall, the former Miss P. Kinsey, chose a simple dress of Royal blue and white French cut to accentuate her extreme slenderness, worn with a nest white collar-bonnet hat and white accessories. Her husband, wearing a dark suit, also wore a white shirt and tie.

The other bride of even more recent vintage, Mrs. Michael Collins, wore a dress and charming as well as exceptionally chic in her lovely green and white. After a rather green-tinted frame with green and white, she wore a charming suit of off-the-face material with a black and white pattern. The bride's hair had been styled in a neat and simple for a smart suit of grey.

People best and tall, racers generally favoured black, and in some cases the spidery lunch and tea room had, the extensions to the stands and many other improvements.

Britain must blend different aims of Commonwealth into single aim Dominions' foreign policy

By ANTHONY DORSET
In the trade agreement with Britain the Commonwealth Governments continue to seek in spite of pressure from the Dominion Governments to Australia's foreign policy is to be a common one.

Before the war the Dominions, with the possible exception of Canada, played only a minor part in foreign affairs. There was a spirit of independence, but no general political policy. For example, in the case of Australia, for example, the Dominion's foreign policy was taking the development of regional politics and the growing strength of the Commonwealth as a whole. TUESDAY's Nairobi meeting organised by the Nairobi Electors' Organisation, and presided over by Mr. P. Harris, discussed the Tanganyika—British or U.N.O.—

There were eight 'platform speakers'—Major General C. P. Foxwell, Mr. E. A. Vasey (Nairobi North), Mr. D. Q. Egan (Nairobi South), Mr. H. Harris (all of Kenya) and Mr. Frank Anderson, Mr. S. du Toit and Mr. E. C. Phillips of Tanganyika.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. Harris, who said that the Nairobi Electors' Organisation considers that the expression of opinion of the United Nations visiting mission to Tanganyika is of great importance, and requests the Executive Committee of the Electors' Organisation to explore the possibility of forming a delegation of European organisations in order to establish strong and permanent European relations with the Government of Tanganyika.

This meeting further requests that the European Members should take the opportunity of Mr. Green Jones' rhyming poem to express their feelings of the colour in regard to the Mission receiving African proposals.

'In 10 years'

Mr. Anderson expressed an official statement because at the time the U.N.O. report was issued and asked: How could the loss of a colony be compensated? Mr. Harris pointed out that all proposals in the U.N.O. report were made in 1958 and that the U.N.O. report was issued in 1959. Films shown were "The Heritage of the Desert", "Rain on the Plains", "The Story of the Galley and the Hoop", "Eretinga", "The Story of the Galley and the Hoop" and the movie which was a wonderful picture of the agricultural life in the United States.

'Wifehood and motherhood is a woman's highest duty'

Says Nellie Taylor Rosa, Director of the United States Mint

LIAD anyone told Mrs. Nellie Taylor Rosa that she would one day be director of the United States Mint, she would have thought it incredible.

She would have sounded like a cold sort of a servant, she says, "until after 15 years in it I find it fascinating and rich in human interest."

Recently appointed by President Truman to a fourth five-year term, the 47-year-old, graduate woman is the first member of her sex to be director of the Mint. She is also in charge of the United States Gold Depository at Fort Knox, Kentucky. THE REPORT on the Finance of Municipalities and Provincial Government, prepared by the Finance Committee of the Municipalities and Provincial Councils and the A. W. S. Committee, is a valuable study of the present and future development of the Municipalities and Provincial Government.

The Board has adopted the report and has decided that the recommendations should be dealt with in detail by the appropriate committees.

The Board also decided that it recognized the report to be a very fine collection of the matters essential to the carrying out of a programme of development, a representative of good counsel and a most valuable work of reference for the Board in a considerable number of cases.

The Board owes a debt of gratitude to the Board's members for the thorough manner with which they have dealt with the Board's business.

Advantages which nature and circumstances have given to the Board in the Province, states the report, should be taken into consideration in the carrying out of civic and social responsibilities which the Board has to discharge.

The Board is urged to take into consideration the fact that the Province is a developing area and that the Board's responsibilities are increasing.
