NEW BRUSH FOR MURRAM ROADS

MODEL, MAY END COMPLAINTS A BRUSH has been developed by the East African Road Federation to service murram roads. Made of a West African cane brush, it is designed to replace the present steel-bristled brushes used by the Kenya Road Authority, which have caused complaints of potholes from motorists all over Kenya.

An experimental model of the new brush has been made from a design by one of the Federation's technical advisers. Mr. Peter Chelomo said that it will be safer, more effective and longer-lasting than the steel-bristled brushes.

For servicing The new model has a V-shaped end of wood, reinforced with steel. It will be drawn across the road, over the wheel tracks in the road and over the high level and not hobble back into the track to make the new brush.

The experimental model is at least twice as long as the steel brush, but will be used for two months or so before it will be tested by the road authority. The brush is made of cane brush, the surface is reinforced with steel. It will be used for two months or so before it will be tested by the road authority.

NEW PEPSI-COLA PLANT GOES INTO PRODUCTION

NAIROBI OUTPUT DOUBLED

Managing Director, Eric Jessup, F.P.C. Ltd., in an example of a new in Kenya youth.

GLOOMY forecasts in 1949 that Kenya would never adopt the American Cola habit will now today be finally confounded by the opening of a new 7,500-bottle-an-hour plant to produce East Africa's most popular soft drink.

In 1949, a private company of six equal members was formed to secure the franchise for manufacturing Pepsi-Cola and, in February 1951, a bottling plant was opened in production 2,200 bottles an hour. Demand for this low-priced, hygienically produced and wholesome thirst quencher soon outstripped anticipation and production in the second year showed an increase on 100 per cent.

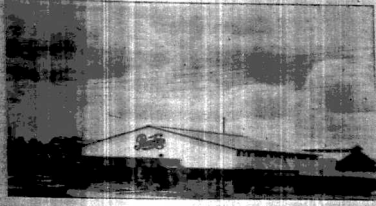

In the third year, every device for stepping up output is being included round-the-clock production - was brought into play, enabling the third year to advance by as much as 70 per cent. In the meantime, "Pepsi" plant had partly turned to supply depots in Mombasa, Tanga and Zanzibar, while Nairobi aimed at extending its area bound by Machelo, Nakuru and Kericho. This was soon straining resources to the limit and plans were made for a new high-capacity plant in Nairobi, as well as a new 2,000-bottle-an-hour plant for Eldoret. Nairobi is production today and the Eldoret plant is well under way.

TRANSPORT - An impressive feature of the enterprise is that, starting in 1951 with only five vehicles, the company now owns a modern fleet of 80 to cope with its immense transport problem.

MANEERING AND WORKS - Who is behind this, Kenya's most go-ahead concern? The Managing Director, fittingly enough, is 25-year-old Kenya-born Eric Jessup, whose dynamic energy has plotted the enterprise through its numerous problems of production and development since its inception, closely supported by New Zealand-born, but Kenya bred, 34-year-old Peter Davies, whose shoulders all the financial "in-and-outs" of a young but amazingly progressive modern enterprise. Behind these two young business men stands a happy international staff of European Supervisors, Asian Drivers, Salesmen and African Operatives.

EMPLOYMENT OF LOCAL INDUSTRIES - Eric Jessup's principal headache is how to make his flourishing industry less and less dependent upon its overseas suppliers and more and more upon Kenya enterprise. Local industry is now producing all the rate of 10,000 per month, a sufficient lory wooden case - hitherto imported from Durban - and a National Glassworks is still experimenting to produce the high quality bottles at present imported from South Africa. The Mombasa Glassworks was charged with the execution of a trial order for a million bottles and this fraction of the annual need under present production capacity is but an indication of the size of the plant which can fall into the lap of one of Kenya's new industries.

Cooperation of both Pepsi-Cola and Everetts is provided by yet another local industry and to drop a hint, who is going to provide just one local bottling industry with 80,000,000 crown cork caps per annum?

FITZGERALD, HAYNES & CO. LTD., have shown the way indeed.

Honey is new Kamba industry

By James Boninger

MAINDU KIMONGO, honey hunter and retired policeman, entered the cooperative store at Uroo, administrative centre of the Makindu Settlement of the Machakos District, handed over a small drum full of honey, received his money and bought a blanket. Then he left the shop, the bees he had brought with him still buzzing round his head.

He is one of many Kamba honey hunters. Every day, lower Makindu, the gate of the sweet honey of the African bees from the round, wooden drums high up in the branches of the acacia tree. A new honey industry has to be processed the raw product.

Kept for beer

DROPPED as had the ordinary honey was kept for beer. The honey was sold to the officers in the District and the District Officer in charge of the Makindu area, Mr. John Blair, who is mainly responsible for the success of the scheme.

The new factory enables us to bring the local honey, the honey of the acacia tree. We have sold nearly 5,000 lb. of honey during the last few weeks, and this is being the local Kamba honey.

The Kenya Veterinary Department, honey industry, the work and honey industry of the Kamba, he always believed, has produced a honey. A. N. Gray, who was farming at Makindu in 1950, in Northland, supervises the work and a local Kamba, Mombasa, the manager of the factory, has one of the honey arrived at Makindu.

No subsidy

THE factory runs without any form of subsidy and is not a Government undertaking. The cooperative shop carries the responsibility on its own and although lower Kamba has offered loans, this has been refused.

The co-operative shop draws directly from the honey hunters. The raw product is collected, transported to the factory and stored in clean, four-gallon drum, sealed and forwarded to Nairobi, to be bottled, labelled and sold by a firm of wholesalers.

Population keen

THE whole population of Makindu is very keen on the new industry, and is producing up. Every day the honey hunters bring their products to the store, carrying their small wooden drums on the back of their heads. They are usually surrounded by bees. Bees are everywhere even between the rows of files on the office tables.

This factory is now producing a total of 100,000 lb. of honey a week. The co-operative shop has an average of 50 lb. of honey to supply to every honey hunter during the month. We shall have a certain amount for home consumption, but most of it is sold to Nairobi.

TEBEXWAX is being exported to Britain at 4s 6d. It is the best selling wax for this new industry of Kamba. The wax is used for making a familiar household wax all over East Africa.

A. N. Gray, of the Kenya Veterinary Department, with some of the bees belonging to Maindu Kimongo.

Maindu Kimongo, with his honey collector in his hands, stands a hive hung from a tree—a typical Wakamba custom.

After the honey has been extracted, the bees are collected in this bag.

You can CONTROL your tillage with a CATERPILLAR TOOL BAR

Draft arms are attached to the track roller frame, making the tool bar an integral part of the tractor. Implements can be lifted high when traveling from field to field or when avoiding obstacles.

A forward push on the lever forces tillage implements into the ground... a pull on the lever brings them out. The tool bar has four positions: raise, lower, hold up (float), in the float position, tools seek their own depth by suction.

Control your tillage; utilize more of your tillage land with a Caterpillar Tool Bar. Ask us for complete information.

CORRESPONDENCE

Japanese Imports

To the Editor:—I congratulate the authorities on the steps they have taken to establish a tariff for 1953. The past performance has not been particularly encouraging. I have a small number of established traders here who do not see the wisdom of new levies. The authorities please clarify the situation.

However, this is very important that they have no intention of imposing a tariff on the cost of goods imported. It is a very serious alternative to be located to 30 per cent of some form of some import quotas.

FROM HERE... AND THERE

A SHOOPKEEPER in Rhodesia, Mr. M. D. D. Krombholts, is building up a big trade in exporting "grandmothers". When he advertised that he was prepared to pay 175 dinoshams (a dinosham is each gramme) for each grandmother, children and parents were in a bit of a hurry to get hold of grandmothers. He then advertised higher "grandmother" salaries in various villages. One grandmother made it that the grandmothers must be "true" for the Rhodesian medical firm which buys them from them has instructed him that only male, i.e., "women", grandmothers were useful for the medicine that was prepared from them.

Mr. Krombholts said he received 1,000 dinoshams (about £1) for each grandmother sold to the Rhodesian firm.

A LANCER reporter climbed on to the bonnet of a small car in a Beaufort at Cape Point, South Africa, attached the woman driver and set her back.

The lagoon knocked the driver off her feet and she fell into the lagoon. The lagoon was not too deep and she was able to swim out. The lagoon was not too deep and she was able to swim out.

A BUMP in Johannesburg has one outstanding innovation: it is a "bump" for the children of the South African's two official languages. The bump is a "bump" for the children of the South African's two official languages. The bump is a "bump" for the children of the South African's two official languages.

TAKING LIFE SERIOUSLY

By Angela Rowe

WHEN many people are going home from their jobs in Nairobi for a quiet cup of tea and to read the newspaper, a small group of artists from all walks of life is making its way towards the Art and Crafts Centre.

The artists' drawing materials are in a small case for their use and their drawing paper is held firmly under their arms. They have a set compass they use on their way to the weekly "Life Class" run by Mrs. V. Hvas under the auspices of the Kenya Arts and Crafts Society.

Many in Nairobi do not realize that there are classes, which are a most-esteemed part of the lives of practicing artists, even so-called "amateurs". The drawing which is so essential to the professional painter, craftsman or artist, for models are hard to obtain and the cost of a professional artist's work can afford to employ a personal artist.

Willing to pose

THE Arts and Crafts Society has, however, been accused of posing. The artists are willing to pose for the camera. The artists are willing to pose for the camera. The artists are willing to pose for the camera.

Before entering the studio one is greeted on the steps by the Society's mascot - a beautiful miniature bull dog.

But this group is not just for the class. It is a group that spends its time either benefiting from the art or in the art. It is a group that spends its time either benefiting from the art or in the art.

There is no sound. There is no sound. There is no sound. There is no sound. There is no sound.

THE Arts and Crafts Society, which is composed of a very friendly group of people, is proud of the value these classes are giving to practicing artists and although no actual instruction is given, the fact that an expert painter may be found in the class is an invaluable asset to the student. The student is encouraged to learn from the expert painter and to give his own work a better quality at the lowest possible price.
