SHOOT DOWN BRITISH BOMBER

Protest over 'murder of six RAF aircree'

THE British High Commissioner in Germany, Sir Kirkpatrick Wood, yesterday protested to the Soviet authorities in Berlin against the shooting down on Thursday of a British Liberator bomber by Russian MiG fighters. Sir Ivone was described as a "deliberate and brutal act of aggression" involving the murder of British airmen.

Sir Ivone was welcomed by the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, to make the strongest possible representation. A note from General Vasily Khokhlov, Soviet Control Commission, charged that the Soviet bomber was shot down while violating Soviet-controlled East German territory. He said the aircraft was 73 miles inside East Germany, and opened fire on Soviet fighters. A Foreign Office spokesman denied this strongly.

One of the airmen who parachuted from the Lincoln died in hospital at Lussemburg (about ten miles outside the Soviet Zone). The other airmen were taken to a hospital in another badly injured airmen in hospital.

Sir Ivone called for an investigation to be undertaken immediately by the Soviet authorities, and demanded that those responsible for the "murder" should be punished, and that "due reparation be made for damage to persons and property."

A Foreign office spokesman said the bomber was shot down in the air corridor between Berlin to the British Zone, when heading for the British Zone and "was in the air over East Germany." The bomber made a slight evasive manoeuvre and was shot down by a Soviet MiG fighter. The wreckage fell in the British Zone, German officials said.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

British trade figures cut

RETAILERS have advised by surveying today by the Ministry of Commerce that the first three months of the year show a 15 per cent fall in foreign trade from the corresponding period of 1954. The total value of the first quarter was £2,152,500,000 against £2,578,000,000 in 1954.

The 'drop' was due to a 12 per cent fall in exports, while imports rose 5 per cent to £1,000,000,000. The value of goods imported from the United States rose 10 per cent to £1,100,000,000, while imports from other countries fell 10 per cent to £1,000,000,000.

Germany now trades with good name

By SYDNEY S. CAMPBELL, Reuters' Financial Editor

A STRIKING fact about Germany's export revival is that it is not being driven by the continued default on her part of her foreign debts. In fact, Germany is now a bank account in any of the main international financial centres without the risk of being ostracised by creditors, and while Germany was previously criticised as normal international reinforcement credit was not for her export-import trade.

The reason for this is that the international agreement of the international agreement of Germany's external debt, she has had a chance of showing what she can do when she has a good name.

She also, the head of the German Debt Disputations, has been during negotiations, not only of an agreement with Germany only 11 of the 20 per cent of the external debt, but also of the external debt, but also of the external debt, but also of the external debt.

Germany now trades with good name

By SYDNEY S. CAMPBELL, Fleet Street Financial Editor

A STRIKING fact about Germany's export trade is that it has been achieved while she was trading as a defaulter: while because of the confusion that followed a paper default, no German could so much as open a bank account in any of the main international financial centres without the risk of being arrested by creditors; and while Germany was accordingly denied access to normal international trade, her export-import trade was kept afloat by her agents in France who were signing in February 1933, the terms of the "Lithuanian" credit line, the only German external credit line which she has since obtained, when she closed her doors to the world with trading with a good name.

Mr. Aho, the head of the German Bank of Commerce, is the person to whom the difference between the old and the new Germany is best explained. He says that Germany's export trade is now worth £100 million per month, and that she is now trading with a good name. He says that Germany's export trade is now worth £100 million per month, and that she is now trading with a good name.

IN A HOME AT THE FOOT OF THE NGONG HILLS

JOHN CHERRY describes a visit to the British Legion Park and Hostel at Longoa where it is hoped to double the existing accommodation.

It was Karen Blinn who started her book Out of Africa with the words "I had a home very simplicity, they express the beauty that is to be found looking up into those hills which form one of Kenya's most prominent landmarks. There is beauty, peace and serenity.

All this I felt the other day when I visited the British Legion Park and Hostel at Longoa. For the next few years or ten, at the most, and no more delighted one could have been found for the purpose for which the park and hostel were founded. It is the old soldiers of East Africa who have away in peace and quiet, a home, where the old soldiers can take enough to eat, of a bottle of beer and a smoke.

When the scheme first started there were 160 acres of land on which about the main building still in use today. Now there is room for 25 people with emergency housing for another 500. In addition to the main building there is a canteen, a bar, a dining room and a group of lodges. At the moment, the building is the inside of much-needed repairs for which, long ago, the land have had to be sold.

The repairs at the hostel to provide accommodation for old soldiers and their wives, but it is open, so, disabled may be temporarily in difficulties, so far as normal accommodation is concerned.

Today the hostel is full of old soldiers, two of whom have their wives with them. As I go out here at the foot of the Ngong Hills I am reminded of the words of the poet: "The people in the hills are simple, they are not so much as the people in the valley."

You have only to meet Captain and Mrs. T. Shannon, who are in charge of the hostel, to realize that the right of the old soldier to a home is not a mere slogan, but a reality. Captain Shannon is a Christian, so he knows what it means to have a home. There's morning tea in bed and then breakfast "served" at ten o'clock, a hot meal at lunch time, afternoon tea and an ample supper each evening.

And for those who wish, a bottle of beer and a smoke incidentally, a part of the pocket money with which they are provided. Those who like beer get 6d. a month. Those who don't 6d.

The park has an orchard, poultry, pigs and sheep in addition to its gardens for those who feel that they can't get on with their work. A workshop is also provided in which the men can "putter" to their own hearts' content. There are many who make dolls, model aeroplanes, and other things. And they all, needs to say, include in that famous list of old soldiers, of remembrance. And to help their mental and physical, on the walls of their rooms, the pictures of their own, in which they have served, regular outings to events of interest.

At the moment the oldest inmate is over 80 and all the remainder are in their sixties. With such elderly people one of the great advantages of the hostel is that the Legion takes full of his individual charges. And Captain Shannon knows all the ailments of his charges. He is a doctor, and he is a nurse, and he is a handy man. He is a man who can do anything, and he is a man who can do it well.

I SAID at the outset that the hostel has accommodation for 23 old soldiers. At the moment there are 23 in the hostel. It is a small hostel, but it is a hostel that has a "hook" that you might imagine and the British Legion on its first target of accommodation for another 500.

It is a worthy cause, the hostel where the old of the Ngong Hills, fade away... at the foot of the Ngong Hills.

OUTMODDED UNDERWEAR TAKES FASHION FRONT

It is not always recognized that the fashion world is not only a place of new ideas but also a place of old ideas. In fact, the fashion world is a place of old ideas that are being rediscovered and given a new twist. This is the case with underwear. Underwear that was once considered outmodded is now being rediscovered and given a new twist. This is the case with underwear. Underwear that was once considered outmodded is now being rediscovered and given a new twist.

Fish bones make good aspics

THIS dish, which looks as though it might have been evolved by one of the prodigious Continental cooks, will grace any luncheon or dinner table. And, although it seems hardly credible, one fish will produce helpings for five or six people. You can get the recipe from the bones in the fish.

The method is very simple. Filter one lb. fish in the ordinary way. Cut the fillets into small pieces and put them into a sauceron with sufficient water to cover. Boil for 10 minutes and strain. Add a second sauceron of water and repeat the process. Strain and mix the two. Add a third sauceron of water and repeat the process. Strain and mix the three. Add a fourth sauceron of water and repeat the process. Strain and mix the four.

Last touches

INTO a dress in which cold water has previously been poured, the last touches are made. The dress is then laid flat and the water is allowed to evaporate. The dress is then pressed and the water is allowed to evaporate. The dress is then pressed and the water is allowed to evaporate. The dress is then pressed and the water is allowed to evaporate.

The New 'Royal' Peaks In The Ruwenzori Range

As already announced, the expedition will be per-presented in the Mountains of the Moon, or Ruwenzori range, which straddle the Uganda-Burundi-Africa divide. The expedition is being led by Mr. Arthur Firmig, the Nairobi photographer, friend of Mr. Douglas Black British Ambassador in London. The expedition is being accompanied by Mr. Arthur Firmig, the Nairobi photographer, friend of Mr. Douglas Black British Ambassador in London.

It was on January 17 this year that Mr. Black and his party set out with Kuli Klauke, a headman, and eight porters to join Mr. Firmig and his companion, Mr. Pat Nolan, who, having preceded him, were waiting at the highest hut on the

The porters swiftly made camp at the base of the mountain and supported their loads, as most heavy weight carriers do all over the world, by a hand over their forehead.

Superb view
THE route to the first of the Ruwenzori peaks is a climb of some 3,000 feet, but when he reached it Mr. Black had a superb view of the side of the valley rising 6,000 feet to the summit of the mountain. The fine rock summits showed from the plains and are they were named after the two brothers who did so much in the early days to open up what is now the Western Province of Uganda.

The two following days to the second and third huts were more interesting. The fantastic vegetation of Ruwenzori began to appear. Everything grew on a most un-accustomed soil.

Higher up the pines gave way to the forest of the Ruwenzori, a sort of immovable, the bushes were few and a section bare to progress even from the forest.

The most disagreeable part of the journey was a narrow English settler compared with those who the visit of an English settler was as an angry bird.

Perfect weather
T and the Mubuku and Bukuru Rivers were flowing fast and the track completely dry. There were no more stretches between the second and third huts which were so unforgettable.

Here the ground was flat and swampy and from the swampy ground rose blocks of very grass some two feet high and perhaps a foot or two in diameter. After jumping from one to another, of these blocks the party was made fully aware all the time of the danger of slipping on the mossy, the mountain grew green from the wet, the party with enthusiasm.

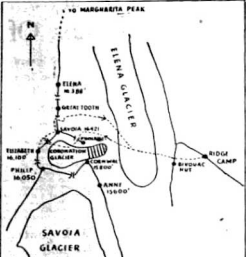

From the second hut at Nyamula (10,500 feet) the party set out with Kuli Klauke, a headman, and eight porters to join Mr. Firmig and his companion, Mr. Pat Nolan, who, having preceded him, were waiting at the highest hut on the

Mounting strength of the RAF

MANY NEW PLANES IN SERVICE.

THE main fact that emerges from the recently published U.K. air estimates for 1955-54 is that, from now on, the strength of the Royal Air Force will expand steadily and will consist of only the most modern aircraft obtainable. After years of uphill struggle to recover from the sudden contraction which followed the war, the turning point has been reached.

With the main expansion programme, the RAF will have long-range bombers, jet fighters, and a formation of additional transport, all of which are essential to the modern air force. It is no longer necessary to keep "old" aircraft in service, and the RAF's total strength "ploughed back" into the training organisation.

A long task

To ensure the present satisfactory state of the R.A.F. on the strictly short period of less than eight years since the end of hostilities has been made possible, the modern equipment has been replaced by the latest available. This has meant a long and arduous task, and it is no longer necessary to keep "old" aircraft in service, and the RAF's total strength "ploughed back" into the training organisation.

Each year since the war the aircraft industry has produced excellent substitutes for the equipment which was destroyed in the most wholesale manner. The new equipment is not only better than the old, but it is also more economical to operate. This has meant a long and arduous task, and it is no longer necessary to keep "old" aircraft in service, and the RAF's total strength "ploughed back" into the training organisation.

The Canberra jet-bomber, an aircraft with the performance of a jet fighter, has now in squadron. Over the next few years, the Canberra will be replaced by the Canberra, which will be a more advanced version of the Canberra. This will be a more advanced version of the Canberra, which will be a more advanced version of the Canberra.

Commodity outlook: still one of stability

BY SYDNEY S. DANFELL

WALL STREET and American business seem to have established themselves on a high plateau. With occasional and selective wobbles up and down, their characteristic stability in a higher trading range than before the election of last November is being maintained.

While this lack of commotion is not likely to come to much other commodities which still retain their post-Korea infatuations, the market generally outlook will seem to be somewhat brighter than it has been since the war.

Commodities can be referred to as being in a "stagnant" condition. The recent behavior of tea—which was held to a few weeks ago and is now in hard to buy. Wheat and other grains are also in a "stagnant" condition. Agricultural and livestock products are also in a "stagnant" condition. The market for these commodities is generally quiet.

Steadied up

It is not that most of the British budget and the U.S. farm support may be held in check. But that has been true for some time. It is the fact that the market has been steady up and down, their characteristic stability in a higher trading range than before the election of last November is being maintained.

Unworried

Unworried, the U.S. had more than half of an inventory slump in 1931. It is not that most of the British budget and the U.S. farm support may be held in check. But that has been true for some time. It is the fact that the market has been steady up and down, their characteristic stability in a higher trading range than before the election of last November is being maintained.

RAILWAYS THE KEY TO UNION'S EXPANSION

THE steps taken by South Africa to open up its resources by reducing its dependence on imported machinery and the potential are outlined by the British Treasury in its report on the "Industrial Development of the Union of South Africa." The Bulletin is an information division of the Treasury.

After stating that South Africa does not draw on the resources of the Union for other services since it is able to settle her deficit with her currency counterpart of the Union, the report states that the South African output of raw materials is increasing. The report also states that the Union's railway system is being expanded to meet the needs of the Union's expansion.

Way to help

"And since South Africa also has a large gold reserve, the report suggests that the Union should consider the possibility of using its gold reserve to help other countries in need of funds. The report also suggests that the Union should consider the possibility of using its gold reserve to help other countries in need of funds.

Coal

South Africa had extensive deposits of medium and high-grade coal. The capacity of the Union's railway system is being expanded to meet the needs of the Union's expansion.

TOURING ★

My first tour of the African continent was in 1922. I was accompanied by a party of six. We traveled through the interior of the continent, visiting the most interesting parts of the continent. The tour was a great success and we returned home with a wealth of interesting stories and photographs.

Gold

Among other developments reported in the Treasury report is the fact that the Union's gold reserve is increasing. This is due to the fact that the Union is producing more gold than it is consuming.

Steel

The Union's steel industry is also showing signs of expansion. This is due to the fact that the Union is producing more steel than it is consuming.
