CAR SHORTAGE

SAVING THE situation in 1964. A famous writer who writes to Kenya and, after a short while, goes back to the world in the form of a book, expressed an opinion that the country's place where everyone is to be found is not the best one at the back of the continent. He is right, but the information we are unable to furnish is that it is almost certain that Kenya will be the European and Asian population of the continent in the years to come.

The nature of the country and the manner in which we are taking this way of our economy and communal life as a whole is important to us. It is disappointing to find that the car shortage—shows as little sign of any improvement.

It is pointed out, too, that the interim stage of development, which is being undertaken by a number of years, would allow us to produce a variety of goods which would result in inter-continental trade which is a continuing process. It is a pity that the British people are not more sympathetic to the needs of the African people.

It is pointed out, too, that the interim stage of development, which is being undertaken by a number of years, would allow us to produce a variety of goods which would result in inter-continental trade which is a continuing process. It is a pity that the British people are not more sympathetic to the needs of the African people.

On the other hand there is a feeling that the car shortage is a long way from being solved. The Prime Minister has merely taken a long overdue step towards the solution of the problem. The car shortage is a long way from being solved. The Prime Minister has merely taken a long overdue step towards the solution of the problem.

These doubts, on the part of the British people, are not unfounded. It is a pity that the British people are not more sympathetic to the needs of the African people.

Whatever the outcome of the negotiations, it is a pity that the British people are not more sympathetic to the needs of the African people.

ATOMIC ENERGY

It was a fitting end to 1942 and a reassuring beginning to the New Year that the United States Atomic Energy Commission should have approved the draft plan for a nuclear reactor...

A PLEA FOR BALANCED FARMING

By J. F. LIPSCOMB, II. East African Conditions

WHAT is the position in East Africa? The answer is that the East African farmer is in a position of extreme difficulty. He is being asked to produce more and more of the same kind of crops, while the market for these crops is becoming increasingly restricted.

The fact is that the East African farmer is being asked to produce more and more of the same kind of crops, while the market for these crops is becoming increasingly restricted. This is a situation that is not only unfair to the farmer, but it is also unfair to the consumer.

The farmer must be given the opportunity to produce a wider variety of crops. This will allow him to meet the needs of the market more effectively. It will also allow him to diversify his income, which will help him to weather the inevitable fluctuations of the market.

The government must take steps to encourage the farmer to diversify his crops. This can be done by providing subsidies for the production of new crops. It can also be done by providing technical assistance to the farmer.

The farmer must also be given the opportunity to sell his crops in a more direct manner. This can be done by providing him with access to the market. It can also be done by providing him with the means to transport his crops to the market.

The farmer must also be given the opportunity to improve his land. This can be done by providing him with the means to irrigate his land. It can also be done by providing him with the means to fertilize his land.

The farmer must also be given the opportunity to improve his skills. This can be done by providing him with technical assistance. It can also be done by providing him with the means to access the market.

The farmer must also be given the opportunity to improve his income. This can be done by providing him with subsidies. It can also be done by providing him with the means to access the market.

The farmer must also be given the opportunity to improve his life. This can be done by providing him with the means to access the market. It can also be done by providing him with the means to improve his living conditions.

THE GARDEN BY NIGHT

"TREASURES OF DARKNESS"

Written and Illustrated

MARGARET MALCOMSON

In the brief passing moment between daylight and darkness which in East Africa we call "midnight," peace and tranquility descend upon the garden. There is a falling away of the bustle and confusion of the day. The trees have now thrown their fast heads of pollen. The birds have settled down. In the night and quietude the garden, which we know so well, fades away from our sight. The dark-colored flowers disappear, and the daisies and all the white-yellow and pale blue flowers emerge — the day flowers — and what appears to be an entirely new landscape.

Of the flowers which have great fragrance there are few that themselves emit and send around themselves — others such as the daisy family have gathered their petals together with iridescent strings, some fill with tiny flowers like buds folded together in prayer. These which have slept all day such as the fuchsia-flower and tobacco plants and which have looked on day and basked in the sun, straighten out their leaves and hold up their faces to the sky.

And ferns and candelabra, frangipani and white roses, the exquisite Yucca with its ivory bells and the white stary ferns shine radiantly in the dark and contribute much to the magic of the night plants. The summer-bone (moss-like) — for here, "its spring and summer all the year" glows brightly with silvery leaves and travellers for white while over it various beetles make safe paths for the foot.

The night garden is not restricted to the realm of the flowers only for night brings along with her other enchantments. Owlets arrive — frogs from Clonal Union — crickets and grasshoppers hide, night moths come and bees as they slowly search for any honey which the bees may have overlooked. Frogs fit to go and amongst the bloom looking the night watchman and his troops of sentry collect in and out of the bushes there go — into the Kelpie holes — over its top then away to the bush. Myriad they are called by the Kikuyu and they are sought for by small boys and girls who put them in their woolly heads where they shine like precious jewels. Some are set upon the arch of an eyebrow, some are worn spectacles-wise — an amazing sight if the night is a dark one.

With good reason, pressed down and rustling over, perfume filling flowers, bushes and trees, imported and indigenous, surround their fragrances to the night. Moon-flowers, Persian lilacs, night scented stocks and honeysuckle "whose origin large of scent and dew" mingle their fragrances with aromatic native bushes growing beyond the garden hedge. The Muntingtree, with its scented leaves, which only old men of the Kikuyu group or age may erry in their hands on their way to a party. The Muntingtree of the Kikuyu for dental purposes and the native "traveller's joy" well-known to all who have been on safari.

Unfortunately, all this wealth of beauty and perfume attracts admirers and marauders from the bush. The buck is perhaps the greatest offender. He comes at night, bringing his wife and family along with him — he destroys our choicest heads of our best roses — those ladies with aristocratic noses and long pedicures who after much care and coaxing had decided to live with us. Next on our list of criminals is the mole — he comes through a gap in the hedge — he tramples down the flower beds, he drags cuttings up by their roots, he cuts roses and shrubs so luxuriantly by drinking up the water in the tily pool!

In spite of the predaceous habits of such or so or any other pest, of which there are many, how good it is to step out into the garden in the darkness, to be amongst the sleeping and waking flowers, to breathe the music of the night, to breathe in the perfume, to see the shining of the Southern Cross above us with its arms extended as if in benediction, and to possess for ourselves the "treasures of darkness."

With in a WASH THE RASH WAS GONE

In the winter season some ants were busily employed in preserving their corn. A grasshopper, who had chanced to outlive the summer, approached them with great humility and begged for a grain of corn to relieve his hunger.

"How did you spend your time in the summer?" asked one of the ants. Elias replied, "I passed the time merrily in drinking, singing and dancing and never once thought of the winter."

"In that case," said the ant, "I have nothing to offer you!"

Farmers who enjoy themselves differently in their work all the year round will reap their reward in obtaining better crops.

"How did you get on?"
"Fine. I wasn't taking—just putting a 'Flak.'"
"Hard luck, old boy. Takes time to get your eye in."
"That's no excuse, particularly with cartridges at six a pop. I was shooting like a madman and a madman's eye."
"Oh, you weren't so bad."
"Don't be foolish, Donald. My loader never said a word, but I know what he was thinking."
"You did?"
"Yes. He was thinking that I might be all right at a dog's, or a hen's eye, but for raising eyebrows I need a reliable producer."
"What he was really thinking was that a certain amount of Rose's is the night before in a bad omen for the morning's phisians."
"But there wasn't any Rose's. I loaded differently then."
"How was he to know that? He sticks to his simple creed—if there was more Rose's Lime Juice there'd be less peppered heaters. And never to enter in the Game Book at the end of the day."

The Third Test ENGLAND'S BATTING FAILS HER No Real Advantage With Either Side

WITH the Third Test Match well completed here neither side has a definite lead for England—due to the failure of the batsmen to make big opportunities. After an exciting opening, for a first innings, the Englishmen were all out for 100, while Australia, whose opening pair increased their tally to 47, had 100 wickets to show at the close of the day.

At Australia with all their wickets to hand, the captain is bound to play a substantial score, before the pitch becomes worn. In England's batting, the batsmen are making extraordinary runs, but the captain is bound to play a substantial score, before the pitch becomes worn.

PRICE CONTROL
BICYCLES:
It is realized for general information that the price of bicycles has risen to a point where it is no longer possible to purchase a bicycle at a price which is within the reach of the majority of the population. It is therefore suggested that the Government should take steps to control the price of bicycles.
