Sir Vincent Glenday

It is seldom that the Daily Telegraph writes the Daily Government who is still on the active list seven under another Government. That is what is happening at Aden, where Sir Vincent Glenday, who was Governor of British Somaliland, is serving under Sir John Harbord, who has been appointed to succeed him. Sir Vincent Glenday has been in Aden for a year and has been in the middle of the war, and has been in the middle of the war, and has been in the middle of the war.

By never again thinking that a little case is harmless. Any rash in the skin, no matter how small, is a widespread gateway to germ of suppuration. It is difficult to explain. Yet against germ, this admirable 'Detonol' is especially more effective than any other.

Do not think that the efficiency of a germicide depends upon its unpleasant smell, strong staining color or poisonous nature. None of these properties are associated with the power to arrest the spread of infection.

The Future Of The African

After The War—What ?

It will be impossible, and I think unnecessary for me to repeat, to say that I have received considerable attention under my name appearing in the Kenya Press on the future of Africa. The average Britisher is gravely concerned with the future of Africa, and I think it is not surprising that the average Britisher should be so concerned. It is not surprising that the average Britisher should be so concerned with the future of Africa, and I think it is not surprising that the average Britisher should be so concerned.

A New Act

I have read every published statement on the subject, and I think it is not surprising that the average Britisher should be so concerned with the future of Africa, and I think it is not surprising that the average Britisher should be so concerned.

RAILWAY TRANSPORT

RAILWAY locomotives, which have handled the major portion of the world's rail traffic for the best part of a century, were invented and developed in Britain, and British steam trains are still the fastest and safest in the world.

Not least among the many other discoveries and inventions for which the world owes a debt to Britain, is the development of rayon by the firm of Courtauld.

It is almost entirely due to the enterprise shown by Courtauld that the development of rayon has advanced with such great strides. The pioneer work done by this British firm has been the means of creating a vast industry in England, the United States and other countries.

Today, rayon has won universal acceptance and admiration. As a factor in raising the standards of life and comfort Courtauld's rayon yarns, and the lovely fabrics made from it, deserve a prominent place in the regard of all lovers. The necessities of the war have restricted the available supply of Courtauld's rayons. But when victory is won, the results of inventing rayon work done by this British firm has been the means of creating a vast industry in England, the United States and other countries.
