Libertated Countries

It cannot be denied that one of the most vexing features of the progress of liberation taking place in Europe is the scattering of squabbling followers in the army of the victor, each contending for the spoils of the liberated countries. In Germany, there seems to spring immediate contention for the right to liberate the country.

Italy's concern is not always well expressed with the restoration of the status quo ante bellum. Poland, for example, is facing the great possibility of pressure from Russia to agree to the abandonment of her traditional demands. Russia with the object of keeping any western enemy well satisfied for her vital interests, may plead that she has the right to demand, but to attempt to please Poland—without the support of the British Government—would be to invite the possibility of German, and possibly of Italian, occupation. It is considered very much unlikely that the ELAS or guerrillas of the Greek mountains will be able to have 40,000 men under arms in a country which is being invaded by a superior force.

THINK

We are unable to appreciate the effects yet upon a people who have suffered every privation of a crushed and conquered land, not excluding the contempt of the people themselves. It is unlikely that those who furnished at great risk to their own liberation within their own countries, would be prepared to renounce the rights of governance which have been handed over to them. The same personation of the liberators, who have been at the head of the liberation, should have been anticipated. This alone would have helped sort out the nature of government desired when the order were restored. We seem to have left

The Changing Face of England

This is the sort of thing which is all at once being done in the name of the Times. At the little village of Littleton in Shropshire, a modern school building apparently made on an advanced plan with a slate roof. Underneath the present building, a plain white building of brick and stone stands the old school. The school is a fine example of the new type of school building. AL-BUSAID BI-CENTENARY CELEBRATIONS

(Transcript of the "Program" commencing)

AFTER days of intermittent heavy rain Zanzibar was finally blessed with weather for the day. The bi-centenary of the Al-Busaid Dynasty of Zanzibar was celebrated on the day with a program of events.

The program commencing with a meeting of the Government. After the meeting the Highnesses of the Al-Busaid Dynasty were present for the day.

The program continued with a meeting of the Government. After the meeting the Highnesses of the Al-Busaid Dynasty were present for the day.

DETTOL

"Tell me, doctor . . .
How can Dettol kill germs (and only) and yet allow the wound to heal?"

"Dettol" never fails to disinfect between germs and living tissue, although it is so similar to substances which are harmful to living tissue. It is so gentle that it does not hurt, it is so strong that it kills germs, it is so safe that it is used in an easy and safe procedure against infection and a refreshing way of personal hygiene.

Outside Aid Necessary

It is stated that the Government is planning for the post-war period and that it will be necessary to secure external financial help to carry out these plans. The statement also mentions that the Government is currently working on a development plan for the island.

Future Development

Further work is being done regarding future social and economic development. It is stated that the Government is planning for the post-war period and that it will be necessary to secure external financial help to carry out these plans.

Expenditure

On the expenditure side it would seem that with one or two general increases in the cost of living, the Government is planning for the post-war period and that it will be necessary to secure external financial help to carry out these plans.

HOUSING

We make no apology for returning once again to the subject of housing. It is a subject which has become so important to the public that it is not surprising that it has become a subject of public bodies that almost every other Government department is now engaged in some way or another in the housing of the people. GREECE

The sorry state of affairs in liberated Greece is one of the most regrettable side-shows of the war. The fact that we can say, and it could be said so long as the war continues, that it would be unwise to say dogmatically that the Greeks are a whole story behind it has not yet emerged, and the full facts are not yet known. Certainly there should be no question now of condemning the guerrillas out-of-hand, and we may take it that they are important to what they have done respectively to be the highest ideals and aspirations concerning the future of their country. Men do not fight for nothing, and certainly not men whom one would imagine, after years of Nazi oppression, to have had more than enough of strife and suffering already without deliberately seeking some more. Further, as has been pointed out, the Greeks are not doubt asking too much of the liberated European democracies to expect them to start their career again, merely in the same old and British world with newly defined and sweetly reasonable boundaries. It is not the next election in order to get the best of the world, but to be a proper and desirable aim will be after four or five years of blood and sweat of assistance and collaboration, of the kind which has been shown by our own people, and which we should expect our own people to understand, and which we should expect our own people to understand, and which we should expect our own people to understand.

GOODYEAR TYRES AND EXPERIENCE

Goodyear Tyres are the best. They are made in America. They are made in America. They are made in America.

... on the battlefields of the world are creating the tyres of tomorrow. Scientific knowledge learned from first-hand performance will produce a post-war Goodyear Tyre of even greater performance. For the present — keep check on pressures, alignment and speed, until the improved motoring conditions of tomorrow are here, bring in Goodyear Tyres on even greater reputation.
