In the intervening period, the Foreign Ministers' international armistice supervision program. Slight progress has been made and that, together with the moderate tone of the talks, will give a more optimistic outlook for the nine-week negotiations. What will be the climax of the talks will be the military reports of the Franco-Vietnam Command, Cambodia and the Vietminh. These were to be ready by today and they will be the first big task of the Foreign Ministers will be to study them.

Meanwhile, in London yesterday, Sir Winston Churchill conferred with his Cabinet for the third time in three days to give Ministers an outline of his Washington talks and to discuss the Indo-China situation. The other leaders are expected during the weekend. Reports that M. Mendes-Franco intends to return to Indochina have a private meeting before the start of the conference. # LONDON INVESTORS SEND SHARES SOARING

Indices at record levels

Special cable to the "East African Standard"

INVESTORS took the bit between their teeth in London last week and sent prices rocketing. The industrial average gained another 10 points at its highest level of 160, and the all-quoted index at its highest level of the year.

Prices were spread fairly evenly through the Equity List. The biggest were among the various producers, which always react more quickly to any change in gilt-edged yields. Rolls-Royce, for instance, rose 10 points to 71 1/2.

Some of the other big winners were the 100, 110 and 120 pound sterling bonds. The 100 pound sterling bond rose 1/2 to 110 1/2.

There was a suggestion, however, that the market was being "pumped" to some extent. The Government is taking no steps to curb the speculation.

Wiser investors have not forgotten, however, that the market is still a long way from being a permanent market. They are watching the market very closely.

There is little sign of improvement in the market for the time being. The market is still very volatile and is likely to remain so for some time.

It's a family affair

Travel and from the U.K. by the famous Safair Service. Airwork's most recent East African enterprise, is a real family outfit.

Although Airwork has been well-known for many years throughout East Africa, this service is only a relatively small part of the Company's interests in the United Kingdom, Airwork Limited, established in 1928, has long been known as a leader in private enterprise air transport.

The Airwork Organisation, apart from specialising in transport operations, includes divisions connected with repair, maintenance, modification purchase and sale of aircraft, administration of flying schools and clubs, radio sales and service and many other services.

The Airwork fleet includes jet-propelled and twin-engine aircraft as well as numerous smaller types, and is indeed as large and as modern as that of many of the world's major airlines.

Airwork's Limited hold large long-term contracts from the British Government, Admiralty and Air Ministry. The Company's aircraft are employed in troop-carrying between the Cape, Cairo, London, Rome, Athens, Rhodes and Larnaca, actually serving the Sudan Government and for great O.C. Companies and other large organisations.

On behalf of the Admiralty and Air Ministry the Company operates and maintains establishments for flying instructors, flying clubs and so on. Further the Company operates the largest private aircraft servicing and repair organisation in the United Kingdom.

The Christian Council of Kenya has planned schemes which will enable the people to play a major role in ending the Emergency and winning a free Kenya.

Mr. S. Morrison, general secretary of the Council, said in an interview that the schemes are for a long period which will co-operate with the authorities to spread Christianity through Kenya.

One special scheme will concentrate on African areas, another on Kikuyu women and another on Kikuyu women.

It is felt that the problem of Kikuyu women is a very serious one and that they need more political and economic help.

Always building a greater East Africa

Rolling stock is the life blood of any railway system. Constant wear and tear necessitates the regular replacement of both wagons and coaches. Increasing traffic demands additions to existing stock. Not since 1939 have East African Railways & Harbours been able to meet the full requirements of the travelling public and commerce.

This year, however, there is a quickening of the delivery of rolling stock. Some 268 new Passenger Coaches (33 of them the new 1st Class coaches) and 2,893 new Goods Wagons will be in service on all sections of the system. Already the first batch is arriving in the East African ports from manufacturers in the United Kingdom.

Gleaming new passenger coaches of all three classes to provide standards of comfort previously unknown in East Africa... study new goods wagons, not only to satisfy present needs, but to meet the expected increase in freight traffic over the next few years... month by month, the life blood of the Railway flows more strongly.

FOREIGN POLICY REVIEW BY SIR WINSTON

ber meeting of the United States General Assembly, should in principle, China would not be given priority.

The Prime Minister spoke of the "extraordinary perseverance" of Mr. Chamberlain, and said that the Government would do its utmost to make the prospect of a more stable situation in the East.

Replying to Mr. Atlee's suggestion that the Government should make other arrangements to make the situation in the East more satisfactory, Sir Winston said that he had already asked the House and to present him with a more satisfactory situation.

Sees Canal problem

The Prime Minister first turned to the question of the Suez Canal. He said: "Discussions with the Egyptian Government have been resumed but no statement can be made at present. I am very doubtful that negotiations by other means would result in anything but the same result as the one which has already taken place."

Future of Formosa

After referring that Mr. Chamberlain had referred to Formosa, Mr. Atlee said: "I am not sure that we get a straight answer as to what the American position is. Mr. Atlee pointed out that this is a very important question. This would seem to give a great accession to the territory of Germany without any loss of territory to Germany. There is a real danger that Germany will be able to get her hands on Formosa. Provisions for control should be made."

Armaments danger

After Sir Winston had referred to Germany and the British and American proposals, Mr. Atlee pointed out that this is a very important question. This would seem to give a great accession to the territory of Germany without any loss of territory to Germany. There is a real danger that Germany will be able to get her hands on Formosa. Provisions for control should be made.

China's position

Mr. Chamberlain said that the Chinese position was a very difficult one. He said that the Chinese Government had a right to be satisfied with the present situation. He said that the Chinese Government had a right to be satisfied with the present situation.

The history of East Africa began with the building of the railways and harbours, and the country developed as a railroad spread. Today, despite difficulties and uncertainties, the Railways and Harbours are undertaking many very important projects. They are building for the future because they are confident that systems and property lie ahead for East Africa.

W. AFRICAN TERRITORIES TO FORM OWN ARMIES

Local 'Sandhurst' recommended

BRITAIN'S four West African territories are to have their own armies—and West African officers probably will pass through a local "Sandhurst". In future, these and other recommendations are contained in the "Report of the West African Forces Conference", just published in London. The conference was held a year ago.

Since the recommendations were first made privately, they have been closely studied by the British Government and the Governments of Nigeria, the Gold Coast, Sierra Leone and the Gambia, and have been accepted. ## SILENCE THE BEST FORM OF SERVICE

'Too much said by too many'

MRS. PANDIT, president of the United Nations General Assembly, called for an atmosphere of peace, tolerance and understanding in which the labours of the world's scientists for peace could be fruitful. She was speaking at a luncheon held for her honour by the Indian Journalists' Association of Britain.

"I believe that there is a time of silence in the best form of service. I believe that much of the trouble today is because too many people speak too many words."

"I think that now the world is so delicately balanced on the brink of a precipice, when it is hanging as it were on the thread of silence, that any noisy reaction led by an act of thoughtlessness, that it is up to all of us to be as careful as we can of our words when we speak and the sentiment we express."

Speaking of the Commonwealth Mrs. Pandit said that she believed in its value. In the present age, no one could afford to be indifferent in its value. She said the Commonwealth should share a great many things in common and would like to see the world map being extended in a much more rapid way than the world as it is today. She said that the world map should be one world that is being made.

LESLEY CLAY writes on HOMES AND GARDENS OF KENYA

A HOUSE which would be unusual in any country is that of Mr. and Mrs. D. Q. Erskine in Hiver-drive, Nairobi.

For many years plans were discussed for the sort of home they would like to live in, plans which had to remain in the limbo due to war-time building restrictions. The building of the wooden house in which they now live was hurried down in the first months of the war. Mr. and Mrs. Erskine were compelled to live in their stables for six years.

In 1943, Dr. E. May, the architect, drew up preliminary sketch plans which embodied many of the Erskines' original ideas. The marble-floored hall, the staircase, and the master's gallery, with its winged figure, were laid out specially from the start, when the war was over, plenty of light, ventilation, and many windows were introduced.

A start was made on the domestic wing of the house in 1946, and Mr. and Mrs. Erskine lived there for four years before they were able to move in to the main portion. The working drawings and supervision of the construction of the building was carried out by Messrs. Blackburne.

Twenty tons of marble were imported from Southern Italy for the floor and walls of the hall. Other floors and the workbench round the balcony are of marble, with the exception of those in the dining-room and main bedrooms where a new kind of cork tile has been used, giving warmth and quietness. A series of parabolic arches throughout the house are supported by four red brick pillars which leads into the hall. Notable features here are a hand-some Regency table, a big oak sideboard, and a large picture which were reputedly taken from a stables in early times and a very old grandfather clock. The family crest has pride of place over the doorway, which remains in the house, which is a trait of Mr. Erskine's ancestor, Francis Quiller, of the King's Dragoon Guards, a notable explorer and reputed to have been the first British settler in Kenya. A grand piano stands on a raised platform at this end of the room, part of its cabinet was constructed from antique.

At the far end of the huge living-room is a novel, circular fireplace. This, in reality, the "family corner," comprising a big settee made in four separate pieces, covered in brightly colored evergreen chairs, and its matching armchairs. The fireplace windows are another unusual feature of the house.

Next to it is the dining-room where emphasis is laid on the Cupboard table and chairs. Mrs. Erskine's grandmother, a spinster, had a "sugar" room which door opens into the kitchen quarters, and a small sun porch divides the lounge from the dining-room. Opposite the sun porch is a neat little scarf-painted bar set off by wrought-iron gates.

Leading from the dining-room is a big verandah with a built-in circular conservatory. Also on this floor is the library, the woodwork designed in the same place suitable for its pillars. The handsome Jacobean curtains are a souvenir of Mrs. Erskine's old Devonshire home.

A glass panel terminates a passage from which leads to a self-contained guest wing, decorated in fresh setting-green. upstairs is a balcony-terrace which overlooks the front-planted terrace. Mrs. Erskine's little study boasts some old and valuable pieces of china, a Sheraton mahogany cabinet, and two carved monk's chests. The furniture in the big study and room was made in Italian Sicily from olive wood in the main bedroom the furniture is mahogany, the full-length wardrobe doors being made of birch glass.

The whole property, amounting to a stone wall has been built, has recently been built to 20 acres, the garden is fully shaded with flowering shrubs and the lawn terrace will be covered by many shades of bougainvillea. A broad sweep of drive surrounds the big central flower bed planted with all-white shrubs.

APPOINTED GOVERNOR OF UGANDA

★ Extracts from Chapter 194— Uganda: 1935—1940

On October, 1935, we arrived in Uganda and I was sworn in as Governor under a state of pleasant excitement at taking over the duties of an independent country.

My first business was to visit the various districts, and to see the work of the various departments of the Government.

The Uganda Revenue Department was the largest and most important of the departments. It was responsible for the collection of the various taxes and duties.

There is a book for every dog lover. It tells the story of a man who loved dogs and how he spent his life with them.

Why do millions of dogs love their masters? It is because they are so loyal and so devoted.

Well, for one thing, it is almost impossible for a dog to be unkind to his master.

What is in a dog's mind? It is a world of its own, but it is always in tune with the world of its master.

... and that's Bob Martin condition!

NEW POLITICAL PARTY FORMED IN KENYA

Members coming forward

Ministers among sponsors

A new political body, known as the United Country Party, has been formed in Kenya by a group of Europeans who believe that the right course for the Colony's future is a Government broadly based on co-operation among the main races.

The new party will support the retention of the status quo in the constitution and the present system of government, but it will not support the proposal for a new constitution which would give the African a majority of seats in the Legislative Council.

The party has the following aims: To respect the law, to promote the stability of the Colony's internal affairs, to protect the political and economic interests of all races, to support the policy of multi-racial Government, and to defend the interests of the Government.

The party's first action will be to elect a committee to draft a constitution. It will then present this to the Government for consideration.

The initial response to the new United Country Party was stated on Tuesday to be "thoroughly satisfactory" by Mr. Norman Harris, Minister for the South.

COUNTRY GROUP MAY SPLIT KENYA IN TWO

Col. G. G. GHERSIE, Minister for Nairobi, issued a statement during last weekend on the formation of a new United Country Party in Kenya. He stated that the party had been formed by the sponsors of the multi-racial Government, but that it had no intention of becoming a Government.

The statement read: "The Government has only been formed on the basis of an agreement that it would not become a Government. It is the intention of the Government to remain a Government and not to become a Government."

THE initial response to the new United Country Party

was stated on Tuesday to be "thoroughly satisfactory." Mr. Nyerere, Minister for Nairobi South, one of the six founder-sponsors, said: "The party has been in existence only four days but its action is good. Things are coming along very nicely and we are busily enrolling founder-members."

Mr. Nyerere said that one of the party's initial tasks would be to set up a full-time committee to coordinate the party's work. It was likely that the party would be formed out of a public conference.

Not yet justified

"My views have not changed since then and are as follows: One of the most important things that I envisaged a period of time for the formation of the party in order to give the country time to reorganize itself in the emergency, and to build up the economic strength of Kenya, so much more important to the ordinary citizen than political advance."

Rallying point

"You have to harness the energy and enthusiasm of the people, and to make it obvious that, at the present time, the people are in a state of confusion. It is a rallying point for the people to see that the Government is not yet justified."

Veterinary School Has Room For More Students

By Lesley Clay

At work in the bacteriological laboratory, practical work with microscope.

A SMALL car drove up outside the clinic of Makerere College Veterinary School at Kabele and from it stepped a young woman, her small son and a large black dog.

A patient at the quail diagnosis bench where preliminary examinations are made.

Students relax in their hostel preparation room.

The three students who made the examination and subsequent diagnosis are taking their final two years' course at the Clinical Veterinary School of Makerere College situated at Kabele. Having completed their first four years of Veterinary Science at Makerere College, Kampala, they come to the clinical school at Kabele to complete their studies in the departments of pathology, in the animal clinic and medicine, and on the farms attached to the school. At present there are five students taking the course but the Dean, Professor T. T. de Waard, hopes to increase the intake at classes of 15 to 20.

At yet, a career in veterinary science does not hold as much incentive for Africans as that of medicine, law, or engineering, while conditions of service have not as far been made attractive enough to counterbalance this attitude. When at the end of the course the students qualify for a diploma in Veterinary Science, posts as African Veterinary Officers in the three Territories, Zambia and Nyasaland, are open to them. It is hoped, however, that the school may develop to the stage when its graduates will be registered locally as veterinary surgeons and already under the new Veterinary Act of Kenya it is possible for a man holding a diploma in Veterinary Science of East Africa, after a number of years' experience, to obtain a licence to practise veterinary surgery in Kenya.

Mrs. R. M. Simpson and Mr. H. Barrett looking over the Echo film.

Mr. Barrett, Reader in Animal Husbandry, instructs students on the Quinary herd.

Mr. Barrett, the expert on animal husbandry. The farm buildings are of simple design so that they can easily be built by Africans, and the farm is stocked with a small variety of stock and some Friesian cattle, a breed which is common to higher altitudes in East Africa. Students are shown how to feed animals on materials which have no value for human nutrition.

On the recreational side, students have their own hall, library and bedrooms. In their spare-time they play draughts and table tennis, and there are many chess, basketball, magazine and picture galleries by the British Council. It would be difficult to find a better equipped university in East Africa, for there are no teaching hospitals anywhere in the region. There is an artificial swimming pool at the Veterinary Laboratories. There is an artificial swimming pool close by and at the Ash River Meat Commission excellent examples of hygienic food preservation. There is also a recreation ground for African Reserve standards in the vicinity of the school.
