Compulsory licensed membership recommended THE VOICE FOR FARMING Plan to give K.N.F.U. new authority New Governor arrives today

IF the Kenya National Farmers' Union is to take on the responsibility of a national agricultural organisation, advising the Minister on all matters concerning agriculture, it must be based on the individual farmer with a membership of at least 100 per cent of all farmers as possible. This is emphasised in a statement issued by the K.N.F.U. yesterday, giving details of the proposed reorganisation of the union which was contained in its evidence to the Committee on the Organisation of Agriculture, of which the chairman is Sir Donald MacGillivray.

Strongly supporting the contention of the working party set up by the agricultural industry that there was an urgent need for a national organisation which could establish a central to the future well-being of agriculture in Kenya.

Annual licence fee

It is recommended that the system of voluntary membership with yearly subscription of £5 should be abolished and that all farmers of all races, owning 20 acres or more, should pay a licence fee of £10 a year. This would automatically make them union members.

The K.N.F.U. also suggests that a cess should be levied on all produce marketed through statutory boards and on all produce marketed to provide it with an adequate income.

The statement adds that the Minister must assign to the organisation the responsibility of advising him on all matters concerning agriculture, including advice on the present structure of local production.

The K.N.F.U. stated it is the only organisation, independent of Government, which has been established to represent the interests of farmers in the Colony.

It states that the union must have a sufficient income to enable it to employ the staff and to carry out its duties. It also states that the union must have a sufficient income to enable it to employ the staff and to carry out its duties.

The K.N.F.U. executive has also suggested the provision of some special funds to be used for the benefit of the farmers who are unable to pay for their membership.

Mr. Blundell explains Group's views
SUPPORT FOR GENERAL PRINCIPLES ON LAND

The following statement on land policy in Kenya was issued yesterday by Mr. Michael Blundell, leader of the New Kenya Group.

Now that the Government has made it clear that it has no intention of departing from the policy of selling land to tenants and control of agricultural land in the recent future, the New Kenya Group has decided to support the proposals in the Paper, on the general principle that the African people can be supported by the African people.

There are details, especially with regard to the organization and functions of the Land Commission, which are being discussed in the Paper, and these are being considered by the Government. The proposals, however, are free from their present legislative basis. The Government is largely in the hands of the Land Commission.

It is difficult to see why they are attached to a more flexible land policy, to be held in the hands of the Land Commission, and some of the proposals are being discussed in the Paper.

No complications

On November 1st, an approach was made to the Secretary of State, and the Government would agree in the interest of a more flexible land policy, to be held in the hands of the Land Commission, and some of the proposals are being discussed in the Paper.

The Government has agreed to these proposals, and the Government has agreed to these proposals, and the Government has agreed to these proposals.

Only the VANGUARD paces pure jets at turbo-prop cost on short and medium haul routes

LONDON-NAMBURO 470 miles in 2 hours 13 minutes at 300 m.p.h. ... LONDON-LONDON 1 hour 25 minutes (including a G.A. approach) ... PARIS-LONDON 56 minutes (A.T.C. delay), headwinds 5 m.p.h.

A further result of this speed/light flexibility is a very low cost differential between runnings at widely differing altitudes. On a 100-mile run, the difference between cruising at 10,000 ft. and 20,000 ft. (the most economical) is only $44. On the Rome-London flight the ten minute stacking over Rome—due to heavy traffic—would have cost $19 with a pure jet. With the VANGUARD which stacked low, the cost was only $44.

On short and medium haul only an exceptionally fast jet could beat VANGUARD block times. No jet can compare with its remarkable operating economy. No jet can compare with its cheap-fare potential.

SIR ALEC was in his dressing-room when I called to see him at a well-known London theatre. He folded me sit down and, after offering a cigarette, asked me to proceed with my questions.

Do you enjoy acting? Yes, on the whole, I enjoy it intensely when things appear to go well and my character "comes to life" for a few moments but I get deeply depressed and a little nervous when I find I am unable to do what I feel I ought to be able to do.

What's your answer to the question of your own satisfaction? I find I am not too far from trying to act like someone where between my interest in life and people, a desire to be interesting and my own satisfaction. I do not mind what I find out of my own mind, but I do mind what I find out of my own mind.

FAMILY LIFE Are you married? I am very happily married to the same wife for 23 years and hope and expect to remain this way.

What do you wish? About 100. I wish I had more money. I wish I had more money. I wish I had more money.

Sir Alec interviewed on career

TERENCE FEELY in a recent interview with Sir Alec Guinness in London talks about his likes and dislikes as an actor and as a private individual.

Do you like your work? I wouldn't say I love it, but I do like it. I like the fact that I can do it for a living and that I can do it for a living and that I can do it for a living.

Do you ever wish you were a different kind of person? I wish I was a different kind of person. I wish I was a different kind of person.

Film Fare A CHOICE FOR ALL TASTES

The new films in Nairobi are the best selection for some time, including a real quality in a few weeks. They include a musical, British drama, American comedy, a war film and—of course—a Western.

SOUTH PACIFIC (American), directed by Joshua Logan, with Mimi Foy, Rosano Brazzi and Alan Lister. A musical musical adapted from Rodgers and Hammerstein's phenomenal Broadway hit and London stage success.

It tells of the romantic attachment between a British soldier and a New Guinea girl. The film is in the best style for the theatre and is a very fine example of the old-fashioned musical.

WAR WOUNDS (American), directed by John Huston, with Burt Lancaster and Robert Montgomery. A war film which is a brilliant example of the old-fashioned war film.

THE BRIDE AND THE GROOM (American), directed by John Huston, with Burt Lancaster and Robert Montgomery. A war film which is a brilliant example of the old-fashioned war film.

REALISTIC VIEW ON SALARIES

Do you think film stars are overpaid? The question is a hardy annual and, always fervent when the British film industry faces a crisis, it is usually asked in London, and more often in Hollywood, when they have had a very successful year.

Following the lead of the London and London British wholesale fashion houses, the Fashion Group of London are now offering their own line of silk fabrics.

That group, by the way, which is helping to second half-yearly Fashion Week in London next spring, has represented leading London manufacturers.

These new lines are exciting to go into because they are the first new lines of silk fabrics to be made in Britain since the war.

United Kingdom silk weavers, spinners and finishers will be busy to make the silk fabrics to be made in Britain in the next few months.

COOKERY CORNER

By ALEX SIMMONS

WHAT the potato is to the West, the rice is to the East. So what a pity it is that the best vegetable is so often associated with the least desirable brown-stained stuff served up in an embarrassed air of shoddiness.

The truth is that rice almost never does an enemy's work and is delicious in itself. Rejuvenating it is not so difficult as you are apt to think. Try the following:

Plain Pilau or Pilau — The rice is cooked in a different but the same way.

It is good as a dish on its own and since so many people do not like rice, it is a pity it is not more widely used. It is a simple and also very cheap meal.

To make Plain Pilau, take two ounces of onion and try to get a small amount of green peas. Cook the rice in a little water with a pinch of salt and a little oil. When the rice is cooked, add the onion and peas and cook for a few minutes.

Now remove it from the fire and add a little butter (optional) and a little salt. The bottom of a moderate oven is a good place to keep it for a few minutes before serving.

Just before we begin with the recipe for lamb pilau, we should mention that the rice should be more than twice as much as the meat.

Modern Type — It is a natural beauty that is full of courage and love. And perhaps the reason why it is still adored by so many men today is because they have not forgotten the whole of her — not just the body, but the mind and the heart.

TAILORS ADVISE WEARERS TO RING THE CHANGES

By B. Fields
THIS may sound like a tall order by tailors to hand lay in a supply of new styles. It is nevertheless a matter of fact that tailors will tell you that any suit needs a rest or it will require a "major rest" for days at a stretch, in the frequent sanctuary of a tailor's shop.

Ready-made trend
The pioneer of ready-made clothes was Thomas Young, a London tailor who founded a ready-made business in 1830 and was one of the first to use a sewing machine. He was followed by other tailors who used the sewing machine to make ready-made clothes.

Long history
The sewing-machine revolution in the clothing industry in Britain or across the continent is a long one. It dates back to the late 18th century when the sewing machine was first invented. The sewing machine revolution in the clothing industry in Britain or across the continent is a long one.

GREEDY GOAT LOSES HIS BELL

By ROHINA WINTER

LITTLE HIPPY was a young lilly goat just loved eating. He was always running out the green grass and the sweet things to eat, so that he grew stronger and bigger than all the other young goats in the valley.

"We must make Little Hippy the leader of the new herd," said the farmer. He bought a silver bell and fastened it to Little Hippy's neck. "Now all the goats will hear his bell and follow you, Little Hippy," the farmer said. "You need your bell to lead them to the good grass and to keep them safe from every night."

PAINT OUR PICTURE, send it to the Publisher Editor with your name and address to THE PICTURE BOOK, P.O. Box 3088, New York, N.Y.

It did not notice that it was getting dark and that all were following their leader home.

Every morning, Little Hippy went to the green grass and then away down the mountain. One day, however, when he was coming home at the evening, he had found the silver bell had been taken away from the green grass.

"I can't see where it has been," said Little Hippy. "I'll look for it." He went to the green grass and then away down the mountain. He was looking for the silver bell when he saw a fox.

"I want you to look for Little Hippy," said the fox. "He has lost his bell and is looking for it. If you find it, I will give you a very good reward."

"I will do it," said Little Hippy. "I will look for the silver bell and if I find it, I will give you a very good reward."

"This won't do," thought Little Hippy. "I'll look for it in the valley. I'll look for it in the valley. I'll look for it in the valley."

One day he managed to look for the silver bell. He found it in the valley. He found it in the valley. He found it in the valley.

"I'll look for it in the valley," said Little Hippy. "I'll look for it in the valley. I'll look for it in the valley."

959 MOTOR SHOW

World's latest cars present an exciting choice for the motorist

By PETER MERRIT

THIS year's London Motor Show will go down as the most colourful, the most representative and the most exciting in its 44 years' history.

Never has such a galaxy of motive gems from the giant lines of mass production been gathered together before. In fact the problems that really confronts the visitor as he steps inside Earls Court is — where do I start?

More than 70 different cars on the stands of 40 manufacturers. More than 5,000 exhibitors have combined to present an unrivalled display of cars, tyres, transport service types, accessories and components, equipment, cravans and light trailers for the motorist.

For the first time there are cars from Russia on display, besides those from Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Netherlands, Sweden and Switzerland.

The show is the show of the world's motor industry, the show of the world's motor industry, the show of the world's motor industry. It is Britain's own show, for at no other time has there been such a demand for cars abroad as British cars.

A British vehicle is manufactured at the rate of one every four seconds. One

'Streets ahead' in battle for export markets

By STANLEY BLANK, Chief Executive, The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders.

THERE are more than 150,000 miles of classified roads in Britain and upon an average mile of these roads there are more than 40 vehicles running. Britain is a highly industrialized country where transport of raw materials, finished products, foodstuffs and people is of the utmost importance to the nation's life.

To this end the British commercial vehicle industry produces vehicles to carry loads ranging from cement to livestock, bricks to motor-cars, timber to sacks.

Whatever the load, there is a British vehicle to carry it. They are adapted to suit any road, any weather, any terrain, any climate, any load, and any other, and as such are in the same or higher class and better performing than their dual-rated counterparts.

VARIOUS TYPES

In 1958 the British motor industry produced nearly 312,000 vans, trucks and coaches, worth a total average production of more than £100 million. Of the total number produced, 112,000 were exported to bring in £22,000,000. Great Britain, of European motor manufacturing, produces the greatest number of commercial vehicles, her 1958 export figure was a per cent higher than that of her nearest rival, Western Germany, and almost three times greater than that of France.

What are the reasons for this success? The preference for British-built commercial vehicles is the fact that British make vehicles of all specifications, capable of operating over almost every type of terrain and in almost every climatic condition.

British vehicles are tested in the research departments of the individual manufacturers, they are often proved in rugged test conditions overseas and in equipped form on the roughest of roads. They undergo stringent trials on 12 miles of special tracks and on surfaces at the Motor Industry Research Association's proving ground near Nuneaton, Warwickshire.

UTMOST STRAIN

This association is maintained by all British motor manufacturers, in a co-operative basis, and upon the tracks of the proving ground, motor-vehicles are tested to their limits to determine their performance in the roughest terrain in operation. The finished vehicle is given test runs on sections of the road from which it is intended to operate. The test consists of a 100-mile run on the road, and upon completion of the run the vehicle undergoes a series of further tests. These include a 100-mile run on a road, and upon completion of the run the vehicle undergoes a series of further tests. REMARKABLE EXPANSION MADE BY INDUSTRY DURING POST-WAR YEARS

SINCE the end of the Second World War a remarkable expansion has taken place within Britain's motor industry. Today it plays a vital role in the national economy.

In 1958 the total value of all products exported by British motor industry amounted to £240,000,000, nearly 15 per cent of Britain's total export earnings for that year. Further, the industry's importance as an employer of labour may be gauged from the fact that between 400,000 and 500,000 people are today engaged in its work in all ranges of industrial activity associated with the manufacture of motor vehicles of all kinds.

During 1958 the industry produced more than 1,000,000 cars, and of these more than 200,000 were shipped abroad. Both these figures contrast strongly with the 241,000 cars produced and 58,000 exported during 1950.

The post-war expansion story of the British motor industry would not have been possible but for the vision and enterprise of its founders who, realising the tremendous opportunities offered to them in the world's markets reopened shortly after the war, set vast and far-reaching programmes of modernisation and expansion involving a capital outlay of many millions of pounds.

Plans involving a total of £150,000,000 were undertaken by a few of Britain's leading motor manufacturers alone, and it is estimated that a similar sum is involved in the unannounced schemes of other British manufacturers of vehicles and their component and accessories.

A large proportion of this vast capital outlay was used to modernise production techniques to enlarge existing plants or build brand new factories, and to install in them the very latest machinery.

FINEST RESEARCH

In an age of rapid technological progress research is of paramount importance. Individual manufacturers have spent large sums on general research and specific development projects and many of the latest manufacturers have set up their own research laboratories and testing facilities in their factories to complement tests carried out under actual road and climatic conditions abroad. Moreover, the entire British motor industry maintains on a collective basis, the first research laboratory and vehicle proving ground in Europe situated at Lincoln near Nuneaton. The Motor Industry Research Association (M.I.R.A.)

PEYER LINCOLN writes on post-war developments in the British motor industry and its vital role in the national economy.

manufacturers a considerable amount of time and money by making the duplication of designs.

Activities of M.I.R.A. are widely deemed to be the improvement of the economy, performance, reliability, safety and comfort of British motor vehicles of all types.

Special emphasis is laid on economy and performance, two closely related aspects, for the majority of British vehicles has been built for their chief selling fields both at home and overseas markets.

that are likely to be the operating in any part of the world.

Practically every British prototype is drawn to meet in 1959 to 1970 for over a 2,000,000 cars to be used in "overseas" markets.

GAS TURBINE

The development of the disc brake from its original form as a direct drive system, leading to sport cars to the development of the world's first 1,000 h.p. turbine car, the development of automatic and semi-automatic gear boxes and small cars - the results achieved by British motor research, development and testing, is however, only one aspect of the surprising expansion.

Quality controls begin with raw materials

Quality controls begin with raw materials. The production of a motor vehicle is a complex process that involves the use of a wide variety of materials. The quality of these materials is crucial to the overall quality of the vehicle. The text discusses the importance of quality control at every stage of the production process, from the selection of raw materials to the final assembly of the vehicle.

ITALIANS SUPREME IN SHAPE AND STYLE

By ROBERT HARLING

THE Morris 1000 has a reputation for its reliability. 700 a year engine, yet the motor from outer space would scarcely give more than from a comparison of these alternatives.

And who would declare that the Morris 1000 is a magical car, suitable for conditions of the tropics?

Each has applied the lessons of these countries from its own. Yet the resulting shapes of their cars are a very different result, structurally different.

The truth is that the question of these is heavily involved with questions and qualities of these cars.

AUSTERE CHALLENGE

Part of the trouble is due to the fact that both the mechanical structure of the engine and the chassis come under the general heading of the word 'Italian' in its original connotation.

Over upon a time, 'Italian' was a word that came to mean a certain type of car, but it has since become a word of style that has made the shape of the car as well as the shape of the people.

It is significant that Mr. John Bull, who is responsible for the design of the Bullfinch and the Bullfinch Model 8, is known as 'Coco', a name which may mean 'Coco'.

Mr. Bullfinch's chief challenge is to make a car that is as good as any other car, but it is not a car that is as good as any other car.

Americans awaken to new trends

By JOHN BAKER

THE United States automotive industry is busy assembling its greatest array of new cars for presentation in 1960.

Consumers like to shop potential buyers with such a wide choice of models that sales will reach the highest total since record-breaking 1959.

The big manufacturers face a year of stiff competition both among themselves and with the mounting numbers of foreign makes trying to take over a slice of the rich American market.

Makers of conventional American cars — long line Chevrolet and Ford — are entering the market for the first time in the coming year with their own versions of smaller, more compact cars.

The new car has performed admirably for British, Canadian, French and Italian manufacturers, as well as for the makers of the American-built Buick and Ford.

Each of the Big Three of the motor industry — General Motors, Ford and Chrysler — had an even entry in the compact car market for 1960.

Each will be offering a variety of new models, and really the price range is wider than ever before. Whether the "average" car will be a more sophisticated model is still uncertain.

Some manufacturers believe the time has come when they will take a major share of the market in the compact car field, but it is still uncertain.

Twenty-two cars of all makes, both large and small, left Mau Narok at the start of the Rift Valley Motor Sports Club Annual Rally. Behind all the thrills and dangers of motor racing there is always a search for better and safer driving for the ordinary Trophy. RACING SUCCESSES MEAN BETTER CARS FOR THE PUBLIC

Few people outside the motor industry realise the vital importance of famous motor races and road trials to consumer production, writes P. DeLina.

Yet it is the man to the street who, in the long run, benefits from the results of the hard-fought competitions which provide unique opportunities of testing engines under gruelling conditions and proving the quality of car design and performance.

It is this, too, which British successes in 1959 have given such a fillip to the motor industry. For statistics like these bring high prestige and sporting interest.

Among recent successes is that of the new Aston Martin

DBRA Formula 1 car which, driven by Dennis Moore on the Northern Irish Circuit — particularly at the Ulster Grand Prix in June this year. On June 8 Aston Martin's DBRA took first and second places in the Le Mans 24-hour race with Roy Salvadori and an American, Carroll Shelby, respectively at the wheel.

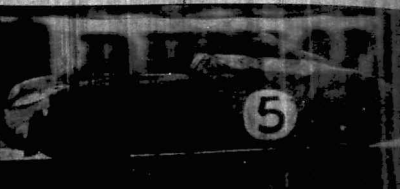

EXACTING RALLY

In May the International Trophy Race at Silverstone was won by a British two and a half litre re-arranged Formula 1 Cooper Climax, driven by Jack Brabham, the Australian champion, who was followed into second place by the new British Grand Prix challenger Aston Martin two and a half litre DBRA. Driven by its ace, the Aston Martin achieved the fastest lap of the race at 110.5 mph. Its first appearance on the race track.

On the same day Sirling Moss drove an Aston Martin 2.7 litre DBRA coupe to victory in the Grand Touring Car Race at the Monaco Grand Prix and at Silverstone. The Cooper Climax was again triumphant at the Monaco Grand Prix and at the Dutch Grand Prix at Zandvoort, with Jack Brabham at the wheel.

The 1959 2500 miles Dutch Continental Touring Rally in April, one of the most exacting big European car rallies, was won outright by a British Triumph TR6A.

The results of these successes will be embodied in the cars of the future. It is in this way that the motor industry has made gains that will continue to be felt on racing cars, but how soon on many other cars.

Although the vastness of its export markets must always be kept in mind, the policies of Britain's motor industry — of the 1,000,000 cars produced in 1959 over 487,000 were exported as compared to 68,000 in 1955 — the needs of the individual user have an enormous influence on the increasing research and development which proceeds in the leading firms in the industry. Of these the most who work in a family or sports car is probably the most important.

Today the demand is not only for a first-class engine in a well-designed and comfortable car but also for an economical and simpler vehicle which is easier to drive, hence the development of various fully and semi-automatic transmission systems.

SPECIAL FACTORY

The most recent and outstandingly interesting automatic transmission system was demonstrated for the first time at the Geneva Motor Show by Smith and Sons (England) Ltd. who have built a special factory at Wilney in Oxfordshire, to manufacture their automatic transmission. This is suitable for the lower-powered cars which are personally driven by a single person and which are equipped with a 1200 cc. engine. It is a fully automatic system which transmits fully the entire braking power of the normal transmission system.

NO EXTREMES

The new two-litre power Triumph Herald for example has a steering column of a type which collapses on heavy impact, thus avoiding what is often termed as heavy steering. Another feature of the Herald is its close-fitting companion. Body repairs can be easily and cheaply effected by the removal and replacement of entire sections of panels.

Better road performance can be obtained by a better aerodynamic shape and a new body styling has made many current models most attractive not only to home buyers but also to those foreign motorists, as is proved by the orders.

The industry in general has adopted an interesting course by achieving better things by keeping with modern trends and improved car performance without losing a sense of production or going to the extreme which would make a car look out of fashion too quickly.

Finally, two big masses... above, the new V8 shown at Earl's Court for the first time. Below, the new French challenger, the COU 12 which is being built at the Bugatti works. It has a six-cylinder engine with three gears while the bore is in plastic with a removable head. The car can do 50 miles to the gallon and is said to be capable of 100 m.p.h.
