CHANGES IN E.D.C. RESOLUTELY OPPOSED France faces test at Brussels talks

FIVE NATIONS CRITICISE MODIFICATION PLAN

WHEN the six European Defence Community countries began their talks in Brussels yesterday, the French plan for modifying the European Army scheme, the French Prime Minister, M. Mendes-France, was faced with what is probably the stiffest battle of his whirlwind career.

The French suggestions for toning down the European Army scheme in ways more palatable to the French Deputies are being met with a cold reception by the other E.D.C. partners. A hint of the heavy criticism that is to come was given in a hour's talk which Mendes-France had with the Belgian Foreign Minister, M. Spaak, speaking for Italy, West Germany, Holland and Luxembourg as well as his own country, Belgium before he was plain-spoken in attacking the French scheme.

According to the Dutch Foreign Minister, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and the other three Benelux countries are unanimous in their attitude towards E.D.C. The Italians are said to be "full of fight," while West Germany is hostile to the more important of the French proposals.

Observers in Brussels commented that M. Mendes-France, who had earlier successes over Indo-China, Tunisia and the "New Deal" programme at home, must have had some suspicion for success over E.D.C. in Brussels.

Terrorism flares up in Tunisia

POLICE reported yesterday that terrorism had flared up in two isolated parts of Tunisia, south of Sfax and near the Algerian border.

The Sfax area has been the scene of a series of attacks on the roads and in the towns. The police are said to be working to make the roads safe and to bring the terrorism to an end.

Mineral deposits at present largely uneconomic

Water power will remedy Congo coal shortage

THE Belgian Congo, one of the world's largest producers of essential raw materials, is short of vital product to feed her booming mining industry. Fortunately, she has substituted.

The Estima region in the north-west is the only mining area for copper, gold, iron and manganese. It is rich in coal, but the coal is of such a low grade that it is not economical to export. It is, however, the only source of water power in the country's north-west. It is estimated that there are 100,000 horsepower in the Estima region.

TANGANYIKA SURVEY REPORT

MINERAL deposits in Tanganyika just fail to make good, are so largely uneconomic or otherwise unworkable at present to become an economic proposition, according to the Geological Survey Department's report for last year. While no spectacular discoveries were made, the report adds, progress had been made in the knowledge of existing deposits and the distribution of known mineral resources.

The report comments that, regarding mineral resources, the country is rich in coal and iron, but the coal is of such a low grade that it is not economical to export. It is, however, the only source of water power in the country's north-west. It is estimated that there are 100,000 horsepower in the Estima region.

ERODED LAND TURNED INTO MODEL FARMS

Minister sees fruits of team-work

NEWLY built dams, terracing and experimental plots were among the projects inspected by the Minister for African Affairs, Mr. R. G. Turnbull, when he visited the Tulumani Hills settlement scheme in the Mchinge District. The Administration, the Department of Agriculture, and the local people have joined forces to turn an eroded country into what he hoped will be a model of successful agriculture.

Mr. Turnbull stressed that the settlement scheme was a joint effort of the Government, the settlers, and the African population. He said that the scheme had shown that it was possible to turn eroded land into productive farmland.

for Highlands

MR. BLUNDELL URGES FULL PRODUCTION

ONE of the best ways to maintain the security of the Highlands would be to bring about their full and efficient development. Mr. Michael Blundell, Minister without Portfolio and Elected Member, made a statement at a meeting of the Kinyua Districts Association on Wednesday night.

He considered that the Bill which provided the main subject for his address was the Bill for the development of the Highlands. He outlined the provisions of the Bill, which he said would be supported by the Elected Members there had been constant questioning of the security of the Highlands.

The Bill gives an opportunity to meet on the full development of the Highlands. He said, "I have always thought that the Highlands should be developed in the conditions in which we have developed the lowland areas."

He said that the Bill would provide for the Highlands to be developed in the conditions in which we have developed the lowland areas.

Rising population

The present population in the Highlands is about 200,000. It is increasing rapidly. This increasing population has led to a number of serious problems. The first of these is the shortage of land. The second is the shortage of labour. The third is the shortage of capital.

It is necessary to find measures to solve these problems. The Government is taking steps to do this. It is providing more land for the Highlands. It is providing more labour for the Highlands. It is providing more capital for the Highlands.

"SWIFT BUT UNEVENTFUL TRIP," SAYS BURTON

Here is Mr. Arthur Burton's own account of his record-breaking trip with his co-driver Mr. Derek Shepherd:

During the Coronation Safari Derrick Shepherd and myself were so pleased with the performance of my Volkswagen that we decided to make an attempt on several weeks of planning, Derrick and I left from our R.E.A.A. office in Delaware Avenue on a cold Friday, the 20th July. We were seen off by quite a number of people, including Neil and Donald Wainman, who told the record from Cape Town to Nairobi in a Vauxhall Velox in 2 days, 20 hours 11 minutes.

We motored through to Dodoma with some trouble, but we started the trip to Dodoma with our record during the morning, remembering the shocking state of the road during the Coronation Safari. We were very pleasantly surprised to find that it had been well graded, and there were very few bad corrugations, but after Dodoma the road was really bad, as the P.W.D. had been widening it in the middle of all the earth and sand from the slopes into the middle of the highway. In places this was more than 10 feet deep to 18' deep. We had been warned about this by the East African Railways and Harbours Board Service had been told that 10-ton Diesel lorries belonging to the African Railways and Harbours Board Service had been used there, that managed to navigate over, through and therefore, that we managed to arrive in Tanga at about 11:30 p.m. on Friday, some 1000 miles in 24 hours.

Weathering the storm
At the Iringa Hotel we had a very good breakfast and then we had a very good lunch. We were then on the road again, and we were very pleased to find that the road was really good. We were then on the road again, and we were very pleased to find that the road was really good. We were then on the road again, and we were very pleased to find that the road was really good.

It would be difficult to say how long it took us to get to Dodoma, but we were very pleased to find that the road was really good. We were then on the road again, and we were very pleased to find that the road was really good. We were then on the road again, and we were very pleased to find that the road was really good.

We were then on the road again, and we were very pleased to find that the road was really good. We were then on the road again, and we were very pleased to find that the road was really good. We were then on the road again, and we were very pleased to find that the road was really good.

LESLEY CLAY joins pilgrims to admire views from— THE HOUSE ON CRATER LAKE

Looking over the lake to Mount Meru

AFTERNOON tea is an institution wherever British people meet, indeed, the habit now obtains almost everywhere in the world.

One would naturally expect it to prevail in East Africa but I was not prepared for the sort of tea-party that took place at Mrs. Gladys Rydon's house overlooking Lake Davut in Tanganyika.

I should think that all the oldest residents of the three Territories have heard of the house on the crater lake and, hardly less, of the hospitable lady who built it during the war. With two friends I drove up the steep drive and arrived at the front of the house where jessamine and bougainvillea vie in a riot of garished colours. Mounting the steps to the terrace we took our first look at the view which we had driven nearly two hundred miles to see. It was even more beautiful than I had expected. A mile of still, crystal-clear water stretches away to a far bank, flanked on the left by Mount Meru and, when the weather is kind, dominated by a glorious view of the snow-capped flattened peak of Kilimanjaro.

Fed By Warm Springs

The lake is tree-enclosed and green, grassy banks lead down to its shores. Several hundred steps wander from the creaser-clad terrace to an impassioned pontoon bridge from which Mrs. Rydon takes her daily swim—never less than a mile and in all weather. I swam with her for a short distance and found the water a comfortable temperature, for it is fed by warm springs. Back again on the terrace, other guests began to arrive in a steady stream until 50 were drinking cups of tea and sipping the home-made scones for which Mrs. Rydon is also famous.

I was introduced to a Polish Count and Countess, a German irrigation expert, an American tourist, two farm managers, a vet, and a judge who was busy perusing through a telescope for the first sight of Kilimanjaro and which was scheduled to visit from its nimbus of cloud punctually at 6.30 p.m.

I made a brief tour of the house with my hostess. The sitting-room is floored and panelled in loblolly pine. Some of the biggest levelled sweet peas I have ever seen were matted in bowls around the room which was laid off by the gold curtains and gay chairs. A huge chair, looking as if it came straight from the Orient, turned out to be an ordinary seaman's chest super-impromvised with brass.

Two paintings in the dining-room caught my eye, one of Kilimanjaro, was painted by Mrs. Rydon's doctor son, Arthur, the other, of Mount Meru, by her second son, David, who is a medical student in his little study is a vast collection of butterflies.

The house is built on two levels, with the kitchen, pantry and a part of the office on the lower level. The dining room, in design, Mrs. Rydon made it as much as possible like her Australian home in Brisbane. (She has lived in Kenya, however, since 1923.)

Out of her bedroom—which is notable for its sumptuous bath-tubs, purple and on to a luxurious display of purple and terra-cotta bougainvillea.

I had just time for a quick look round the extensive grounds before we all assembled on the terrace for a last look of Kilimanjaro. Two very special things about the garden, which is constantly being added to and improved upon, are the pure white bougainvillea, a present from Lady Tanning, and the wild white delphinium, the only specimen kind in the world, tall seen in her garden.

Mrs. Rydon also owns two coffee plantations and some pretanium on the mountain.

Binny-Bunny Looks After The Wool Shop

MRS SHEEP invited Binny-Bunny to mind the wool shop for a day as the kid planned a visit to her relations. He felt it very important and accepted the invitation at once.

So at nine o'clock Mrs. Sheep set out, after seeing that the sheep were all in the pen and the sheep-keeper was on hand.

Binny-Bunny had a very good day. He found the sheep-keeper very kind and the sheep very friendly. He also found that the wool was very good and that the sheep-keeper was very kind.

Always building a greater East Africa

Efficient port operation demands the fluid movement of cargo at all stages of its progress between ship's hold and railway wagon or road vehicle. Mechanical cargo handling equipment, properly used, plays its part in the speeding up of this operation.

An extensive programme of port mechanisation is already well under way at all East African ports. When completed, few ports in Africa will have better facilities for handling cargo.

New cranes costing over £1 million; more "mechanical hoists" with their accompanying trailers; more tractors; new fork lift and platform trucks costing nearly £200,000 will all soon be speeding up the import and export of the cargoes which go towards the building of a greater East Africa.

THE PRIVILEGED NIGHTMARE

'YOU'RE A SPY, AREN'T YOU?' THEY SAID

My First Hours In Enemy Hands

By Giles Romilly

At the beginning of April 1940 I was asked by my newspaper to go from Stockholm to Norway... I was a member of the staff of the British and German newspapers... I was in Kiruna and Gällivare, which could reach there only through Narvik's ice-free port...

I was pushed inside... 'What will your uncle say when he hears what's happened?'

'What will your uncle say when he hears what's happened?'

to attack we were forced to... I was pushed inside... 'What will your uncle say when he hears what's happened?'

HIS PENGUIN IS 1,000 BOOKS OLD

ON top of the clock on the Allen Lane's office desk is the figure of a penguin. There's another penguin on his shelf. A third peers over his shoulder. And there are several figures of penguins on the walls.

When he looks out of the window—London, Albert is still across the street. It's a long road, some twenty-five miles, involving him a normal walk, uphill, orange and white. The air is not so fresh as it would seem to be, and he would not be asked if he would like to go to the beach.

The chairman with the title, the publisher who gave him the book, and the printer who printed the book, have all been in the office since the first Penguin was published in 1935.

It was a book by his old friend, the author of the first Penguin, C. S. Lewis. It was the first Penguin, and it was the first Penguin to be published in the United States.

What are ENZYMES?
Why should you fight them?
Here are the facts—

Enzymes are found in bacteria found in every part of the body. When bacteria get on the food you eat, they multiply and produce enzymes which break down the food into simple substances. These enzymes help you digest the food.

And that is why some people have trouble with their digestion. It is because of an overabundance of enzymes.

CLINIC DAY IS A GALA DAY FOR CHILDREN

By Anne Cavanagh

These two youngsters are quite happy to have their franchise assigned by Dr. Williams.

Dr. Williams' son Peter, and Stella Smith, daughter of the Kibara nurse, were next on to have their franchise assigned.

"GOOD morning" and "please open your mouth wide" are phrases which Dr. Harbo Williams of Kampala, east speak in about half a dozen different African languages.

Dr. Williams is the Medical Officer for Child Welfare in the Uganda District of Kampala, and here visitors take her into most villages, colour settlements and places where there are clinics from all over East Africa. ... Uganda including his, far with little less attention to nutrition.

In Williams' main object, apart from treating the sick, is to try to prevent illness by means of health education and child welfare. ... It places in and around Kampala, and in the very heart of the city, a well-stocked, well-organized and well-run clinic and gives illustrations of the way in which to run a healthy family and child welfare.

A Holiday

I WENT with her on a visit to the railway quarters at Nansanga, "Dande" Koro, where the wife and families of African railway men are housed. ... It is a very interesting and instructive visit.

Each one according to his own means. ... It is a very interesting and instructive visit.

After each child has been examined, Dr. Williams makes a note of the results. ... It is a very interesting and instructive visit.

Thiving

THESE are the days that the children are growing up. ... It is a very interesting and instructive visit.

Four-year-old child weighed by Stella Smith, a nurse at the hospital.

Williams' wife has been for the last few years.
