In contrast to the "tiger" species of the antelope, the newly born calves are very tame and are not afraid of man. A few hours after birth they are able to walk and are usually seen with their mothers. They are very tame and are not afraid of man. They are very tame and are not afraid of man.

Kenya has enjoyed for a long time a system of local Government in which the democratic line has been in advance of what would be expected in other territories.

The important step in the new Uganda proposals is not only the extension of the basic of the democratic responsibility by developing the system of local Government but more particularly the setting up of Native Provincial Councils.
