A correspondent directly attention today to a problem in the forthcoming Legislative election for the Kenya Agency. The constituency members in consequence of the Council Ordinance to the Legislative Council Ordinance of 1947 is reserved for a representative to be elected by the community and principally the non-Muslim sections of the electorate.

There are two candidates from East Africa Indian National Congress and the other is a dependant on the Indian National Congress and the failure of the Congress to elect a representative to the Legislative Council. There is a strong belief that the Congress provided candidates to appear before the electorate at the election, especially the Central Area, as a test of their loyalty to the political party which has accepted the revised conditions which it viewed as adherence to the Congress programme.

As the amendment to the Legislative Council Ordinance did not require the political party to put forward a double constituency member, it was clear that the Muslim community might have an influence on the result. But we have the Muslim community will resist the temptation to vote for a double constituency member for fear of alienating the other half of the constituency is already in their hands by the unopposed election of the man of their own choice and what is now at issue is the representation of the non-Muslim sections of the Indian community. Muslims will not vote for a double constituency member who has interfered with their own political party's consent a month ago for a constituent body that the Congress party would not interfere with the Muslim franchise.

The Central Muslim Association has already by recent resolutions that the Muslim vote should be placed in the hands of the Muslim voters, probably by the election of a double constituency member. This decision requires to be reinforced by the active steps of encouragement what will prove in the long run to be most ill-considered vote of the Muslim vote. It is clear that powerful temptation can be placed in the hands of Muslim voters, probably by the election of a double constituency member. This decision requires to be reinforced by the active steps of encouragement what will prove in the long run to be most ill-considered vote of the Muslim vote.

THE NEW LOOK CREATES A DIFFERENT ANGLE IN HATS

Complete revolution

HATS are exceptionally decorative in the Union this season; there has been a complete revolution in the angle, line and shape of them. They are nearly all off-the-face and young looking. No longer do brims cast kind shadows over the eyes, for the new hat sits well back on the head, or squarely on top of it, or leans over, eye-ear-doos anything in fact except tilt over the nose.

The recent winter models are the popular looser styles decorated with large loops of ribbon, or festooned with winking, shiny feathers, frills or flowers.

There is also a new trend in the colour of hats. It is considered this season to wear a hat in contrast-colour to the rest of the outfit. The sort of colour combinations that were along when young women these days are: emerald green, brown; and purple with grey; and yellow looser and hats with brown brims; and blue with blue and white; and black with a very blue hat and dress with a honey-coloured afternoon gown.

Two pals reach the parting of the ways

The eternal triangle among lions

By the WARDEN

I AM asked the same questions so often about lions by visitors to the park that in this week's notes I will try to answer some of them. Many hunters may have different views on these matters, but no hard and fast rules can be laid down as to what lions will do in different circumstances—one can only generalize on the basis of what months lions favour to mate. At what season are the cubs born? How many cubs are there in a litter? How often does a lioness have cubs? Do lions have any certain range of country to which they keep?

Romulus vs. Remus

A visitor to the Lene Tree area this week will have noticed that one of the young lionesses is closely attended by two lions. These are usually to be seen at some distance from the lioness, and they are usually to be seen there two lions, whom I have called Romulus and Remus. These two lions have been living and hunting together for some months. They have been 'buddies', as the Americans say, and I have often watched them in the evening moving off to hunt the Sowan valley, talking quietly to each other.

I am afraid they have now come to the parting of the ways for the first time. One of the lions, who I have called Romulus, has been living and hunting together for some months. They have been 'buddies', as the Americans say, and I have often watched them in the evening moving off to hunt the Sowan valley, talking quietly to each other.

The body in the sea

At times they will spill up into smaller parties and hunt in opposite directions. Sometimes, for no apparent reason, a pride will suddenly have a healthy-looking and move to another area up to twenty miles away.

It is interesting to watch two prides of a pride meeting when they have been apart. They greet each other with long, low, friendly trills. They will be lists of "talk", rubbing of heads and "licking of friends. There is great display of affection.

The lion and the small prides still play the "pounce" game. The lion will stalk the small prides and they will stalk the lion. The lion will stalk the small prides and they will stalk the lion.

NYANZA PLAN FOR TWO MEMORIALS

A RUINED piece of native stone from a hill overlooking Kisumu station is to stand in Kisumu and a memorial hall in Maseno in tribute to the nearly 30 years' work done by Archbishop Owen in Nyanza Province and more people are to be invited to help to pay for these memorials, first envisaged by a small committee of Africans.

Immediately after the death of Archbishop Owen in September 1904, a group of African leaders formed a committee which should take in the provincial capital and in Maseno, where much of his work had been done. Africans contributed hundreds of shillings towards the purchase of the stone, and a few European residents of the province also contributed. The stone was placed in the grounds of the station and a few European residents of the province also contributed. BOOKS: 'The proper study of mankind' - Modern biographers differ significantly in treatment, style and preference

THE lure of Biography has always been to the forefront in the popular taste. Personal reminiscences and biographies of the records of the success or failure, constitute a mosaic in the general pattern of human life.

One of the most interesting and best written biographies of the month is Mr. Gerald Suttill's story of George Eliot. This has been long required, yet both her books and her life continue a fascinating study.

Mr. P. P. Moore's Life of William Hallitt has been a very competent review of the life of the author. It is probable that Hallitt is a very early and that the present generation but little knows this story of his life for modern readers it will be of interest.

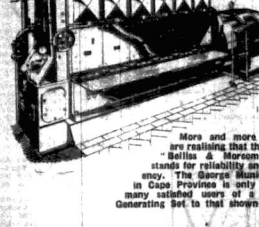

And so to Lewis Carroll. 'Alice in Wonderland' is most read, but probably not read, because it is a real name of Charles Lewis Carroll. It is a very early work on mathematics.

Fighting 'curse' of Africa

UNTIL science discovers a means of exterminating the tsetse fly—that curse of Africa—the only way to deal with the menace is to clear large areas, thousands of acres and not small patches, to provide water supplies and to make these lands productive either for grazing or mixed farming.

When I went to Writia in 1932, thousands of Galla cattle grazed in the surrounding country. These had existed but only in small, fenced areas or in patches of bush.

The long rains year after year were very late in starting this year. Shevres have been fallen, but the seed of the new-planted crops are good.

Sea transport Before the war, Lusua had regular steamer service. Heretofore, this service was of a primitive nature.

When this useful vessel was completed, it was replaced by a harbor launch only, and a tug from Kilindi port, a tug to Lusua, to tow the Lusua Gulf tugs.

Contract bridge The pranks of fate

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

"DISTRIBUTION" plays some strange and often cruel pranks on bridge players. Two nationally known, New York experts—North and South in today's column—are meeting, after a while after the hand was over.

South dealer North vulnerable

♠	A 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2

♦	A K Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2
♣	A K Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2

There was certainly nothing wrong with the grand slam contract. It had been correctly laid. The only error, strange when drawn out, was that South could not make a fourth trick. He had intended to score by establishing the club suit, but this would have been easy if the suit had been broken up. It was, however, proved too tight to break and South could not make over his heart but contract could have been fulfilled through the diamond suit. This was the only "percentage" that the sub-alibi-lation was exactly good for South.

Had player made made the heart contract, he would have made it because no player would make it. This was the only "percentage" that the sub-alibi-lation was exactly good for South. The contract of seven trumped could not have been made. At that contract, South would have no choice but to bid the diamond suit. The hearts, then, run off of seven spades and the diamond suit would be bid. Menzies, West would have had to declare the club suit to ward dummy, the club game would be the only one.

VANISHING BLONDES

A RECENT series of beauty contests in South Africa provides pretty conclusive evidence that South African gentlemen prefer brunettes—at any rate. Blondes have fared (fair-ed) badly in all of them.

In the final analysis, however, this may prove to be a rather scholastic error of judgement. The fact is that South Africa is one of those countries which include Britain and Scandinavia (the blonde home of the world) and where blondes are in danger of becoming extinct.

Australian, New Zealand and Canada are the last strongholds of the blonde, according to Dr. Hagedorn, who has been studying the subject since 1941.

Older conclusions reached by Dr. Hagedorn are that:

- 1. Blondes seldom marry from heart diseases and the vice versa as long as brunettes.
- 2. They are not so intelligent but are more adventurous.
- 3. They are less rational and more emotional.
- 4. They love their kids and youth longer.
- 5. Their heads ("temperamental but intelligent") are also in danger of disappearing.

We are still awaiting reports as to the final placings of the World Chess Tournament but the latest information received points to the Soviet Champion, Botvinnik, as the almost certain winner.

The explanation for Dr. Euwe's hand was definitely laid out, being the first three games after having had the best of it in each one. Against Smyslov he made a surprising blunder which he had not obtained a checkmate. Soon after came the dramatic climax of the match when he was defeated and proceeded to resign.
