Attractive... MATERNITY WEAR BY Suzanne MANSION HOUSE

THE NINE-TO-SIX SUIT HAS STYLE

LONDON designers work on the assumption that the majority of women in this country have average, not model, figures, and that only a very few have figures resembling that perfection of proportion we recall when in Paris.

Clothes here remember those few extra inches, and design accordingly. They're not—except the occasional "I'll do it myself" type—made to fit a model, but rather to flatter the woman who wears them.

This year, therefore, the skirts in the spring collections, although they are new and strange, are perfectly designed to give ease for walking and freedom of movement by providing skirts with groups of creases and pleats which are not so stiff as those of the "I'll do it myself" type. They are also not so stiff as those of the "I'll do it myself" type.

They simply haven't a clue!

LOOK at that! I told that stupid boy to clear up the room, and he put everything in a heap on the table. The kiddie's clothes, my scraps of material, magazines, novels, toys—did you ever see such a mess? Surely he could find some better place to put them. No, I wouldn't like him putting his things on the table, but I did say clear it up away.

Whoose foul it is, really, when things go wrong in the house? ROBYNA WRIGHT quotes a few examples.

"No, I didn't show him how to do it. I told him to do it."

Plain puddings needn't be dull

How a dream came true

"EL" describes the planning and building of her home.

I LONGED to own a little land to have a house, a garden, possibly with an orchard to have a home in fact. For a long time I kept telling myself that I would like to have a home, but I was not going to do it until I had saved up a good deal of money.

I bought a house in a suburb of London. It was a small house, but it was just what I needed. I had a garden, and I had a little orchard. I had a home.

New hope

It was the winter that I ever did my troubles began to ease and I found that the only way to the happiness I was seeking was to get on my feet. I was not going to let my troubles keep me down.

GUIDE COMMISSIONER SAYS FUTURE 'FULL OF PROMISE'

1950 a year of progress in Kenya
FOR the Civil Guides and Brownies of Kenya the year 1950 had been "one of progress and full of promise for the future" the Colony Commissioner, Mr. Brownie Robinson, said in his annual report to the Civil Guides Association.

The first of these was the annual meeting of the Civil Guides Association, which was held in Nairobi in the month of January. It was held on an impressive scale and the Commissioner's report was presented to the members of the Association. It was held on an impressive scale and the Commissioner's report was presented to the members of the Association.

Numbers grow
This year the Civil Guides' list, in which the Commissioner had invited to join, had increased to 1,000 members, and the Brownies' list had increased to 1,500 members. The Commissioner said that the increase in membership was due to the fact that the Civil Guides and Brownies were becoming more popular in Kenya.

TALK WITH YOUR CHILD

Says Robina Wright

WHY is it that some children are so very obedient for weeks, while others, after weeks of good behaviour, are suddenly disobedient? It is because of the way in which they are being brought up.

It is not that some children are more obedient than others, but that some are being brought up to be obedient, and others are not.

Parents who have obedient children have a certain amount of control over their children. They have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, and they have a certain amount of control over their children's emotions.

Parents who have disobedient children have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, but they have no control over their children's emotions.

Parents who have obedient children have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, and they have a certain amount of control over their children's emotions. Parents who have disobedient children have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, but they have no control over their children's emotions.

Hair styles down the ages

For the cavalry had a hair-style, it may have been somewhat different.

As the centuries have passed, hair styles have changed, and the fashion of the day has been different from that of the day before.

The hair style of the day before yesterday was different from that of the day before that, and the hair style of the day before that was different from that of the day before that.

The hair style of the day before yesterday was different from that of the day before that, and the hair style of the day before that was different from that of the day before that.

The hair style of the day before yesterday was different from that of the day before that, and the hair style of the day before that was different from that of the day before that.

Simple

It is not that some children are more obedient than others, but that some are being brought up to be obedient, and others are not.

Parents who have obedient children have a certain amount of control over their children. They have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, and they have a certain amount of control over their children's emotions.

Parents who have disobedient children have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, but they have no control over their children's emotions.

Great lack

In the same house, obedient children are more obedient than disobedient children. It is not that some children are more obedient than others, but that some are being brought up to be obedient, and others are not.

Parents who have obedient children have a certain amount of control over their children. They have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, and they have a certain amount of control over their children's emotions.

Parents who have disobedient children have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, but they have no control over their children's emotions.

Monotonous

Children who are obedient are more obedient than disobedient children. It is not that some children are more obedient than others, but that some are being brought up to be obedient, and others are not.

Parents who have obedient children have a certain amount of control over their children. They have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, and they have a certain amount of control over their children's emotions.

Parents who have disobedient children have a certain amount of control over their children's behaviour, but they have no control over their children's emotions.

Alaska Is Still A Challenge To The Adventurous

The lone United States bought from Russia is rich in resources and opportunities as this article shows

It is 33 years that the United States has owned Alaska. In 1867, when the United States bought Alaska from Russia, it was the largest land purchase in the history of the United States.

At the time, Alaska was a vast, unexplored territory. The United States had just won the Civil War and was looking for new frontiers.

Alaska was rich in natural resources, but the United States was not ready to exploit them. It was a challenge to the adventurous.

Over the years, Alaska has become a state. It is now a major source of oil, coal, and other minerals. It is still a challenge to the adventurous.

THE ROYAL NAVY PACKS ITS PUNCHES—IN COCOONS!

Port every washup now in commission under the White Ensign, Britain has several more of the same type lying in reserve. Far from being rusty old relics in out-of-the-way anchorages, most of these ships have been completely refitted.

Under a three-year programme bearing completion one year ahead of the Reserve Fleet have all been equipped with the latest devices and are ready to get to sea in 48 hours from their berths.

Modern preservation methods are so efficient that machinery and equipment mounted for years have no perils when refitted on water.

The work has taken the preservation of the individual "mashed" hull—building would be a more appropriate term—under such control when they are finally "cleaned" and hoisted up against the prevailing dangers these wrecks are at sea, if not before, than anything in commission.

Unpacked when needed

Hidden in the dockyard once the stop has been taken and the engine started, they all lie dormant in a snug and with the newest equipment added able to go modern in less than a day.

With equipment from steam to atom "crashed" in practice the majority of the fleet will be a more appropriate term—under such control when they are finally "cleaned" and hoisted up against the prevailing dangers these wrecks are at sea, if not before, than anything in commission.
