Unsurpassed Formula
Millions of ordinary users and many hospitals continue to prove that the pure ASPRO formula is unsurpassed in its effectiveness. In hospitals all over the world used in the ASPRO Laboratories the acute inflammation in ASPRO is constantly being tested. Time and again it has been proved that ASPRO is the best medicine for the quick relief of pain and the fever of colds and flu.

What U.S. Government tests prove
The U.S. Government, compared the ASPRO formula to other pain relief medicines. None of these was found to be as safe as ASPRO. ASPRO is the only one of its kind which is safe for the relief of pain and the fever of colds and flu.

100,000 expected at Mitchell Park

By ERIC BAYLES

100,000 onwards gloomy individuals forecast that there would be no more Royal Shows in Kenya and that that year's event would be the last big show in the country.

AGING GAP BETWEEN RURAL AND URBAN

By ERIC BAYLES
The Agricultural Society of Kenya is expected to present its 10th Royal Show at Mitchell Park on the 20th of September, which will be the last of its kind.

R. G. M. MASON, President of the Royal Agricultural Society of Kenya.

The Royal Show at Mitchell Park is expected to be the last of its kind. It is a sad state of affairs that the country is facing an aging gap between the rural and urban populations.

Mr. Mason, President of the Royal Agricultural Society of Kenya, said that the show would be the last of its kind. He expressed his hope that the show would be a success and that it would be a fitting end to the series.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRIME MINISTER - GENERAL AND PRIME MINISTER

I AM pleased through your newspaper to be able to welcome the arrival of the Show. This year the Show is particularly significant, since it is the first since our country attained its independence and the first to be held in the month of September.

Once again the Royal Show is back here, and all of us — farmers, business men, politicians, civil servants and others — hail it as a very important event. The Show is always a wonderful spectacle thanks to the enthusiasm and hard work coupled with expert knowledge of those who have a hand in preparing it. The members of the Committee for it, the exhibitors of the Royal Agricultural Society of Kenya, the exhibitors of the Government departments concerned and the members of the staff who have worked together in a spirit of 'Harmony' to provide a grand exhibition which is both instructive and entertaining. And once more they have scored a wonderful success.

One important aspect of the Show is the way in which it acts as a mirror of Kenya's development. For example, in the country's agriculture, and they are reflected in it by such features as the increasing quantity and quality of exhibits from African farmers.

Against the general state of the economy, and even of the politics of Kenya are evident. The very members of the country's agriculture, and they are reflected in it by such features as the increasing quantity and quality of exhibits from African farmers.

Progress to benefit all in Kenya

It is in the way in which we shall earn our living by the planned and rapid expansion of the agricultural resources and we must not lose sight of this fact in the excitement caused by political events.

We must all strive in every way to increase, improve and make more efficient our production, so that we can not only feed our own people adequately but can compete in the markets of the world with our best agricultural produce. Let no one be satisfied with the position as it stands at the moment and let us all strive to improve our agriculture.

The Show is a clear window of what Kenya has done in the agricultural sphere over the past year. It shows us clearly that we can produce food and can compete in the markets of the world with our best agricultural produce. Let no one be satisfied with the position as it stands at the moment and let us all strive to improve our agriculture.

I am greatly looking forward to going to the Show, which I am sure will be a rewarding success and may I go from strength to strength.

How the farmer sees things

by J. E. POLLARD, President of the Kenya Federation of Farmers' Unions

The pattern of farming in Kenya is characterized by a high degree of self-sufficiency. The 1,000,000-acre area under cultivation has been largely completed and a start made on the 100,000-acre area under the District-Order schemes.

The Government has been successful in its efforts to increase the area under cultivation. The 1,000,000-acre area under cultivation has been largely completed and a start made on the 100,000-acre area under the District-Order schemes.

THE BLOOD OF THE FAMOUS LIVES ON

Blackbird Guernsey 116, winner at N.A.S.S., after match last year.

By
E. A. BARNHART
Chairman of the Cattle Section

It is sad to think that, five years ago, the society found it difficult to provide stabling at Mitchell Park for the 600-odd cattle entering the Royal Show. This year, when there will be many empty stalls but, with more than 300 head entered, there will nevertheless be a sufficient number of cattle to provide strong competition for those breeders who remain in business.

They will probably be, and they will probably be, the same old-fashioned Guernsey and Shorthorn. Let us not be misled by the name of the breed. It is not the name of the breed that counts, but the quality of the stock. It is the quality of the stock that counts, and it is the quality of the stock that counts.

Particularly for Kenya, a number of the best Guernsey and Shorthorn cattle are being imported from the United Kingdom. These are the best of the breed, and they are the best of the breed.

A special section should be provided for the Guernsey and Shorthorn cattle. This is the only way in which the Guernsey and Shorthorn cattle can be properly shown.

It is a pity that the Guernsey and Shorthorn cattle are not shown in a special section. This is the only way in which the Guernsey and Shorthorn cattle can be properly shown.

There is a great future for the Guernsey and Shorthorn cattle in Kenya. This is the only way in which the Guernsey and Shorthorn cattle can be properly shown.

Specialisation key to success

FINLAND, the fourth of the four Scandinavian countries to exhibit at the Royal Show, is a country which has made its specialisation in the production of high quality products a key to its success.

The country's population of 4.5 million is concentrated in the southern part of the country, leaving a vast area of forest and lakes. This geographical situation has led to a specialisation in the production of high quality products, particularly in the fields of forestry, agriculture, and handicrafts.

The Finnish people are proud of their products, and this pride is reflected in the quality of their work. The country's success is a result of its specialisation and the high quality of its products.

The Royal Show is a great opportunity for the Finnish people to display their products to a wide audience. It is a chance for them to show the world the quality of their work and the specialisation that has led to their success.

PAVING THE WAY TO TOGETHERNESS

THE Scandinavian countries — Denmark, Norway and Sweden — were invited last year to a common exhibition at the Royal Show, the first time since the war.

This was done to present themselves and also some services products and services to the people of Kenya. It was a great success, and the people of Kenya are now better informed about the products and services of the Scandinavian countries.

We are glad to be able to repeat this in 1964, the first year of an independent Kenya. We are glad too, that our neighbours, Norway and Sweden, have joined us in this enterprise. The Scandinavian countries are now paving the way in that direction.

We wish continued success to the Royal Show, the greatest yearly event in Kenya's presentation of the products of her country.

Finland like Kenya 'has her economic roots in the soil'

My country is the growing link between Finland and Kenya.

We have much in common. Like Kenya, Finland is a non-aligned country. Also like Kenya, Finland has her economic roots in the soil.

With some 70 per cent of Finland's 130,000 square miles under forest, timber and allied industries form the bone of the Finnish economy with agriculture playing the important secondary role.

It is my hope that our wide experience in these fields will be of assistance to the development of Kenya's forest industries and general agricultural program.

In the meantime, the Finnish people will continue to work for peace and cooperation between the two countries.

Will you be able to hold this exhibition next year? This question asked by many people in the Home Industries Booth at the Royal Show last year. The answer was a definite "yes," and the reasons for this year show are right.

Thousands of exhibitors have arranged to return in next year, which shows that the success of Kenya are demonstrated in their own right. There will be visitors of all ages representing as well as business in the Junior Section.

Many of the well-known contractors have left, but that means it is hoped that new exhibitors will be found, possibly from other exhibitors to those who did not show last year. There will be visitors of all ages representing as well as business in the Junior Section.

The exhibitors at the Home Industries have always been high and quality value. It is hoped to continue what has been done in the past and to bring the best way to improve in exhibiting and showing the latest innovations.

This year the exhibits will be placed in groups and not in classes, as in previous years. This has been arranged to give the exhibitors the chance to show their goods in a more logical and better equipped and attractive way than in the past.

EQUAL opportunities for all has been a guiding principle of the Galley and Roberts organization for years. The company was pulling it into practice well before most people had heard of a building called Lancaster House in London.

It has always been quite categorically laid down by Outlawer, the present head, that all overseas contracts should be for as possible be managed by nationals of the countries in which they operate. Accordingly, young East Africans of all races can reach the top with Galley and Roberts and are given every encouragement to do so. Provided a younger John Galley and Roberts with this will be born and the determination is sincere, but not on his rights very much.

Mr. J. W. W. Johnston, chairman of the Galley and Roberts Group, issued a statement some years ago which still holds true today. He said: "Most of our major staff have been recruited from the continent. We intend to increase the ratio, and to increase it rapidly, not only because of the commensurate approach of economies but also because of what we regard as our duty."

EMPHASIS ON GOOD ALL-ROUND TRAINING

PART from a few notable exceptions, most West African industrial training schemes in the 1940s were relatively short-term in character and had as their object the training of operators for tasks of certain specialized kinds.

Such "specialist" operators had to be trained in the C and D type of operation, and were then sent back to the country whence they came, to operate the machinery. The danger was that the operator would be given little or no general knowledge of the basic principles of engineering and would be unable to cope with the start of the company's maintenance department.

THE BEST WAY It was considered that the best way to train the operator in his line of operation would be to give him a good all-round knowledge of the basic principles of engineering and then to give him the special training essential in the various work branches.

It is now considered that the best way to train the operator in his line of operation would be to give him a good all-round knowledge of the basic principles of engineering and then to give him the special training essential in the various work branches.

Mr. J. W. W. Johnston, chief instructor of Galley and Roberts' Technical Training School, is shown in the foreground in the photograph above. He is a graduate engineer and has been in charge of the school since its inception. He is also a member of the Council of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers and is a member of the Council of the Institution of Electrical Engineers.

operations spend a considerable amount of their working day in the school's own workshop, where they learn and improve their skills. It is not only the practical work, but also the theoretical work, which is emphasized. The school has a wide range of equipment and facilities, and the students are given every opportunity to use them.

One point must be their general education. At this stage, the school is not only a technical school, but also a school of general education. The students are given a good knowledge of the basic principles of engineering, and are also given a good general education in the various work branches.

LATER CHOICE The intention is to be wide open for the machine shop, the electrical department, and the other departments. other employment if they so wish. But we know from the experience of those young men who have already started in work with us that such cases are likely to be rare - especially since it is the policy of the Government to encourage them to stay in the country.

It must be borne in mind that Mr. Johnston made this statement a good two years before the outbreak of the war. The school was then in its infancy, and the Government's policy was to encourage them to stay in the country.

The emphasis is rightly on training that will be of use to the student in his own country. The school is now in its infancy, and the Government's policy was to encourage them to stay in the country.

CHANGE IN POLICY Since 1942 the school's policy has changed. It is now a school of general education, and the students are given every opportunity to use the facilities.

EXAM SUCCESSES The school has had a very successful year. The students have done very well in their examinations, and the school has received many compliments.
