resemblance to the hills of Assam and many of the photographs in the one book could easily be transferred to the other without their being spoiled by the reader. Mr. Flindley originally visited the land he has described in the book in 1911, and his attention to the details of the life of the people is so accurate that it is almost surprising that he has not written more about it.

Mr. Flindley's book is a most attractive account of the life of a village in the hills of Assam. It is a book that should be read by all who are interested in the life of the people of the East. It is a book that is well written and well illustrated. It is a book that is well worth the price.

THE HAGGIS HOLDS NO SECRETS

By Alastair Matheson

"Fair to' your honest sannie face,
Great chieftain of the puddin' race"

BURNS' NIGHT is only three days away and to Scots, at home and the world over, that means but one thing—the haggis.

Robert Burns, in his "Ode to the Haggis," immortalized this Scottish delicacy but it is certainly in no danger of extinction so long as the export trade in haggis is booming, as it is at present.

A Glasgow firm, one of the leading manufacturers in Scotland, finds that it is an all-the-year-round job preparing sufficient haggis to meet the demand on the two nights of the year when it is consumed as part of the ritual — St. Andrew's Night and Burns' Night.

Probably more haggis is exported these days to isolate Scots than is eaten in Scottish homes as a regular dish, for the exiled Scot habitually upholds his privilege of eating—and going into raptures over—the regular draught of the companion Scottish export—whisky.

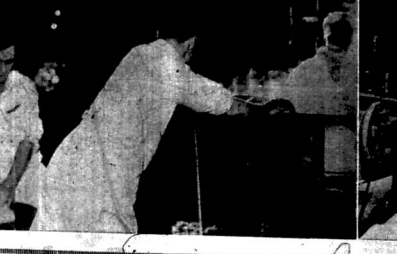

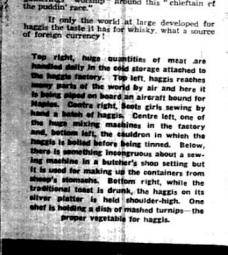

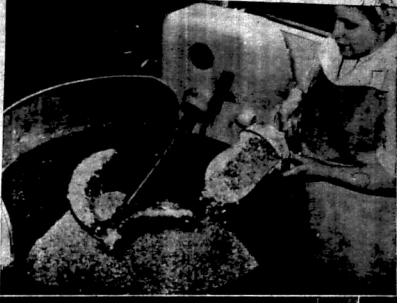

For the uninitiated the haggis, wrapped in the sheep's stomach, holds nothing but mystery, but a tour of any haggis manufactory is sufficient to show that the ingredients are wholesome enough and not so mysterious as might be supposed.

The firm of H. D. Waddell, for instance, one of the oldest and largest making haggis, stick to the old recipe which calls the calves liver, lungs and hearts, oatmeal, barley, onions, dripping suet, salt and spices. Wrapped round this carefully stirred mixture goes the sheep's stomach, by tradition, hand-dressed although the sheep's haggis must be de-glamorized to meet the requirements of the postal authorities and is packed inside a tin.

But wrapped in bags of various tartans and featuring the sprig of white heather, the haggis find their way, mostly by air, three days of speedily Korea and from Paris to the Fochian Gulf Scots gatherings, "worthy" around this "chieftain of the haggis" race.

If only the world at large developed for haggis the taste it has for whisky, what a source of foreign currency!

The right, haggis composition of meat are hand-mixed daily in the cold storage attics to the haggis factory. The left, haggis reaches every part of the world by air and here it is being served on board an aircraft bound for Haines, Ontario, right. Scots girls, sewing by hand in halls of haggis. Centre left, one of the haggis mixing machines in the factory and, bottom left, the chieftain in whose the haggis is boiled before being tinned. Below, there is something insignificant about a saw-shed's stoneware. Bottom right, while the traditional toast is drunk, the haggis on its silver platter is held (cheerfully). One chef is holding a dish of mashed turnips—the proper vegetable for haggis.

How America Tackles Problems Of Drought

LIKE many other countries, the United States has certain areas that are extremely arid, particularly in the South-West. In some parts of the State of Arizona, for example, the mean annual rainfall is as little as 2.9 inches with an annual precipitation for the whole area of 7.75 inches. Albuquerque, in the State of New Mexico, can count on no more than about 14 days of which some rain falls, the total amount being only about 8.5 inches. The State of Texas may suffer long periods of drought, as in the summer of 1933, which create serious problems for ranchers and farmers.

Like a desert

DURING the 1933, devastating drought, the problem of the range and pasturage in the United States was to find a way to conserve the available water. The conditions of the range and pasturage were such that the stock was suffering from lack of water and food. It is estimated that 11 billion cattle feed units were lost in the United States during the drought of 1933. The United States Government is now planning to improve the range and pasturage, including terracing, strip cropping, and other water conservation measures. The Government is also planning to improve the range and pasturage by providing water for the stock. The Government is also planning to improve the range and pasturage by providing water for the stock.

Suggestions

In a bulletin titled "Stock Water Developments," the U.S. Department of Agriculture suggests ways in which farmers may develop good ponds with little expense or labor. These ponds may be either dry or permanent. The dry ponds are those that catch every last drop of moisture from nearby ground, or they may be reservoirs that impound surface water by means of a built-up dam. The bulletin advises the farmer to get information before starting his construction, about the water table and topography of the area. The farmer should also get information about the water table and topography of the area. The farmer should also get information about the water table and topography of the area.

Financial help

DURING the 14 years from 1917 to 1931, the Department of the Interior has expended more than 21,000,000 pounds of money towards the construction of approximately 1,000 small irrigation projects. This expenditure has been made by the Government and by farmers who have been assisted through information supplied by the Government. By January, 1932, it was estimated that there were of the order of 1,000,000 small irrigation projects scattered throughout the United States, with few acres about 10,000 a year.

Charco

ONE of the most important types of water conservation developments of recent years is the new type of deep "charco" evolved by conservation experts of the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs in the Department of the Interior. The charco has proved particularly suitable in the arid South-Western part of the United States, where there are many thousands of Indian farmers. Few satisfactory dams can be built in the arid South-Western part of the United States, where there are many thousands of Indian farmers. THE NAME'S

ANTON CURMILLIS, Gladys Conroy, Thomas Harveys and Richard Dreyfus appear to grow on almost every bank in Britain, judging by the heavy mail which the B.B.C. receives every day. The reason for this bulky post is the wish to appoint in a popular fashion. The "Name's" in "It's a Wonderful Life" is a celebrity name question, one of a line, by a panel of well-known names, to try and discover the identity of the famous person. help, if possible, in designing the dam. In the United States, as in other countries, water is precious commodity and there is a constant local legislation that governs the building of a dam that will impound water. The bulletin suggests that it may be necessary for the farmer to obtain an official permit, which he does not receive. The advertisement on his neighbors' water rights. The U.S. Government bulletin explains the dam and with diagrams how to build across the stream. The dam is built across the stream with an adequate spillway to carry off excess flood water safely. It also gives the best use of water, storage and other resources of water.

After one of the original inventors of the State of Arizona returned to the U.S. in 1917, he was the first to suggest the use of a charco. The charco is a small reservoir which is built across the stream with an adequate spillway to carry off excess flood water safely. of surface water usually carries with it a high percentage of silt. This silt is built with a main capacity twice as large as the reservoir or charco. The basin contains sufficient water to fill the reservoir; the sediment is deposited here and only water carrying a relatively small amount of fine material enters the charco. The charco itself is thus protected for a long period from filling with sediment.

Small inlet

WATER enters the charco from the basin through a small inlet pipe which need only be large enough (6-12 inches in diameter) to fill the charco during a minimum three-day period of water flow. The pipe has collars of intervals to prevent water seepage along the outside of the pipe and at the entrance a rack to collect trash and prevent clogging. This inlet pipe may be extended out over the pond so that the water falls by gravity; but in some cases, where the soil is soft, it is advisable to install a siphon to the bottom of the charco by a masonry channel.

Small inlet

WATER enters the charco from the basin through a small inlet pipe which need only be large enough (6-12 inches in diameter) to fill the charco during a minimum three-day period of water flow. The pipe has collars of intervals to prevent water seepage along the outside of the pipe and at the entrance a rack to collect trash and prevent clogging. This inlet pipe may be extended out over the pond so that the water falls by gravity; but in some cases, where the soil is soft, it is advisable to install a siphon to the bottom of the charco by a masonry channel.

The charco-type reservoir, built on a slight slope, has a number of advantages. A central inlet pipe, which is constructed of concrete, is surrounded by a wide bed of drainage, providing complete drainage with a minimum expenditure. Only a small drainage and "run-off" is required. Since a dam is not necessary, the hazard of a gully and silt-extended out over the adjoining area to increase danger. If the basin has to be lined with impervious material, only a minimum of surface has to be protected. Silt is trapped outside the charco. The water entering the charco is relatively pure, it remains good, and provides water during drought periods.

"STAND on the back," I was told. "Now, if you turn these two knobs you can keep the moon just as focus as long as you wish."

The skill

As though you can't appreciate the high mathematics that are involved, the real skill in the production of these mirrors lies in the craftsman's hands.

How it goes

As in the case of diameters and curves, parabolas and ellipses, the craftsman believes that it once was a masterpiece of art for which the time was already hurt.

The Moon, above, at the distance in the garden of the observatory at 21 1/2 million miles from us.

which gives the Count a complete picture of the "moon" of the year intended for the mirror. The other, of comparatively ordinary glass, is the Sun.

First of all...

NOW the first objective to be made in the mirror is a concave hemisphere of a die is done by rubbing and grinding the glass in the mirror die, slowly but surely, the mirror die becomes and is perfectly formed. The depth of the hollow is measured with a micrometer...

TALKING TO ANIMALS

...when their dogs run out and do not come back for hours. My dog will never bark if I get up to go out of the room my dog will bark for any length of time...

My life is really very simple. I often wonder whether it will be any better or any worse if I go away or simply leave my dog to go to his home...

This is a story of astronomy as it is done in the observatory. The first man with whom it is concerned is the Count de Noüy and Mr. G. Durand...

And rubbing the test on top of the glass which creates a convex curve...

The hemisphere achieved, comes the crucial test of the erection of the parabola, a minute object of the hollow which transforms the die into a mirror which brings the stars to your fingertips.

Hours and hours

On this micro-to-be is rubbed for brief periods at a time, over weeks and months until, under the skillful touch of the master hand, the mirror is ready for driving the hours and hours of polishing...

Count de Noüy, who has been a member of the French Astronomical Society since 1915, acquired his skill when he worked under the guidance of Professor André Couder of the Observatoire de Paris, during his stay in 1922 as Chief Astronomer of the Kenya Mining Development Company...

Another time

As I said, he is a "character" and he and his friend plotted to discuss the regions of the moon in 1955. I would discuss the moon in my radio "ham" ton. And it was that is a story for another time.

MR. MOLOTOV IGNORES HINT FOR PROGRESS

RUSSIA'S proposal for a five-Power conference at the Berlin meeting, made by Molotov at the Berlin meeting of Foreign Ministers, was rejected by Mr. John Foster Dulles. He was a devotee to secure for China a position in the councils of the world which had no precedent.

The three Western representatives tried to pin-down Molotov to the question of Germany. He was not successful. After rejecting the Soviet plan for a five-Power conference, Mr. Dulles pressed that they should immediately get down to work on Germany. This was supported by Mr. Molotov.

Nations gave special rights to the permanent members. Making their own decisions, the Molotov declared that they would bring their views together in a common conference. He would be held outside the framework of the United Nations.

PRISONERS BUILD OWN JAIL AT MAWENI

No help from outside

PRISONERS at the Old Maweni prison camp, seven miles outside Tanga on the Korogwe Road, are now in the process of building their own jail at Maweni. It was started in 1942 and finished last year.

The old jail was originally a two-story building and is now being used as a storehouse. The new jail is being built on a site which was cleared from non-productive land. It is hoped to increase it to 5,000 acres where more than 100,000 prisoners are now being held. The new jail is being built on a site which was cleared from non-productive land. It is hoped to increase it to 5,000 acres where more than 100,000 prisoners are now being held.

Football field

On the other side are a disused and a hospital compound of 18 beds. At the entrance to an impressive road that is being run through here.

Opposite the entrance and beyond the football field are two 25-ft-long and 10-ft-wide stone pillars and market stalls. It is where the prisoners have their food and make their own soap and other necessities. The prisoners are also engaged in various handicrafts and are producing a large amount of goods for their own use and for sale.

Room for 650

In between the four-roomed block and the main block is a large and shady tree. Here the main block is situated. There is electricity in all rooms and throughout both compounds. Behind the wards are six punishment cells.

The new accommodation for 650 prisoners although it is possible to hold 1,000 in the compound. The prisoners are engaged in various handicrafts and are producing a large amount of goods for their own use and for sale.

Activities at a Coast prison

Prisoners at the old Maweni jail quarried stone and built a new prison for themselves on an adjacent site. On the left are some of the buildings. Below is the main door which has brass fittings, again the work of the prisoners. Now activities including agriculture, reclamation of land, quarry work and the crushing of stone, and road making. Revenue earned by the prisoners last year amounted to £5,000.

ZANZIBAR RESEARCH ON COCONUT PESTS

Spraying treatment increases yield

ALTHOUGH individual coconut palms often give high yields in East Africa, it has been known for many years that the yield generally is not as high as in other parts of the world. Shortly after the war, Arab and Swahili-speaking growers in Zanzibar noticed that where a certain ant appeared and spread, the harvest diminished to practically nothing.

This was pointed out to the Agricultural Department, who sent a specimen of the ant to the Director of the Commonwealth Institute. They learned that the ant was a species of the genus Acoklestinus, and that it was a pest of coconuts. The ant was identified as Acoklestinus and was found to be a pest of coconuts. The ant was identified as Acoklestinus and was found to be a pest of coconuts.

I.C.A.

IGNITION CONTROL ADDITIVE

Shell Motor Spirit now contains I.C.A. (Ignition Control Additive). This Shell-discovered additive, incorporating tricresyl phosphate, puts an end to the major cause of power loss . . . pre-ignition and short-circuiting of spark plugs by combustion chamber deposits. Prove this for yourself by the Two-Tankful Test.

The Greatest Motor Spirit Development in 32 Years

Tetraethyl lead was introduced in 1922

Pre-ignition and spark plug fouling are the greatest barriers to the full use of engine power. Now there's something you can do about it!

The reason why engines become rough and lose power, is that deposits accumulate to the combustion chamber and on the spark plugs. In the combustion chamber those deposits become red hot and cause the fuel/air mixture to ignite prematurely. This is called pre-ignition. It results in a severe noise which engineers call "wild ping". You have probably heard it, especially during acceleration and hill climbing. Pre-ignition can damage your engine.

You may also have noticed that your engine develops an unexplained misfire when you are driving on the open road. That is because the same deposits "build up" on your spark plugs and short-circuit them.

This wastes fuel and robs you of power.

Determined to abolish the greatest cause of power and fuel waste, Shell research technicians discovered a unique fuel additive, I.C.A. Shell Motor Spirit with I.C.A. accomplishes what no other fuel ever did before. First, by "fireproofing" the deposits it stops pre-ignition. Second, by changing the character of the deposits it eliminates the short-circuiting of spark plugs.

Those deposits are robbing you of fuel and power. By making them harmless, Shell Motor Spirit with I.C.A. enables new and overhauled engines to keep their "new car" performance longer. Older engines take on new life. From today you can start using ALL the cylinders ALL the time by changing to Shell with I.C.A.

TWO-TANKFUL TEST

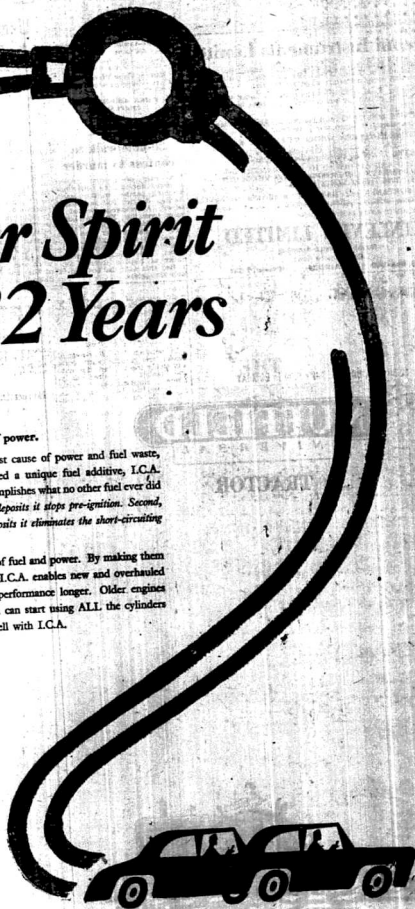

Here is a challenge: after using two tankfuls of SHELL with I.C.A., you will notice your engine running smoother and performing better than it ever did since the car was new or the engine overhauled and tuned. Smoother running means less engine damage. Better performance can mean more M.P.G.

Shell I.C.A. enables motor manufacturers to use higher performance engines of high compression ratios, and LEADS THE WAY TO CHEAPER MOTORING.

REMEMBER! I.C.A., containing tricresyl phosphate, is exclusive to SHELL.

Start the Two-Tankful Test and FEEL the Difference!

Available tomorrow at main towns—

A JOURNEY THROUGH AUSTRALIA

The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh begin their two-month tour of Australia at Sydney on Wednesday. Here D. G. BRIDSON gives an Englishman's recollections of a country that is a continent, most of whose nine million people live in the cities of the perimeter fringing the vast, fascinating emptiness of the outback.

A FRIEND of mine was once driving up to Fairbanks by the Alaska Highway. He stopped one night with a party of American Negro soldiers who had been given the job of repairing a section of the road in regard to what they thought of that particular neck of the woods. "Man," said one of the soldiers, "it's nothing but miles and miles of nothing but miles and miles."

Distances
To all practical purposes, the distance between two points is the time it takes to get from one to the other. In the British Isles the rail and the London and Glasgow are some 100 miles apart, but the distance between the two cities is only 400 miles. In the case of Australia as a whole, the distance between the two ends is 4,000 miles. It is only a few miles to the coast, but the distance between the two ends is 4,000 miles.

Empty scene
THE Australian scene is very different from that of any other country. It is a vast, empty scene, a land of few people, a land of few cities, a land of few roads. It is a land of vast distances, a land of vast emptiness.

Individuality
BUT even if he is a tourist the Australian has still got a strong sense of individuality. He has not been kept in line by the British Empire. He has not been kept in line by the British Empire. He has not been kept in line by the British Empire.

Identity
The Australian scene is very different from that of any other country. It is a vast, empty scene, a land of few people, a land of few cities, a land of few roads. It is a land of vast distances, a land of vast emptiness.

"In fact," says the rider, "the outback he knows that out once seeing a sight of the outback he knows what he is doing for ever. It is a boundary rider he may take a month to make the circuit of a single property, or of a single station, or of a single range of hills, or of a single range of mountains. It is in this sense of a boundary rider that the outback is so fascinating. It is in this sense of a boundary rider that the outback is so fascinating. These Hats Go To The Head

BY DOROTHY BARKLEY

YOUR 1934 hat will be a hat in the true sense of the word. It will be a full-sized, head-wrapping affair.

WITNESS the two hats pictured below and top right. Each designed by the new millinery idea and thing like a fez. It was worn straight on the head so that it follows the shape of the forehead and the crown. The crown has a wide brim which is made of a material that is bound with a heavy cap. It is made in white felt and is bound with a heavy cap. It is made in white felt and is bound with a heavy cap.

THIS attempt to revive the paddingless hat raises a question designers should have considered long ago. Women like a hat that is not too heavy and does not weigh down the neck. They like a hat that is light and airy, which gives them a feeling of freedom and ease. When they wear a hat that is too heavy, they feel that it is a burden and that it is not worth the trouble of wearing it.

It is the most fascinating, least attractive hat women like today. And to this day they are still wearing it. It is a hat that is not too heavy and does not weigh down the neck. It is a hat that is light and airy, which gives them a feeling of freedom and ease.

WOMEN ARE CATCHING UP

WITH almost breaking through the sound barrier in jet planes, the so-called weaker sex are advancing so far into what territory that one wonders whether in the near future women will catch up with men and then outstrip them.

It must be remembered that women have been in the competitive field for only about 50 years. At present they are no match for men. But in some sports, at which only a few years ago no one even dreamt of them competing, they are coming on fast.

Sprinters

IN 1906, when the Modern Olympic Games were founded, T. E. Hurler, U.S.A., the fastest man in the world, ran the 100 metres in 17.8 seconds. There are three women in the world today who have run the same distance at a faster rate. Helen Herrick, a student at the University of California, ran 100 metres in 13.2 seconds.

WISE MEN OF THE WEST

LIFE AND LETTERS

A NEW manual of Yoga from the United States shows on its cover that the West is undergoing a novel or remarkable experience. Since the earliest recorded years of civilization, the spiritual movements of the West have been making their mark on the consciousness of the West.

UNDER REVIEW

Yoga in the West, by Christopher Isherwood and Henrikh Andrussovich (Algon and Unwin 11s)

One of the foremost and most distinguished spiritualists in the West is the author of this book. It is the author's own experience of the West, as seen through the eyes of a man who has spent many years in the East. The book is a study of the spiritual life of the West, as seen through the eyes of a man who has spent many years in the East. The book is a study of the spiritual life of the West, as seen through the eyes of a man who has spent many years in the East.

The West is not a homogeneous entity. It is a collection of many different cultures and traditions. The book is a study of the spiritual life of the West, as seen through the eyes of a man who has spent many years in the East. The book is a study of the spiritual life of the West, as seen through the eyes of a man who has spent many years in the East.

WHAT most men in the West know of Yoga is that it is a religion. It is a religion that is based on the idea of the soul. The book is a study of the spiritual life of the West, as seen through the eyes of a man who has spent many years in the East. 'MADAME BUTTERFLY' - A FIASCO

First performed 50 years ago at La Scala, Milan... By Gerard Bourke

FOR 50 years, Madame Butterfly has flitted gaily from one opera house to another, along a sun-drenched path. But how different was the presentation at La Scala, Milan, on February 17, 1954, when the opera was staged for the first time in its new incarnation. The opera was presented by the new opera house, the Teatro alla Scala, which had just opened its doors. Kolynos cleans really clean. The rich foam penetrates into every corner and is between your teeth - fighting the bacteria that cause decay and ill-health. Yes, Kolynos cleans thoroughly, to keep your teeth good-looking and sparkling white.

... and the whole family agree. For this tooth powder is so attractive that a bright smile sends an air of brightness through the room. The children won't have to be asked to clean their teeth with Kolynos - they'll do it themselves. And a good thing, too, for their teeth.
