Threat from increase in population

WHILE Kenya, with its natural and human resources, would give way to a much larger population at present, in this state of development the rate of population growth, one of the highest in the world, was putting a burden on the economy which could be disastrous, according to a report just published.

New restaurant at airport

The Minister for Communications and Trade Mr. Mwangi (second from left) in a recent speech approving the Samba restaurant at Nairobi Airport. On the left is the proprietor Mr. D. B. Sanyal. At the extreme right, Mr. Mwangi says the airport had assumed a more important position as an international air traffic centre because of the better facilities at the airport's new restaurant.

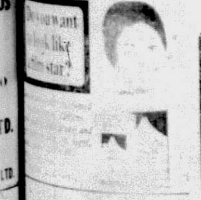

...and the new 100,000 passenger plane through its new gate. Mr. B. Sanyal, who spent £1,000 in modernising the Samba restaurant, says and comments: "The catering improved in Nairobi after I came to Kenya a week ago. The minister described the restaurant as the best in East Africa."
