Chess Returns As A Weekly Feature

By B. Barton-Eckett

In deciding to revive a weekly chess column after a lapse of some seven years we do think that the proprietors of the East African Standard are making a very real service to the chess-playing community of Nairobi and the Colony as a whole. In maintaining this column, which was for so many years ably conducted by the late Hon. Justice Palmer, we shall endeavor to keep our readers in constant touch with the latest international developments and innovations.

Reference will be made on the regular pages of the game to the fact that the chess player who is to play on any given day is to be indicated by the initials of his opponent. It is hoped that the chess player who has been playing for the past few years and those who have just begun to play will be able to find their way through the columns of the chess column. It is hoped that the chess player who has been playing for the past few years and those who have just begun to play will be able to find their way through the columns of the chess column.

Chess is a game of strategy and tactics, and it is one of the few games that can be played by people of all ages and social classes. It is a game that requires a high degree of concentration and logical thinking. It is a game that can be played by people of all ages and social classes.

The chess board is a square board with 64 squares, alternating in color between light and dark. The chess pieces are divided into two main groups: the white pieces and the black pieces. The white pieces consist of a King, a Queen, two Rooks, two Knights, two Bishops, and eight Pawns. The black pieces consist of a King, a Queen, two Rooks, two Knights, two Bishops, and eight Pawns.
