First takes on Nigeria in peace run to snags

Peace talks in London between Nigeria and Biafra, planned for today, have been postponed until today at the earliest, according to authoritative sources.

Mystery surrounded the delay in the talks, aimed at reaching agreement on a venue for peace negotiations. Both sides, as well as the Commonwealth Secretariat, refused immediate comment.

The Commonwealth Secretary-General, Mr. Arnold Shubin, was in separate contact with Nigeria's delegate, Chief Anthony Enahoro, and Biafra's Sir Louis Mufsonji on Saturday night table talks yesterday.

Snags on procedure

But sources said snags had developed on "procedural points" and the meeting had been put off until they were cleared up.

Mr. Shubin announced on Thursday that Nigeria and Biafra had agreed to his proposal to send high-level representatives for preliminary discussions.

The announcement raised hopes that the first direct official contacts between the warring sides would open the way for pre-level negotiations on a ceasefire and final peace settlement.

The Secretary-General was to agree on the venue for peace talks with Biafra's side before the proposals. The Secretary-General was to agree on the venue for peace talks with Biafra's side before the proposals.

Vietcong execute W. German envoy

TALKS TAKE SHAPE

The Vietcong yesterday executed the First Secretary of the West German Embassy in Saigon, Baron Nassov von Colberg.

South Vietnamese troops recovered the body of the man in Paris. He was the first German to be killed in the war, an act which was a further indication that he had been seen as an executioner.

The body was taken last night to U.S. Army bases on the outskirts of Cholon, the city's Chinese quarter.

16th ANNIVERSARY SUPPLEMENT

Employees can sell their shares to each other, and keep them if they are not employees of the company.

Since White Rose Dry Cleaners and Press Ltd was founded in 1953 to serve a family it has introduced a number of incentives for its staff.

The first was a bonus, which was provided after the end of the financial year. Mr. Habib Kenchay, director of the firm, noted that energy of his employees flagged at about lunch-time because they were underpaid.

A doctor was retained to treat factory illnesses and to advise on the firm's health scheme, so that married men could bring their families to Nairobi.

The firm claims that the standard of workmanship is as high as any in Europe and out-competes with that of workers in other countries.

Mr. Habib Kenchay, a director who has retired from active participation in the firm, helping to train African businessmen in business practice, administration and book-keeping.

The company now claims to be the largest in Black Africa, and to be the largest in Kenya, East Africa and the East Indies.

STEPS IN THE PROCESS OF DRY-CLEANING

Having a suit dry-cleaned is not a simple process. Several steps have to be taken before it is ready for return to the customer.

First of all, the garments to be dry-cleaned have to be separated by colour and fabric type. Dark things together. Light things together. Heavy things together. Synthetic and so on.

They are then tagged for identification along with removable parts like belts and buttons. They are inspected for damage and any necessary repairs made and removed before dry-cleaning.

Then garments are individually cleaned in the dry-cleaning machine. The temperature of a dry-cleaning machine is kept at a constant level. A measured amount of solvent is poured through it. Mechanical action provides the agitation necessary to remove the soil and dirt from the fabric.

After that a cycle is run in which the solvent is extracted from the clothing by centrifugal force.

After this the garments are dried by blowing warm air through them. During this process, they are usually inspected to see if they are of a standard quality they may be air dried in a cabinet. This dries the garment and removes the solvent.

The garments are then hung and sent to the spotting department. They are very carefully inspected by trained operators so as to see if they need to be re-treated. If they do the job. They may then be re-treated by using different chemicals or agents. This is done to remove the particular stain on the particular fabric.

White Rose operates two special liquid equipment, steam and compressed air, plus a great deal of manual skill as well as expert knowledge of the fabric, dye-stain chemistry and so on. Garments then move on to the finishing department. Buttons are replaced. The trousers and jackets are pressed. The suit is then packed and sent to the customer.

From other branches, garments move to the sewing section where minor repairs are made. Buttons are replaced. The trousers and jackets are pressed. The suit is then packed and sent to the customer.

The inspector in the person who checks the quality of the work. Another check is made before the garments are delivered to the customer.

Modern dry-cleaning equipment is used throughout the process. The solvent is removed from the garments by centrifugal force.

MEMBERS IN THE PROCESS OF DRY-CLEANING

Having a dry-cleaner is not a simple process. Several steps have to be taken before it is ready for action to the customer.

First of all, the garments to be dry-cleaned have to be separated by colour and fabric type. Darker clothes together. Lighter together. Heavy, sturdy garments together. Lighter, lighter ones together.

They are tagged for identification along with reliable marks like buttons and ornaments. They are inspected for certain stains, and then placed in the dry-cleaning machine.

The dry-cleaning machine is a mechanical action, powered by the rotation of a cylinder. The rotation of the cylinder produces the agitation necessary to remove the soil and dirt from the fabric.

The fabric is then dried and then a new cycle and other that is essential for the dry-cleaning process.

Abaluhya go down 2-1 to Gor Mahia

Standard Staff Reporters

At the Gor Mahia grounds were chaired off the field at the Nairobi City Stadium yesterday, the famous Abaluhya stars walked dejectedly in their changing room after being beaten 2-1 in their opening Kenya National Football League match before a non-representative crowd of 8,000.

It was Abaluhya's first defeat at the Stadium for 18 months but the East African club's loss came in a weak performance. Gor Mahia were certainly the better team yesterday and their players were given a standing ovation as they left the field.

Gor Mahia fans certainly were not disappointed. In the country, walked off the field and looked a dejected group.

A goal of Abaluhya's half-time, a goal from Gor Mahia's level-headed forward, William (Francis) original full Abaluhya, who led a championship for the past two years could easily have turned a point for the visitors.

Their inside-left, had been sent to the Tiro sports club, Nyongoya, trying to decipher the meaning of the man in his eyes.

Nigerian tax is open in Mr. Smith's

Nigerian delegates met in London yesterday in the first face-to-face over the outbreak of the civil war ten months ago. The aim is to reach a truce for top-level negotiations in a ceasefire and a final peace settlement.

The meeting had been planned originally to take place in the headquarters of the Commonwealth Secretariat, but instead it was held at the home of the Secretary-General, Mr. Arnold Smith.

On his initiative both governments had agreed to send their representatives to London at the end of preliminary contacts under the auspices of the Secretariat.

A session had been planned for Sunday, but was delayed by undefined procedural snags which arose during Mr. Smith's separate contacts with the delegates to arrange a table-top meeting.

Until yesterday afternoon there had been uncertainty about whether a meeting would take place at all but Mr. Smith in personal talks with the Federal Anthony Enahoro, and Blaise Diop, Senegal's Foreign Minister, got the two sides to meet.

Mr. Smith's success in getting the two together was seen as a triumph of diplomacy, but officials in London recognized that it was a highly sensitive step on a road which would be full of traps.

If an agreement can be reached on the table-top level, it will be a first step towards a final settlement. The delegates might also consider the possibility of an agreement for each representative to propose on the Commonwealth Secretariat.

It is not clear how far the two sides have gone in their talks. Mr. Smith has been seen to be in bed and has been unable to attend all the sessions. Mr. Enahoro has been seen to be in bed and has been unable to attend all the sessions. Mr. Diop has been seen to be in bed and has been unable to attend all the sessions.

Nigerian peace talks

Do the people who are pushing Biafra's bid for secession from Nigeria really want to join in peace talks? The question is prompted by the preliminary arguments in London about the venue for the conference, never mind the agenda.

All humanitarian as well as tactical considerations suggest Biafra should go as a supplicant to the conference table, having no right to dictate terms. The civil war is as good as lost for the Biafrans and any further resistance can only result in a wagon waste of lives.

The Federal authorities display a long-suffering attitude towards Biafra's proposals to the tendentious points pursued by Biafrans. Despite the propaganda campaign whipped up by Biafran ministers with counterfactual letters to the Press from supposed top living in Biafra and elsewhere — the successful movement is in direct contradiction of every principle of African unity.

Presidents Kenyatta and Kamba are two politicians figure ideal to head the peace conference, but it is difficult to be right if there is to be any chance of success. Anusha has been the scene of agreements which could avert war for its suitability. But President Nyere's unmitigated recognition of Biafra makes the town, being a Biafran, unacceptable to Nigeria, and it should be remembered the Nigerian Federal authorities are constitutional, in contrast with the Biafran rebels.

Biafra is represented in the preliminary London talks with due respect given to the aspirations of the Commonwealth Secretary in London or the O.A.U. Addis Ababa, supporting Dahir, because of O.C.M., or Anusha, under the East African Community. What is this intricate question to do with the French or with the East African Community, which is an economic union? If any venue qualifies for bilateral acceptance, it is London, the Commonwealth headquarters, despite Biafran opposition on the grounds of supposed British support for Nigeria which has led to outbreaks of anti-British violence.

These preliminary discussions about the venue give a glimmering of how difficult the peace negotiations will prove. Twice in 1961 (September and November) the Biafran rebels indicated willingness to meet at London, but they were really in distress, only to be twice rejected the offer of mediation. Biafra then blocked the efforts of the O.A.U. committee, and under the chairmanship of the expert of Ethiopia, who had pointed out that Dr. Nyere was not in favour of the start of April, the Biafrans rejected the Government to start preliminary talks pending the pre-conditions, in the Commissioner for External Affairs, and from the minority area of the Biafran Federation.

Maori traditions are thought of in New Zealand Indians. Here a Maori stick game is demonstrated at Wellington.

The evolution of a new race

The New Zealand Federation of Maori Students at the weekend attacked South Africa's racial policy. In this article GEORGE KOEHL, a Maori journalist, discusses why New Zealand is one of the few countries where racial tensions are declining rather than increasing as in so many other parts of the world.

In a hundred years' time, if official notices are correct, every New Zealander will be able to claim a trace of Maori blood in his veins. The terms "European" and "Maori" will have been subsumed in the evolution of the new race of "New Zealanders."

This will be, it is hoped, the result of the benevolent Government policy which "encourages integration between the races, and which is slowly eliminating the little racial frictions that still exist in New Zealand.

Indeed Maori and European are equal in the rights and any citizen, who either is or was, is equally entitled to the same rights, property, development, and education. The present day Maori, who are a mixture of Maori and European, are a new race, and are a mixture of Maori and European. It is this mixture of Maori and European, which is the basis of the new race of "New Zealanders."

The basic lack of racial feeling, however, reflects the human way by increasing intermarriage between the two races and the intermarriage between the two races. It is this intermarriage which is the basis of the new race of "New Zealanders."

Maori traditions are thought of in New Zealand Indians. Here a Maori stick game is demonstrated at Wellington.

Nairobi Park rhino get their own back — on the wrong car

Two aggrieved drivers have had the inevitable job of blaming to their insurance companies the damage to their cars was not the result of wild driving, but of wild rhinos. Both were charged in Nairobi National Park on Saturday evening.

It was an experience of the second incident, involving a cow rhino he caught at Tharaka, near Mts. Aberdare — and which was released in Nairobi about five weeks ago. "She is not an aggressive rhino, I have often seen her. She was undoubtedly killed by a car," he said.

The rhino got away and King stopped the car just when the rhino was about to charge. The rhino was heading for a house in the area of the park. He was driving a car with a broken front end. The car was damaged by the rhino's charge. The rhino was heading for a house in the area of the park. He was driving a car with a broken front end. The car was damaged by the rhino's charge.

Students must not 'carbon copy' foreign ideas'

Standard Staff Reporter
The Minister for Education, Dr. Kiwako, said yesterday that he was determined that thoughtfully about the country and Africa as a whole so that they would not be carbon copies of foreign societies and ideologies.

Dr. Kiwako, who was speaking at the second Kenya conference on teacher education—the last of its kind was held in Nairobi last week—said that for many years he had been in the forefront of the education movement in Kenya. He stressed the importance of the approach to education. He, the Minister, was determined to be as responsive as the highest possible level without diluting the quality of the education.

Careful planning needed

Education was vital to the nation and it was the key to progress and prosperity. It moulded the character of the young generations and, therefore, must be handled with care and planning and training and not done in a haphazard manner.

He thought desperately that the conference would agree that the time was ripe to consider the teacher education programme. Dr. Kiwako said that, although teachers must give information to the children, for many it was much more comprehensive. They had to encourage pupils to develop their own initiative, the highest possible, to guide them in following positive and acceptable social values of life.

They had to encourage children to have a general education that would show shorter time being in the school institutions. lack of planning flexibility slows progress

The lack of planning flexibility is slowing progress in many parts of the country, according to Mr. Charles Kipkipsi, a member of the Kenya Council of States.

Mr. Kipkipsi, who is a member of the Kenya Council of States, said that the lack of flexibility in the planning process was a major obstacle to development in the provinces.

He pointed out that the rigid nature of the planning process meant that local needs and circumstances were often overlooked.

Mr. Kipkipsi said that he had often found himself unable to identify himself, unlike and elsewhere, with the people who lived on it. He asked them to help him to identify himself and propose one, but most of all they would not identify themselves.

He disclosed that Mr. Charles Kipkipsi, a member of the Kenya Council of States, had been asked to identify himself and propose one, but most of all they would not identify themselves.

By Alan Chittop, Standard Staff Reporter
More than 3,000 destitute people, whose homes and crops have been destroyed by flood waters that have swept through most of Nyanza Province, are being housed in tented camps erected by the Kenya Army.

As the swifling flood waters began to recede, the homeless began to die of what few belongings they had been able to salvage from the devastation of their villages.

Blankets were laid on the ground, and pieces of tattered clothing hung from the tents' poles.

Army drivers cheered

Trucks laden with maize arrived at a camp at Nyando, and the Army drivers were cheered by 1500 men, women and children who had been rescued from the floods by a combined operation by troops and men of the Kenya Army.

"It had all been taken for these people many a week ago," one said.

Foreign investment essential for Kenya's progress

Standard Staff Reporter
limited and to have foreign capital would mean that the country desired, the Permanent Secretary to the Ministry of Economic Development, Philip Ngunjiri, said when he opened the second day of the development planning course at the Institute of Administration, Nairobi.

Some people feared that if Kenya continued to make use of foreign resources it would continue to be exploited in the sense that all the benefits would accrue to foreigners. He did not agree with that view. The danger of exploitation existed only when the country concerned was not making determined efforts to promote development in all areas.

New impetus to trade with Kenya

Tunisia and Syria rift

Why has Tunisia broken off diplomatic relations with Syria and asked the UN to elect a new Charge d'Affaires, with other members of the Syrian mission, to leave as soon as possible?

No official reason was given immediately, other than that the behaviour for some years of the Syrian Charge d'Affaires and his colleagues, had been "flagrant breaches of the UN rules of courtesy and diplomatic usage."

A Foreign Ministry statement said some time ago was ascribed two reasons. The first had relation to the behaviour of members of the diplomatic mission in Tunis, which was as far as to incite Tunisian citizens to undertake subversive activities, damaging to the public good.

The second reason was the speech delivered by the Head of the Syrian Government on May 1, in which he "openly attacked and in terms of insult treated the person of the President Habib Bourguiba."

The life of a diplomat is hard in the modern world. It is full of communications and hostile international relations. One day the day when a letter by diplomatic bag or special courier looks month to reach its destination. In those more leisurely days, there is an hour for second, even third thoughts, and decisions were usually left to the men on the spot.

The official diplomatic protocol usually arrived months after the actual rift had been forgotten and so, in contrast with contemporary life, thinking, reflection and considered opinion could often prevent violent confrontation. There is, however, a pronounced change of attitude in Tunisia in connection with the rift to a new mood.

Threat to rule of law

The Government has been criticised by a large number of English-speaking business men, not only in the overseas but also in the home country, for the administration of law and order broken down in the instance.

When this newspaper first brought the matter to light, the official attitude was that the riotous situation had taken place. This complacency was shattered by the subsequent developments. The Minister for Lands and Settlement made an interesting statement in that there was a security risk in the case of the riotous situation.

Last week it was reported that advocates representing the owners were preparing a formal protest to administrative officials over their handling of the affair. The grounds were that the police had been ordered to disperse the former freedom fighters.

One of the results of the recent political changes in Czechoslovakia is that the competition will be prepared to participate and invest in joint ventures in Kenya, either with official bodies or with private investors.

The First Secretary (Commercial) at the Czech Embassy in Nairobi, Mr. Walter S. Matysek, said yesterday that the country's foreign trade corporations were sending delegations to visit other countries and would be interested in services and spare parts organisations in Kenya.

The new President

Gen. Ludvík Svoboda, the new President of Czechoslovakia, was born on November 21, 1907, in the town of Mladá Boleslav, in the Bohemian Highlands.

His career was interrupted by the occupation of Czechoslovakia by the Nazis, but he spent an important part in the underground movement. He was arrested by the Gestapo and imprisoned in the concentration camp at Pátek.

After the war in Austria was decided by the Czechs, he was appointed the first Czech Independent Battalion which was placed in the German-occupied zone of Austria.

Kenya is looking for industrial and commercial development. It is not only in the industrial sector but also in the agricultural sector. The country is rich in natural resources and has a large population.

At present the value of trade between Kenya and Czechoslovakia is not very high. However, the country is rich in natural resources and has a large population. The country is rich in natural resources and has a large population.

The holder of his country's highest award, he has some 20 years of experience after being awarded the Order of the Patriotic War.

15m. station will expand E.A. communications

Standard Staff Reporter
The major expansion of the telecommunications network in East Africa involving the capital investment was outlined in Nairobi yesterday by the Director of Posts and Telecommunications Corporation, Mr. D. H. A. Scholby, when speaking at a Press conference at the Corporation and intended to give the East African public a clear and complete picture of the telecommunications system in the three countries.

Tenders already out
Mr. Scholby announced that tenders had already gone out to contractors in Britain for the building of £1,500,000 satellite communication system and it was expected that the first awards would be given by August. It was estimated that the project would take about a year to complete and in 1960 the new system should be in full operation.

He told the Press that the present system of telecommunications is subject to interruption and the only way of improving it is by the installation of satellite frequencies which can carry 1,000 conversations simultaneously.

"At present there are only eight circuits in operation and this is insufficient to meet the rapidly growing demands for telephonic and telecommunication services in a growing East African continent."

"Within the limited funds at our disposal it had to be borne in mind that as much as the public would like increased and efficient services to be provided the contractor desired to get more and more telephone facilities was putting a great deal of strain on the Corporation.

"The present main line in the telephone system was inadequate for the present main line and the Corporation had to put out tenders for a subscriber line plant and delivery equipment, including the necessary inadequate trunk equipment. The Corporation had budgeted to spend about £1,000,000 on the project, but the £1,500,000 figure would be £2,700,000 for the complete project."

"The Corporation has also had to spend £200,000 on the purchase of two films — a 'Cap of Colours' which depicts the East African telecommunications system and a telecommunications system in 1957 and which is now being used by the Corporation in its public relations work."

"The chairman of the East African Posts and Telecommunications Corporation, Mr. S. O. J. Owah, who had been in the country for a few days, said that he was satisfied with the progress made by the Corporation since his appointment in 1958 and that he was confident that the Corporation would continue to make a contribution to the development of the East African continent."

Indiana Primary won by Senator Kennedy

DELAY NUCLEAR TREATY CALL AT U.N.

Senator Robert Kennedy has swept the first hurdle in his bid to win the Indiana primary for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Mr. Kennedy, 42, defeated the late President John F. Kennedy, who had died in office, to win 42 per cent of the total vote in the Democratic caucus.

Long before counting had begun, Mr. Kennedy's opponent, Governor Lawrence, reported he had lost 42 per cent compared with about 25 per cent for each of the other candidates.

Mr. Kennedy, a young lawyer, had a strong record in the Indiana legislature, where he served for two years.

He was elected to the Senate in 1956, and was re-elected to a second term in 1958.

Mr. Kennedy's victory was a surprise, as he had been considered a long shot.

Makehift Kenya easy prey for Eagles

Headed Hot Reporter
Kenya's makeshift international football team turned in a pathetic display in their friendly match against Nigeria's Green Eagles at the Nairobi City Stadium last night, as the visitors cruised to a 2-1 win in a game that produced little excitement for the 5,000 onlookers.

As a result the team failed to score in Nairobi, although it was not the actual end of the match, as the Kenyan players were unable to put the ball into the net for the 15th minute. The Kenyan players were unable to put the ball into the net for the 15th minute.

Bill limits period of succession

Standard Staff Reporter

A new Bill to amend provisions for Presidential elections in the Kenya Constitution was published yesterday in a "Kenya Gazette" Supplement. It replaces the Amendment Bill published in March, which had not passed through the National Assembly when it adjourned last month.

The major difference in the provisions of the replacement Bill concerns the succession to the Presidency by the Vice-President in a case where the President dies or resigns, and there is no disqualification of Parliament. It is proposed that in this event the Vice-President will assume office as President, but there will be an election of a President by popular vote within the following six months.

Popular vote

The new Bill also provides that in the event of there being no Vice-President who was appointed by an elected President, an election of a President shall be commenced within one month following the occurrence of the vacancy.

Under the former Amendment Bill, the proposal was that the Vice-President would assume office as President until the next general election following a dissolution of Parliament.

Bus fares

A. Airways puts fares on air domestic routes

Standard Staff Reporter

Increased air fares on domestic routes. The increase — the first since 1956 — will come into operation on June 1. The announcement was made simultaneously at Prata Corporation in Nairobi, Dar es Salaam and Kampala. The business explained that steadily rising costs, increased wages and salaries, the cost of maintenance materials had forced the corporation into increasing fares. In addition to increasing single fares and business excursion fares, the corporation is abolishing the practice of giving a discount on return tickets. From July 1 the cost of a return ticket on domestic routes will be exactly twice the single fare. In the past a two per cent discount had been given on return tickets.

10 p.c. on excursions

A statement, read by Nairobi by the administrative director, Mr. Miss Amambishi, said that, despite rising costs, the corporation had endeavored to expand and improve its network and frequency of scheduled services between Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania to meet public needs without increasing fares. There will be an increase of approximately ten per cent on excursion fares such as six-day business excursion, and an approximate ten per cent on single fares. The new single tourist class fare for Nairobi to Dar es Salaam will be 125, compared with the present rate of 110.
