Solvation Army's new leaders
An interesting analysis of the Channel Island breeds, with special reference to the Jersey, Guernsey, and Guernsey, was given the other day by Professor George G. King, Wye Agricultural College, Diss, when he concentrated feeding to pasture farming in his lecture on the subject. Professor Cooper said that in New Zealand practically no concentrates are fed, but pasture production reached a very high level. Quoting from Miss Cochran's book 'The Milch Cows of England' the lecturer drew attention to Miss Cochran's comparison of breeds in their efficiency in producing 4% fat corrected milk per 1,000 lbs. of the cow's milk weight. Jersey cows topped the list of the whole Continent and the rest of the world. Taking into account the cost of feed, Jersey cows were ranked at 81 per cent, Ayrshires at 78 per cent, and Friesians at 68 per cent.

Mr. King, George G. King, recently appointed as Territorial Commander for the Salvation Army in East Africa, was seen here in South Africa, as Chief Secretary of the International Training College, London, Sunday and Mr. King arrived by air from South Africa last Sunday and the ceremony shortly thereafter. The Salvation Army in South Africa, Uganda, Kenya and Tanganyika. Another member of the staff, Mr. Walter Smith who has served for over 20 years with the Salvation Army, was also seen here. CAPE COAST GOLD

Made unknown to the stories history of early trading ventures on West Africa, the castle of the Gold Coast forms a notable feature of the coastline of the Colony. Built by the Dutch, Portuguese, British and English, it served both as headquarters for their countries' trading organizations, and as a strong point against hostile tribes and jealous commercial rivals. Today many of them are in ruins, while those that have been preserved are mainly in use as Government offices, so in the case of Cape Coast Castle, built by the English in 1682, so as to prevent the Dutch from covering the coast industry and other commercial activities of importance is readily available on request.

COTTON 'RICE' IN 1929

19-year-old Uganda

WEIGHING AND PAYING AGENS' CHIEFS WERE 'SWEETENED'

COLLECTION of a report made to the Uganda Government 19 years ago as to the effect that the cheating of the Native and Aborigine in the cotton industry had on the industry is published in the Uganda Government report on the cotton industry for 1929.

The suggestion of a formula for ascertaining whether a fair price was paid to the Native grower is investigated in the questions which the report puts to the cotton cultivators in Uganda in 1929.

The Commission, composed of Sir W. Morris Carter as chairman, Mr. A. Jones, Mr. J. M. W. Palmer and J. C. Gardner, under the heading "CREATING A BIAPART PRICES" as a result of much evidence has been given in favor of the Native and Aborigine witnesses and their agents to the effect that the cheating of the Native and Aborigine witnesses who should be a position to know do not know the value of their produce as they are ignorant as to what the market price is and what they do to obtain a very considerable amount of the "Eastern Province".

How it was done

In the alleged methods of cheating the Commission has found that the Native and Aborigine witnesses were given a smaller weight of cotton than they are entitled to and that the price paid for the cotton was less than the market price.

'Heavily Natives'

The Commission has found that the Native and Aborigine witnesses were given a smaller weight of cotton than they are entitled to and that the price paid for the cotton was less than the market price.

MARKETING IDEAS IN 1948 REPORT

A recent Commission report has recommended that a body be set up to investigate the marketing of cotton in Uganda.

LONDON SCENE A TRIBUTE TO THE COURAGE OF A FEW GALLANT MEN

The story of Scott of the Antarctic is one we have waited long to see on the film. There was, if my memory of so long ago serves me right, a silent film that gave tribute but scarcely justice to the endurance and courage of the last leg to the South Pole.

But now, after two years of waiting, the Ealing Studios is ready for its Royal Command Performance on November 28. The film has taken four years to make and two years to make it as nearly as possible an accurate record of the expedition in 1914, despite an enormous amount of research into particular details of the expedition, particularly those of the characters and many scenes from the diary, to make a film of the caliber.

This might have been a difficult film to cast, but fortunately one of our leading English stars, John Mills, proved to be unusually like Scott, not only in looks, but in his characteristics and mannerisms. Also, to film locations presented the greatest difficulties. It was found that the variety of snow conditions were so different that the same snow could be made at the same time as possible for a film.

After a great deal of research, the Alton Studios in Switzerland was selected to represent the Antarctic. A Norwegian winter place surrounding the South Pole.

The film is being shown in London and Birmingham in July and August. It is being shown in London at the Regent Cinema, and in Birmingham at the Grand Theatre. It is being shown in London at the Regent Cinema, and in Birmingham at the Grand Theatre.

It was more difficult with Scott's expedition. To reach the South Pole, the expedition had to make a long journey each day over rocks covered with snow. The expedition had to make a long journey each day over rocks covered with snow.

This was the one of the toughest sections ever undertaken for a British film unit, but all the difficulties were met at it and when the picture went into studio production. When on location, the staff had to adapt itself to the weather. The film was made in the winter of 1914, and the expedition was made in the winter of 1914.
