What is a Square Engine?

A "Square Engine" is an engine in which the diameter of the cylinder bore is equal to the length of the piston stroke.

In the new Vauxhall power units the bore (3 1/2 in.) is actually greater than the stroke (3 in.), so that, in the modern idiom, the new Vauxhall is a 3 1/2 in. x 3 in. OVER-SQUARE engine.

For 35 years, the shape of British motor car engines was influenced by the R.A.C. horse-power rating used as a basis for taxation. Near a true measure of power per capacity, this formula was based on the bore of the engine and the number of cylinders. Length of stroke was excluded from the calculation. As a result the horse-power tax encouraged the development of small-bore, long-stroke engines in British motor cars. Long after the rest of the world had moved towards a more logical and natural horse-stroke ratio. Development work on the new Vauxhall engines had started before the abandonment of the horse-power tax. The new engines are backed by the most searching and rigorous test programme, and their design incorporates the latest ideas in modern passenger car practice.

MUSEUM EXTENSION IS NOW READY FOR EXHIBITS

THIS week's picture page brings a preview of the newly completed extension to the Corcoran Museum, Nairobi, and an insight into the work that is going on in the arranging of exhibits in time for the official opening which, it is expected will take place at the end of the year or early in 1954.

To the left is the lower tram where one of the various galleries stands.

SECOND down on the left is the South Memorial Hall assigned to hold minerals and fossils of East Africa. Below this is the Museum's preparator, Mr. H. J. Allen-Turner who is preparing applying finishing touches to the plastic model of a reptile. Next to this is a wing of the Churchill Gallery, where will come mainly natural exhibits. Bottom right Mr. Turner is shown drawing his partner to position a fish in a coral group.

CLOTHES FOR GIRLS ABOUT TO BOARD THE LUGGER

As a seafaring nation the English are conventional even about their clothing. This is inevitable, as hard-wearing materials and practical styles are necessary for the sea. The shortening of the skirt and the introduction of trousers in recent years mark an Englishwoman's main-but not exclusive—concerns to fashion.

RECENTLY, however, we have been discerning what is being offered to the girls about to board the lugger. The most luxurious garment is a collared, long sleeve and is based on a check and is in French blue, white, navy, yellow and pale pink. It is offered in white, navy, yellow and pale pink with cap sleeves, and is offered in white, navy, yellow and pale pink with bell sleeves, in a range of excellent colours including turquoise.

Alas! Girls are making a costly mistake which looks odd in girls of the Hippodrome. Gordon Loeffler's white, long-sleeved dress with a white collar and a fine white stripe with blue stripes in a cherry red; both are very nice.

Panama fabric is the name.

ELSA SANDERS WRITES FROM LONDON

Even Dogs Have Complexes

DOIT smile but show us this a doggy psychologist. Have you a temperamental dog? Maybe you thought his conduct was natural but you were wrong.

Dogs it seems are as full of complexes as humans and are prone to require the services of their owners. Chubb, a specialist, or should I say psychiatrists for canines have long been associated in the States where the population here has a mean for being psycho-analysed. Now a dog psychologist has been called into London and in his country house in Hertfordshire.

His clientele is very cheap. He charges a pound and offers his services with coloured ribbons. He does not give any anti-complexing drug or medicine. He simply makes you come back with the dog. He charges a pound for each visit, and he does not charge you for the dog's food. He does not charge you for the dog's shelter, and he does not charge you for the dog's company. He does not charge you for the dog's love.

She May One Day Be America's First Lady

FOR 38 years Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower's home has been wherever her distinguished husband hangs his hat and she hangs her pictures. "I have had to get used to a life of itinerancy and I have kept house in everything but an igloo," the wife of one of America's leading soldier statesmen recalls.

From that apartment on a United States Army post in the French, where she presided as the general's lady during her husband's assignment as Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, Madame Eisenhower has displayed her talents as a housewife. What she has done is the only, and perhaps the best, of her kind.

Innate life

Now that General Eisenhower has relinquished the command of thousands of the mounted and dismounted troops of the United States, the general's lady is expected to be the White House's flag for some time. The little one has been transferred to a civilian home in Washington. The supporters hope may one day be the White House's flag for some time.

It was on July 1, 1948, that the general's lady was transferred to a civilian home in Washington. The supporters hope may one day be the White House's flag for some time.

Her ambition

Her ambition has been to be a good mother and a good wife. She has accompanied her husband to his posts and cities in the United States and in Europe. The Far East and the Pacific have been her theatre of operations.

Mrs. Eisenhower's first move in establishing her home was to hang up growing collection of family pictures. She has also other characteristic touches—the flowers which she loves, her favourite soft green, and one colour scheme, and, if that is a piano. Although not trained in the state, she has made the best of the many things she has done in her life. She was alone when her husband was away.

Mounting Interest In The Crown Jewels

MANY of London's leading West End tailors and court dressmakers are now busy renovating the State robes and mantles of noblemen for the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth which is to be held in June, 1953.

There is mounting interest in the British Crown Jewels and Regalia which will be used for the Coronation ceremony. Many of them have been finished in the Tower of London and been inspected by visitors from all over the world. In few places in the world is so rich a display of mineral treasure and the art of the jeweller and engraver so easily accessible to the inspection of the people.

In the pictures on this page you see, top left, the head of the Royal Sceptre. It contains, among other jewels, the Great Star of Africa cut from the Cullinan diamond and weighing 5169 carats which was presented to King Edward VII and embodied in the Royal Sceptre.

BELOW this are the four Royal Sceptres while in the two pictures top right are the three State Swords and the Royal Sceptre and jeweled State Sword. The jeweled State Sword is the most beautiful and valuable sword in the world. Made of Damascus steel, its scabbard is studded with sapphires, rubies, diamonds and other precious stones.

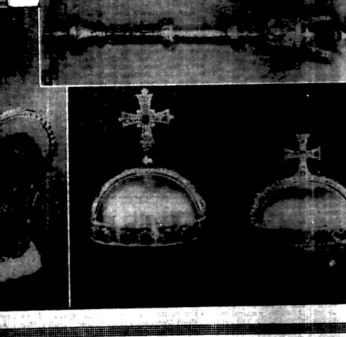

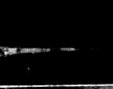

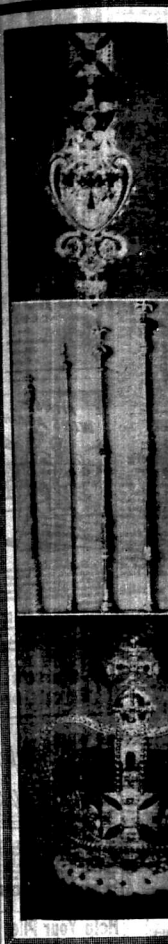

In the picture of the three State Swords, the Sword of State seen in the center, is a two-handed sword, the length of the blade being 21 inches. The handle is of gilt metal, the cross-piece representing the lion and the unicorn. Its scabbard is decorated with diamonds, rubies and emeralds in designs of the rose, the thistle and the shamrock. The other swords are the Sword of Spiritual Justice, and the Curtana, Sword of Mercy.

Centre right is seen the Ampulla and Anointing Spoon. The anointing of the Monarch is one of the most important rites of the Coronation ceremony. The Ampulla takes the form of an eagle with wings outstretched as the Holy Oil. The oil is poured from the beak of the eagle on to the Anointing Spoon. The sword pictured immediately below, is that carried by the Sergeant-At-Arms.

THE crown, bottom left, is St. Edward's Crown. It was copied in the time of King Charles II from the ancient crown worn by Edward the Confessor and is the Crown of England. All Monarchs of England have been crowned with it since it was made. The crown, bottom right, is the Imperial State Crown, worn by the reigning Monarch on all State occasions. Made in 1838, it embodies many historical gems—the Black Prince's ruby and a sapphire from the ring of Edward the Confessor. In front is the second Star of Africa, weighing 309 carats, cut from the great Cullinan diamond. In all, the crown contains 1,783 diamonds, 277 pearls, 17 sapphires, 11 emeralds and five rubies.

The remaining picture shows, on the left, the Royal Orb or polished gold, studded with large pearls, rubies, sapphires and emeralds. It is placed in the Monarch's right hand after donning the Royal robe.

SCIENCE AND YOU

THE CINEMA HAS REDISCOVERED SPACE

By Maurice Goldsmith

Following London, Paris has recently acquired the three-dimensional, stereoscopic film. The real wants to see the year's Festival of the film. They found the British space in these films to be just as satisfying and real as the conventional film. The stereoscopic picture is accustomed to in the flat.

There is still room for a great deal of technical improvement in the three-dimensional film, but there is no doubt that it is being carried, as a significant art form, into the hands of science and education.

Two images

We see the tremendous change in nature, not only in the sky, but in the sea. The (Stinson) word "stereoscopic" means "seeing double." If you hold a card with two pictures on it and look at it with your eyes, you will see the two pictures as if they were one. The front picture will appear to be behind the back picture, and both will appear to be in the same plane as the front picture.

The stereoscopic film takes advantage of this principle. It takes two pictures of a scene, one from the left and one from the right. When you look at the film with your eyes, you see the scene as if you were there. The two pictures are combined to form a single, three-dimensional image.

'Magic glasses'

MANY critics have complained of the stereoscopic film. They say that it is too expensive, and that it is too difficult to see. However, the stereoscopic film is becoming more popular every day. This is because of the "magic glasses" that have been invented. These glasses are made of a special material that allows you to see the stereoscopic film as if you were there. They are very comfortable to wear, and they are very easy to use.

IF AND WHEN

by George Schwartz

WHAT will be the consequences if and when there is anything but a serious recession? This is the question that is being asked by many people.

Some people think that a serious recession will lead to a depression. They think that the economy will collapse, and that there will be no way to recover. However, many other people think that a serious recession will lead to a new era of growth and progress.

FAVOURITE TIME

I AM all for intelligent and my favourite time is the time when I am working. I like to be busy, and I like to be productive. I like to see the results of my work, and I like to know that I am making a difference.

Some people like to relax, and some people like to be busy. However, I think that the best time is the time when you are working hard, and you are making a difference.

JUST AS WILL

It is all the same, and it is all the same. It is just as well, and it is just as well. It is just as well, and it is just as well.

Some people think that it is just as well, and some people think that it is just as well. However, I think that it is just as well, and it is just as well.

NOTING OUR LIFE

There are many things to note in our life. There are many things that we can learn from, and there are many things that we can do. We can learn from our mistakes, and we can do better in the future.

Some people think that there are many things to note in our life, and some people think that there are many things to do. However, I think that there are many things to note in our life, and there are many things to do.

THE QUEEN

by SIR CHARLES PETRIE
Role of the Crown in Government

This is the first of a series of eight articles written by one of the most distinguished royal and constitutional historians in England. The articles will put forward a new philosophy of Monarchy for the new Elizabethan era. They will examine the position of the Crown in the light of history and of the Constitution and will show what a great part it can play in furthering international relations throughout the world.

The people

THE Queen Elizabeth II is almost universally regarded as the most popular monarch in the world.

The Constitution

NOT long ago I was in London, and I was asked to write a book for the Foreign Office on the subject of the British Constitution.

Few clashes

THE Government and the Opposition are in a state of relative calm. There is no serious clash of opinion between the two sides.

An example

The King's speech is a good example of the way in which the monarch should speak. It is clear, concise, and to the point.

It is not always clear to these days what the Queen's role is in the first instance, and how far she is to be regarded as a mere figurehead.

only to place through the newspaper. It is not always clear to these days what the Queen's role is in the first instance, and how far she is to be regarded as a mere figurehead.

THE THINGS THEY SAY...

What ways allow... The things they say... The things they say... The things they say...

Empire, for the Crown is every bit as important as the monarch is to him. Such being the case the Monarchy exercises every part of the world in which it is to be found.

In the past

It is obvious that in these days the Queen's role is of the first importance, and how far she is to be regarded as a mere figurehead.

Impartial umpire

THE Government must always be impartial in the way in which it deals with the various questions that may arise from time to time.

Queen Victoria

THAT this was an early monarch is a fact which is well known to all who are interested in the history of the British Empire.

NEXT WEEK Family Background

(See also page 17) The family background of the monarch is of great importance in determining the course of the nation's history.

THIS WEEK'S LEADERS—FACING THE PROBLEMS OF THE WAKWAKI

TWENTY THOUSAND WAKWAKI

By FRANK HAWKINS

The Royal Technical College

BATHURST, August 20, 1962

The Chairman of the Government Council of the Royal Technical College of Bathurst has given a lead to public opinion regarding the matter of endowments. It cannot be denied that the erection of a technical school, no matter whether for academic studies or as is this case for the acquisition of technical skills, is only the primary step. Its value must rest on the quality and the quantity of the pupils.

So far there is the shell and the staff and pupils will follow in due course. But there is far more to it than that. It has already been created a private trust in the name of public education and it is in its progress, not only in those who will participate and be educated there but by the people of East Africa who are interested in it.

Money for the Post Office

THE GOVERNMENT is to be a great success in the future by the launching of a postal service to the island endowments to this college.

It would not be inappropriate for those who are in a position to make a contribution to this vital aspect of education in East Africa.

The lack of proper higher educational facilities in Kenya in the past is perhaps one of the causes of the present unrest. Too many people have been turned to the date of the Battle of Hastings and too many people have been taught to use their hands and brains for all kinds of things. Their development depends upon the men and women who can advise and make use of a technical education.

The Use of Swahili

MONDAY SEPTEMBER 10

THE SUGGESTION put forward last week by the members of the Government Council in Dar es Salaam in Council debates on the issue of Swahili as a language of instruction in a technical college, is one which has attracted a great deal of attention. It is a suggestion which has been made and it is a suggestion which has been made and it is a suggestion which has been made.

THE CLOVE TREES OF THE ISLANDS OF ZANZIBAR AND PEMBA

"GOGAI and spice, and all things nice, that's what little girls are made of," runs the nursery rhyme.

The delightful stories of romance, thrills of adventure and visions of fantastic beauty lie hidden in the name of spices. And it is from Zanzibar and Pemba that 90 per cent of the world's supply of cloves from which the spices are made is derived.

The clove tree is not indigenous to the islands. It was introduced shortly after the beginning of the 16th century — somewhere between 1520 and 1525 — and such was the success of the venture that within 20 or 30 years clove had become the single important commercial factor in Zanzibar and Pemba.

The antiquity of the clove is confirmed in Oriental literature during the Han period more than two centuries B.C. It was known in China as "chicken tongue grass" and was used by officers of the Imperial Court to render their breath fragrant in the presence of their sovereigns.

The clove is the unopened flower bud from a tree or large shrub of the myrtle order. The Zanzibar tree is an evergreen, frequently reaching a height of from 30 to 40 feet. The buds grow in clusters of from ten to 50 or more buds and are harvested twice a year starting July to October and December to January. Crops vary extensively from 2,000 tons up to as high as 20,000 tons.

Harvesting in a good season, the women are one of the busiest activities when women and children engage in picking the bunches of buds from the lower branches of the trees. The men climb and with hooked sticks draw and pluck the more remotely placed buds. All the cloves in Zanzibar are hand picked, no machinery of any description being employed.

To many it will come as a surprise that the use of cloves in the housewife's apple pie is, if most familiar, least important. Indeed, if the flavouring of pastry were the sole application of cloves the important establishments now existing for the scientific organisation of the cultivation and sale of cloves might as well not exist. The extent of the application of cloves and their distillates is so numerous and world-wide; sufficient to name three directions of outstanding importance.

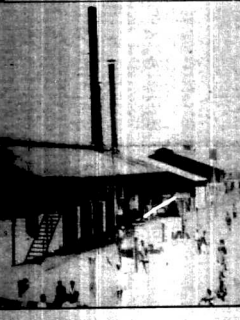

In some parts of the world the most popular cigarettes owe part of their delicate aroma to an admixture of cloves. Women will be interested to know that some of the most highly prized and generally popular cosmetics owe much of their charm to a certain delightful distillate of cloves. A third use of cloves is the essence thereof, its application to preparations for commercial and medicinal use. Its preservative and antiseptic qualities in the form of an essential oil are taken advantage of in many varieties of preparations—food, medicine, perfumes and ointments.

MOST of the commercial oils are distilled from dried Zanzibar cloves which yield anything from 13 per cent to 18 per cent of oil. Clove oil is nearly colourless or very pale yellow which darkens somewhat on keeping. It has the characteristic aromatic odour of the plant and a pungent burning taste. Toothache has for many of its cures by a timely application of Clove Oil!

Zanzibar is virtually now the only place in the world the prosperity of which depends primarily on the clove industry.

The staff photographer took these pictures of Zanzibar's clove industry.

MIXING THE DOUGH

After the flour has passed through a giant mechanical sifter which extracts all impurities, it travels by chute into mixing vats. Yeast and water are added, the dough is kneaded mechanically and left to rise. It is then transferred to a machine which separates it into 1 lb. 2 1/2 oz. portions. Systematic weighing assures that each portion of dough shall be identical in weight and content. When finally baked, the loaf will weigh 2 to 3 oz. overweight.

The evening skirt to either with blouse or sweater; provides the answer to a dress problem: whether to choose a garment suitable for cocktail and dinner parties in town or one wearable during country-weekend evenings.

It is easier to pack into a holiday suitcase than an evening dress and one can take the changes over a trip of three or four days.

Dick, chessy hats have faded on the mental to recent years. And it is a big change from the plain, solid colors which started, and so on, and so on, and so on.

Ballet length

Ball-length evening skirts, very wide, made of satins falling just below the knees are the most popular of the designers. Many are displayed with matching fitted jackets, minkes cape and gloves.

In the Fashion

This made sense with the new look. There have been several models which are so comfortable of the mid-west, and they are worn even favorably to the skirt and hat.

THE QUEEN-2

By SIR CHARLES PETRIE
Family Background

WHEN on June 6, for the first time in 50 years, the hand playing "God Save the Queen" on the Horse Guards' Terrace, in London, was struck by the Queen's Colour of the Scots Guards. It was struck, for those who remembered an earlier Queen, nearly a fortnight before she died. The Queen Elizabeth II rode on to the parade-ground in the middle of the thousands of spectators that she represented hope for the future.

The second is a traditional way to celebrate youth and service, as well as to be the embodiment of a tradition to which her countrymen owe so much.

THE British monarchy is in a modern form that is to say accepted and respected, later from the reign of Queen Victoria. Under her shelter of the House of Queensberry, the Crown was thoroughly discredited and the Queen Elizabeth II, after a time under George III, set a new standard.

The new reign into which the Queen Elizabeth II entered a widespread belief that Queen Victoria would be the last English sovereign. Thus the unexpected happened, and by her quiet unobtrusive manner she proved that the monarchy was as necessary to the industrial age as it had been to the agricultural.

It was a period of middle-class ascendancy. The Queen was not its ally, but she was its ally, and she was its ally, and she was its ally.

It may please a few traditionalists to refer to the Queen as the last of the sovereigns. This is not true.

Victoria not realising the importance of the Crown as a stabilising force in a world which has become an age of strife and confusion. Always she understood as readily the nature of the Crown as she did as was seen at the Diamond Jubilee in 1897.

THE great controlling factor in the British monarchy has always been the Queen. She is the embodiment of the Crown, and she is the embodiment of the Crown.

THE Queen Elizabeth II, who is the embodiment of the Crown, is the embodiment of the Crown.

THE Queen Elizabeth II, who is the embodiment of the Crown, is the embodiment of the Crown.

of his duties he might well like between the Royal Household and the people of Britain.

On all sides there was a deepening sense of unity, even when the possibility of a civil war, which had been feared together, had been dismissed.

What history will say of this time, when the Queen Elizabeth II was crowned, is not yet known.

It is not likely that it will be possible to change the British monarchy as it is today, but it is possible to improve it.
