MATTERS OF MOMENT

THREE YEARS AGO, when it was almost universally regarded as indecorous to mistrust the aims of Japanese policy, we wrote of the threat to East Africa involved in Japanese expansion, particularly when allied to German and Italian aggression, as we held that "it would be treachery with treachery unsurpassed even by Hitler and Mussolini." Tojo launched his attack in the Orient we discussed the probability of raids by the Japanese in the Indian Ocean, with the dual object of dissipating our naval forces and interrupting the flow of British, American, Australian, Indian and South African supplies to the Middle East generally, including the traffic through the Persian Gulf to Iran and Russia. In two short months Japan had seized two ports on the eastern shores of the Indian Ocean from which submarines and surface raiders may now operate, not merely in the Bay of Bengal, but in the Arabian Sea and off the east and south coasts of Africa. From Penang or Moulmein to Mombasa is a considerably shorter journey than from Brest to New York—a voyage which German submarines make with ease, with ample reserves for operations off the American coast. Indeed, enemy submarines to say nothing of the special swift surface raiders which the Japanese are known to possess, based on either of these ports in Malaya or Burma could waylay ships ullen, immensely complicating our naval problems in the Indian Ocean.

Recognition of this unprecedented threat involves both an appreciation of the new risks to shipping hitherto free from the need of convoy in these waters and realisation that

British East Africa must at long last concentrate on maximum production, a policy repeatedly advocated in these pages, but one which the local Governments have been sadly slow to adopt, except in such a special case as that of Northern Rhodesian copper. Were it not fact, it would have seemed impossible, that the authorities—especially those in Kenya, which has immense advantages from the standpoint of favourable conditions for production of the necessary commodities and nearness to the military markets involved—could have been so dilatory when the strain upon British shipping resources was starkly revealed to the whole world, and when our spokesmen said openly that we had armies in the Middle East three-quarters of a million strong, who ought obviously to be provisioned from the nearest available production areas. Pre-war conceptions of commercial economy should have been jettisoned. Unhappily, they have continued to colour the official mind, with the results that shipping has not been taxed to anything like the maximum extent practicable

Malaya's Lesson for East Africa.

Opportunities Cast Away.

Central African Dependencies, in varying degree, could have made an immensely greater contribution in foodstuffs and other requisites if clearly asked to produce to the limit such necessities as wheat, maize, potatoes, tea, sugar, rice, bacon, pork, beef, tinned meats, jam, fruit juices, and many other items essential to the feeding of armies drawn from Europe, Africa, Australia and Asia, to say nothing of various raw materials required directly and indirectly for military purposes.

At the very outbreak of the war we stressed the essential importance of maintaining East African and Rhodesian production of carefully selected crops, and the prudence of retaining key men at their posts to provide reinforcements in the agricultural, local manufacturing, transport and other essential spheres. Not once but repeatedly in the early weeks and months of the war we urged that the fullest economic contribution, of which Eastern Africa was capable, should be assembled in the common cause thereby expressing (as became very clear from my correspondence) the general official point of view. The Colonial Office and the local Governments were, on the contrary, slow to accept such views or to act upon them.

It might indeed be said that action in accordance with the dire needs of the times was not taken until Lord Lloyd became Secretary of State for the Colonies nearly nine months after the outbreak of war; and when his untimely death removed his informed, receptive and dynamic mind, there was a relapse from the realism which he had quickly injected into those under his control and influence. Whereas the first things first it cannot be denied that the vast majority of men in authority in the Colonial Empire have consistently underestimated like our enemies, the great auxiliary of the Colonial Protectorates and other Territories to give unsparingly in whatever directions were best calculated to assist the Mother Country, and no least their own personal responsibilities and opportunities.

What is the result from the Eastern African standpoint? It is that we now scarcely a responsible and officially selected with the services under Colonial Office rule in Central Africa who is not profoundly dissatisfied, looking on this spot to compare what has been done with what with ceaseless official references to generous public contributions through war funds when fundamentals are still not settled after two and a half years of war. Southern Rhodesia was wiser and quicker to call on her essential producers to stand to their tasks. Those agriculturists in East Africa who have not joined the forces have in most cases managed the farms of three or four neighbours in addition to their own and a special tribute must also be paid to the wives and daughters who in so many cases have shouldered the whole burden of continuing operations; their courage and tenacity in very trying circumstances have been beyond praise. It is indeed the contrast with such service that aggravates the disservice of official omissions. If condemnation from the highest sources be required, nothing could be more damning than the words of the Minister of State in the Middle East, Captain Oliver Lyttelton, who recently addressing delegates from the East African Supplies Board there in Cairo for a conference of the Middle East Supply Council, said:

"Your task is to stimulate local production to the utmost degree, to cut down demands for imports in the most drastic manner, to cut out the luxuries of life to use only the essentials of existence to match the situation at home, to reduce the turn-round of our ships so as not to lose one precious hour in port or waste one cubic foot of space. Whenever a ship makes a longer journey than is necessary, whenever a day is lost in unloading or turning round a ship, whenever something we could do without is shipped, whenever silk stockings or beer or gramophones or private motor-cars are delivered to the public, whenever there is waste by troops or the private consumer, whenever full use is not made of the powers of local production, our friends, our families and our children in the United Kingdom suffer, and the hour of victory is postponed. Ships and the productivity of shipping are the very keystone of the whole Imperial structure, the very life of a great maritime and importing power. East Africa can produce maize, wheat, barley, rice, potatoes, groundnuts, copra, sugar, etcetera. All these are wanted in the Middle East group of countries. Produce to the utmost, and save our ships. All you can produce will be taken. It is highly important for the East African territories as an integral part of their contribution to the war effort to produce foodstuffs to the full extent necessary to meet known Imperial re-

With that candid exordium the Secretary of State for the Colonies subsequently expressed agreement, and the Government of Kenya announced that it was asking the Man-Power and Production Sub-Committee

Too Little Too Late. to submit lists of European prisoners whose release from military service would greatly stimulate essential production. Oñcaldom has thus gone more done too little too late, with the consequence that foods which might have been exported from Kenya will now have to be shipped to the Middle East from South Africa and still more distant lands, and thus run the gauntlet of Japanese raiders, instead of making the relatively short passage from Mombasa these necessary traits of the earth must now be carried double or triple the sea-mileage with correspondingly greater risks and unnecessary extension of the strain upon our shipping resources. When will those upon whom lies the responsibility grasp the fact that a total, world-wide, critical war and therefore a conflict in which, as never before, production and transport together constitute two of the master keys to triumph?

Governor Reviews Kenya's War Effort

275 Europeans, 1,800 Asians and 39,000 Africans Serving in East African Forces

BY A SCORCHING review the war effort was recently reviewed by the Legislative Council by the Governor, Sir Henry Moon, who said:

Last June it was estimated that Europeans drawn from all the East African territories serving in the East Africa Force totalled approximately 5,000, of whom Kenya had supplied 2,379. The number of Asians from Kenya and Uganda was about 1,800, and the number of Chinese was 89,000 out of a total of 90,000.

From September 1, 1941, to August 31, 1941, Kenya supplied foodstuffs to the military, including certain purchases in the Middle East, the D.P.A. and Occupied Enemy Territory, to a total of something over £1,500,000, and timber to the value of £283,897 was supplied direct to the military and to military contractors.

Supplies of Many Kinds. We supplied 11,400 pigs for bacon and pork, 165,300 lb. of bacon, 1,175,500 lb. of fresh butter, 288,000 lb. of cheese, 202,000 gallons of fuel oil, 12,700 cattle from European and 17,000 from Native suppliers, 11,140 sheep and lambs from European suppliers, 18,400 sheep and goats from Native suppliers, 10,590,000 lb. of wheat flour, 1,270,000 lb. of flour, 12,500 tons of maize, 1,900,000 lb. of tea, 2,150 tons of potatoes since November 1940, and 2,800 tons of vegetables since January 1941. These figures do not include many of the purchases of Native produce in which Kenya is common with the neighbouring territories supplied its share, for example 3,800,000 lb. of corned beef were supplied, representing an equivalent of some 42,000 head of cattle, most of which in fact came from Tanganyika.

This gives an idea of the extent and variety of the East African War Supplies Board through which the above supplies, in common with those emanating from the other three territories participating in the Board, were provided.

The East African Civil Supplies Board, set up at the beginning of 1941, has enabled the East African governments to establish a common policy of import control and to introduce inter-territorial arrangement for the control of iron and steel and for obtaining essential lead supplies on an East African basis, and its technical committee has already produced some results from their investigation of the possibility of setting up local industries and manufactures for war-time purposes. The common executive of the two boards keeps East Africa closely in touch with the Eastern Supply Council in India and the Middle East Supply Centre in Cairo, where they maintain a representative.

ocurred in July and August 1940, the figures for which cannot at present be revealed, but military traffic carried during the first eight months of 1941 was 270,000 tons, the number of military passengers conveyed in special train 132,000, and the military tonnage handled by the Harbour Department for the same period was 305,000 tons.

In addition, the Railway Administration undertook work on behalf of the military by the value of £188,000 during the first eight months of the year, and to the value of £100,000 over the four months ended August 31, 1941.

In 1940 the Railway remitted £220,000 in charges on military traffic. In 1941, in addition to Harbour rebates, the rebates granted to the military up to November amounted to £430,000. £250,000 has been lent to His Majesty's Government free of interest, while a further £500,000 has been remitted in London in such a way as to bring the greatest assistance to the furtherance of peace, while £70,000 had been invested in British War Bonds to the end of June 1941, and £450,000 has been invested in East African War Bonds.

Personal contributions by Natives to the Kenya Central War Fund and the War Welfare Fund have amounted to about £15,000. In addition, Natives of the Nyanza Province subscribed large sums towards the purchase of eight mobile ambulances and a mobile surgical unit. The Natives of Embu gave £280 towards a mobile ambulance. Local Native Councils have subscribed over £12,000 towards fighter aeroplanes and have invested £26,000 in war bonds.

But perhaps the greatest contribution they have made is in production. There are about 480,000 able-bodied male Natives in the Colony. Over 206,000 are employed by non-Natives, about 12,000 are in daily casual employment, and to these figures must be added the many squatters not included in employment statistics, the 10,000 in the forces. So over half the able-bodied males are working outside the reserves.

Proposed Conscription of Native Labour

The Committee appointed by the Governor of Kenya last November advised whether any measure of legal compulsion is necessary or desirable to ensure a supply of labour for the maintenance of production and essential services has recommended the introduction of legislation empowering the Government to introduce compulsory labour for Africans, telegraphs the Nairobi correspondent of The Times. The Committee, under the chairmanship of the Director of Man-Power, included the chief labour officer, one of the European represen-

The introduction of conscription is proposed by the Committee under the special defence regulations, which provide many safeguards against injustice. For instance, any application for labour will be refused unless the wages, rations, housing and other conditions are considered satisfactory.

The individual African has a right of appeal to the district officer advised by 10 tribal elders, and of a further appeal to a special tribunal. No Native may be conscribed if the result would be to impose family hardship, disturb the economic life of his tribe, or if he has been recently employed. The Committee found that the labour situation had recently deteriorated, and considered that the further recruitment of 22,500 Africans was necessary for present and future essential war production. They were informed that the military authorities also require a further 15,000 Kenya Natives this year.

The most striking feature of the report is the statement that the estimated number of able-bodied male Natives in Kenya is 550,000, of whom 260,000 are already in civil employment. If the Committee's estimate respecting the further civil and military requirements are to be met, this would mean that the total number of able-bodied Africans working outside the Native areas would be 55%, beyond which the Committee are not prepared to go without very careful consideration.

The Nairobi Standard hopes that compulsion will be avoided, and contends that the Natives have not been given "by their Government information services" adequate basis of understanding of the real war situation and their own part therein.

The Government of Kenya has announced that the Secretary of State is considering the report.

Colonel Anderson Wins V.C. Malaya Award for Former Kenya Settler

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL CHARLES GROVES WRIGHT ANDERSON, of the Australian Military Force, who has been awarded the Victoria Cross for gallantry in Malaya, was formerly a well-known settler in Kenya, which he left for New South Wales some time before the outbreak of war. In the last war he served in the K.A.R., and won the Military Cross. He was born in Cape Province, South Africa.

The citation in connexion with Colonel Anderson's award reads:

"During the operations in Malaya from January 18 to 22, Lieutenant-Colonel Anderson, in command of small force, was sent to restore a vital position and to assist a brigade. His force destroyed 20 enemy tanks.

When later cut off, he came under fire and, despite his position from air and ground forces, and forced his way through the enemy lines to a depth of 15 miles. He personally led an attack with great gallantry on the enemy, who were holding a bridge, and succeeded in destroying four guns. Lieutenant-Colonel Anderson, through all this fighting, protected his wounded, and refused to leave them."

He obtained news by wireless of the enemy position and attempted to find his way back through eight miles of enemy occupied country. This proved to be impossible, and the two men were holding, too, a strong position for any attempt to be made to relieve him. Lieutenant-Colonel Anderson was ordered to destroy his equipment and make his way back as best he could round the enemy's position.

Throughout the fighting, which lasted for four days, he set a magnificent example of brave leadership, determined fighting, outstanding courage and thoroughness.

Casualties and Appointments

S.N.Q. Red Sea Force Promoted

Commander F. C. M. Stanford, D.S.C., R.N., the master of H.M.S. "MABELLE," was among those who lost their lives when that destroyer was sunk by enemy action.

The death in Eritrea is announced of Captain G. B. Robinson, formerly of the Sudan Irrigation Department.

Mr. Michael J. Blighenough, Southern Rhodesian Armoured Car Regiment, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Blighenough, of Cambridge Square, Hyde Park, London, W. 2, died of typhus while on active service in East Africa.

Flying Officer John Pringle Hood, Rhodesian, serving with the Royal Air Force, whom we reported missing some time ago, is now known to be a prisoner of war and unimpaired.

Rear-Admiral R. H. C. Halifax, C.B., who at the beginning of last year was appointed Senior Naval Officer, Red Sea Force, has been promoted to vice-admiral.

Lieut. A. R. Ingle, S.A.A.F., who has been awarded the D.F.C., is stated to have shown great keenness and devotion to duty at all times. During a raid on Yavello, in southern Abyssinia, he was forced to land in the desert, and for 10 days endured great privation before regaining the British lines.

Commanded S.A.A.F. in Ethiopia

A portrait of Brigadier Hector Daniel, who commanded the South African Air Force during the Abyssinian campaign, is among art exhibits of the war now on tour in the Union of South Africa. The portrait is the work of Captain Neville Lewis.

General Sir Herbert Gough, who commanded the British Army in the last war, and has close East African connexions, has resigned his appointment as colonel and zone commander of the Home Guard under the age limit. General Gough is 74.

Colonel C. R. S. Pirman has become Director of Intelligence and Security in Uganda.

Mr. M. J. Macoun, Assistant Superintendent of Police, has been appointed Director of Intelligence and Security in Tanganyika Territory.

Major W. J. Roper is now Commissioner for Italian Nationals and officer in charge of refugee camps in Nyasaland, in addition to his duties as commandant of the internment camp at Mapang'a.

Mr. M. J. Cook, Superintendent of Education in Tanganyika Territory, has been seconded to the Censorship Department.

The youngest son of Sir Herbert Stanley, until recently Governor of Southern Rhodesia, and Lady Stanley, is reported to be leaving England shortly to join the army.

Colonel M. Mandella, the loss of which was reported last week, was launched in 1916 by Miss D. G. Scott, and of the High Commission in London, Miss Southern Rhodesia.

The French liner MARITIME JOINT, which escaped from Manila with a crew of 18 officers and men, most of whom at once joined the Free French cause, is a 12,000-ton vessel owned by the Messageries Maritimes, and well-known to East Africans in pre-war days.

Northern Rhodesia created last week a Defence Force Reserve, which is to be composed of members of the tribes whose full employment prevents them from doing full training; those who are under 18 years of age, and those with three years' service of more.

Italian property left in Abyssinia was last week es-

Terms of Military Convention Between Great Britain and Ethiopia

THE MILITARY CONVENTION signed at Addis

Ababa on June 22, between the British Government and the Emperor of Ethiopia is expressly stated to have been concluded "to provide for certain matters relating to mutual assistance as allies in the struggle against the common enemy."

ARTICLE 1 provides—

(a) The Government of the United Kingdom will provide, at their own cost, a Military Mission for the purpose of raising, organizing and training the Ethiopian Army. The duties and privileges of the Military Mission shall be the subject of instruction from the G.O.C.-in-C. British forces in East Africa to the head of the Military Mission, which shall be agreed upon between His Majesty the Emperor and the G.O.C.-in-C.

(b) The Military Mission will be remained by Ethiopia until the Emperor no longer requires its services or until the British forces in Ethiopia are withdrawn, whichever is the earlier. When the Government of the United Kingdom ceases to provide the Military Mission at their own cost, they will use their best endeavours to assist the Emperor to obtain suitable officers to take the place of any members of the original Mission who do not remain in Ethiopia.

(c) The Ethiopian Army shall be paid and supplied so far as possible from booty taken from the Italian forces in the course of the campaign in Ethiopia.

ARTICLE 3 specifies that British military administration shall be maintained so long as necessary over "a continuous belt of Ethiopian territory 25 miles wide contiguous to the frontier of French Somaliland running from the frontier of Eritrea to the Franco-Ethiopian Railway" a line of south-west along the railway to the bridge of Gidessa on the south-east, excluding Gidessa, to the north-eastern extremity of the Garans Mountains and along the west of the ridge of these mountains to their intersection with the frontier of the former Italian colony of Somalia, then along the frontier to its junction with British Somaliland, except over "all land" within Ethiopia occupied by the Franco-Ethiopian Railway and its appendages.

ARTICLE 4 permits the U.K. to maintain a police force under command of the G.O.C.-in-C. East Africa specifically provided for the use of assistance in Addis Ababa until the police force be replaced by the Emperor's competent force, in which article 2 and 3 of the G.O.C.-in-C. give access to the Emperor and procedure immediately after the expiry of the period.

Obligation of British Military Rule

ARTICLE 5 provides that shall not be taken territory which was included in Italian Somaliland shall remain for the duration of the convention under the British Military Administration.

ARTICLE 6 gives the British Government the right to keep in Ethiopia what military forces it thinks necessary.

ARTICLE 7 makes British Somaliland inviolable and subject to exclusive British control.

ARTICLE 8 grants freedom of movement between cantonments, billeting and camping rights similar to those existing in the U.K., power to generate light and power, the use of roads and waterways without charge, the right to establish military postal services, and diplomatic immunity for colonial correspondence of the British forces.

ARTICLE 9 empowers the G.O.C.-in-C. to operate the Franco-Ethiopian Railway, the high power telegraph line between Addis Ababa and other stations, and to use all telegraph and telephone installations.

ARTICLE 10 recognises the right of the British forces to retain the booty captured by them in Ethiopia, except that used for fitting up the Ethiopian Army.

ARTICLE 11 states—

(a) In view of the fact that the speed and range of modern aircraft necessitate the use of wide areas, the Emperor will give permission to the British air forces and the air forces of the Allies to fly in Ethiopia wherever they consider it necessary.

(b) In view of the fact that the safety of flying to deposit landing grounds on a large number of places where aircraft can alight, the Emperor will secure the constant maintenance and availability of suitable landing grounds in Ethiopian territory. The Emperor will accede to, and request from, the appropriate British authority for the construction, at the cost of the Government of the United Kingdom, of such additional landing grounds or the extension of existing landing grounds as experience may show to be necessary.

ARTICLE 12 provides—

(a) So far as his master provides, no member of the British forces referred to in paragraph (a) (f) and (g) of Article 1 shall be subject to the criminal jurisdiction of the Courts of any criminal offence committed in any of the areas referred to in Article 3.

(b) No member of the British forces shall be subject to the civil jurisdiction of the Courts of Ethiopia in respect of any matter arising out of his official duties. If any civil proceeding is instituted against a member of the British forces before any Ethiopian Court, information of the proceeding shall forthwith be given to the Diplomatic Representative of His Majesty the King, and no further steps shall be taken in such proceedings unless 10 days have elapsed from the date of notification. This period shall be extended for a further term of 10 days if the Diplomatic Representative of His Majesty has not made arrangements in writing to the Court that it has not been possible to continue the necessary investigations in the above time.

(c) No member of the British forces shall be committed to prison in default of satisfaction of any judgment or order of any Ethiopian Court or tribunal until the sanction in writing of the appropriate British authority has been obtained.

ARTICLE 13 stipulates that if Joint Claims Commission shall in case need deal with claims for damage or injury by the British forces.

ARTICLE 14 engages Ethiopia to hand over to the British authorities any member of the British forces known to have committed an offence by force, intercept with the Ethiopian authorities.

ARTICLE 16 declares that British military personnel may be arrested by Ethiopian authorities only in the circumstances mentioned in the foregoing paragraph or in case of desertion or absence without leave.

ARTICLE 22 states inter alia—

(a) Members of the British forces who take possession of Ethiopian land or real property in Ethiopia shall pay the taxes, registration and transfer fees as do Ethiopian subjects in respect of such property and its produce.

(b) Members of the British forces shall pay any taxes or registration fees for the time being in force for any privately-owned vehicles used on any public road in Ethiopia which are paid by Ethiopian subjects.

(c) The British Forces, the Expeditionary Force, Institutes and all other civilian contingent of the British forces shall pay at most favourable rates for all services required by departments of the Ethiopian Government or any municipality or local authority.

(d) Save as above provided, British Exports and re-exports from the British forces and the individual members thereof shall be immune from all direct taxation import and export duties and all other rates of similar charges, unless there shall be an agreement entered into between the Government of the United Kingdom and His Imperial Majesty to the contrary in regard to any particular tax or charge.

ARTICLE 23 stipulates that the Emperor shall constitute in due course the same period as the Anglo-Ethiopian Agreement, which is to be replaced by a treaty proposed by Ethiopia, with the proviso that if it is not so replaced within two years, either party may thereafter terminate it by giving three months' notice.

Lords Debate Ethiopia Treaty

IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS DEBATE, with following publication of the terms of the Anglo-Ethiopian Agreement, Lord Noel-Buxton expressed regret that the treaty had not "some international aspects attached to it, because surely our main duty was to the future order of Africa."

International stability is the greatest interest of all, and we must not prejudice the future of Africa by what we do now. We must not prejudice the settlement which affects us all. The British Government may want to aid. I am very glad the Agreement indicates the intention of an Imperial policy. That is very timely, because in South and East Africa there has been a desire of obtaining some phrases as a useful addition to the Empire. The Agreement makes it clear that we are not asking for annexation. The combination of specially-minted words, some international element, and it would be well if we made it say, for many of these objects, to be now added.

More than half the population of Abyssinia consisted of conquered tribes. Abyssinian slavery was supported by tradition, by religious beliefs and prominently by the Church. Lord Edward said that that church was the greatest opponent of the abolition of slavery. Vast numbers of slaves fell at their position and rights were bound up with it. His Excellency had shown himself active towards reform, but so were some of his predecessors. Theodore abolished slavery, but Menelik, who followed, greatly extended it.

The present Emperor had among Abyssinians, quite unique personality, but he needed real help, and it would not be enough that his advisers should have no more power than

Mrs Churchill's speech. The new Constitution of India may have been laid down by Mr. Churchill. Opening the three-day debate in the House of Commons, he said, in effect: "I am responsible for everything I am therefore responsible for everything that goes wrong. Things are going very seriously wrong. Therefore, I demand your confidence." On Sunday night he laid down the doctrine that it was the duty of Parliament and the Press to maintain the Government, with the implication that any weakening of his own position would be a weakening of our cause. These declarations are full of danger and only do harm to Mr. Churchill. Belief in their own "indispensability" has been held by many men, and in Britain it has generally met with no response. The cause we are fighting for is greater than any man. Mr. Churchill may feel that this is a war between himself and Hitler, but every man and woman in the land also feels that Hitler is a personal antagonist. This is a people's war—the war of free democracy against Hitler's brutal tyranny and aggression. What are we asking for that has caused so much resentment? First that a War Cabinet should be formed of five or six men without Departmental duties and that this Cabinet should have full responsibility for the conduct of the war and power to take all decisions. Secondly, that men who have shown themselves unfit for their positions should be removed irrespective of party influence or personal friendships. The only loyalty is to the State, and no other considerations should count. Mr. Churchill has qualities which should not be lost to the country. If he leaves it will be to him a fruitless loss. We admire his magnificent courage and fortitude. Now he has an opportunity to show great wisdom.

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE SHAKEN

Public confidence has been gravely shaken through the escape of the SCHARNHORST, GNEISENAU, and ADMIRAL SPOERER. Coming as it does on the heels of a reverse in Africa and of plain catastrophe in the Far East, we are compelled once again to ask: Is all well with the conduct of the war? Have we not been hypnotised by Mr. Churchill's personality, by the force of his rhetoric, to hold on the fence of Commons, into acquiescence in an inefficient system of war direction? Have we not been drugged by phrases, by reiterated assurances, into a frame of mind in which we have lost our grasp of

Background to the #### AIR POWER SELL THE CRY

"There is no more tragic tale in military history than that of Singapore." Here was a citadel planned to be a key of the world, its fortifications were elaborated through years at enormous expense. Japanese military attack by road and rail on a continental scale never was foreseen. Sober fairness must allow that the enemy's seizure of Indo-China and Siam as bases of invasion through Malaya was not foreseeable in time. Worse still, the vital reliance on the gathering support of British and American sea-power was engulfed almost in a moment when Pearl Harbour was ravaged on one side, the PRINCE OF WALES and REPUTATION destroyed, on the other. But the moral still holds. Our naval calamity could have been prevented by a powerful air-protection of Singapore! From that date before the outbreak, when Japan's ominous alliance with the Axis was already known, strong over-head defence of our only great base in Asiatic waters ought to have been established—an indispensable in itself and no less vital to our naval and military purpose. It may be answered that sufficient first-class aerial material was not available for the eastern hemisphere. When then, however, rationally expectant Singapore had the opportunity that has happened and is happening? Without adequate air-power you could not hold the Isle of Wight, much less the island of Singapore.

Mr. J. F. Garvin.

How Singapore Was Won

At a cost of $20 million we had established a naval base on the landward side of the island of Singapore, a stone's throw from the mainland of Malaya. It was our only base in the Far East for retaining capital ships. Unless we were to allow it away, as in the event we were compelled to occupy and defend enough of the island to prevent the base from being shelled from the sides. More, we needed a sufficient area for navigable aerodromes. It seems clear that neither of the needs was ever faced. Yet the whole object of the base was to be a base against the Japanese, and once Japan had occupied Indo-China and seized Siam with slices of Indo-Chinese territory it became obvious that she would attack it from the land side. One hundred Hurricanes, had they been posted in Malaya before the start, would probably have saved the Colony. Can anyone suppose that an impossible demand?

TOTAL WAR WANTS TOTAL EFFORT

We are not fighting the war on the home front with whole-hearted determination and furious energy. Our men at sea, our troops ashore, our airmen are doing their duty, but they are inadequately equipped. The higher direction of the war has been muddled. In our munition factories many thousands of men and women are working hard. Many management are thinking solely of the war effort. But there is also, as Sir Stafford Cripps put it, a sense of a lack of urgency in many parts of our war effort. There is avoidable absenteeism, and there are managers who are thinking in terms of post-war advantages. There is too much attempt to do business and have pleasure as usual. One cannot fight total war except by making a total war effort; the Russians have proved that. We shall begin to win this war when every day and every night the great mass of our people say to themselves with anxious inquiry: "Have I this day done everything I could in every way open to me to slave and toil for the war effort? Have I produced as much as I could? Have I wasted anything? Have I felt I was fighting the war?" But in order that this spirit may rush like an electric current through the bodies and souls of our people there must be leadership. In our deficiency this leadership must come from the Prime Minister. At this critical moment we have not got a PRIME Minister. That office has been eclipsed by our energetic and pugnacious Minister of Defence—Commander King-Hall, ACP.

Ships Vital. Ships for victory is not only a question of tonnage, but of speed in transport. In the case of an emergency such as the sudden onset of the Japanese on Malaya, speed is the decisive factor in reinforcement, and may well spell the difference between victory and defeat. The failure to recognise this simple fact and to take the necessary steps to build our slow pre-war cargo ships, vessels of good speed is responsible for most of our present difficulties. Whether in the Battle of the Atlantic, the defence of a widely dispersed Empire, or the conduct of war at a speed of a 12,000 mile supply route. The Japanese successes are due to the basic reason of fast, 20-knot ships.

PERSONALIA

Mr. R. O. Wilkin is now an Acting Senior Medical Officer in Tanganyika Territory.

Mr. M. Mitchell-Higgs is now District Commissioner for Mutuluma, Northern Rhodesia.

A daughter has been born in Southern Rhodesia, the wife of Pilot Officer J. E. Brown, R.A.F.

Superintendent J. McGregor of the Uganda Police has been on leave in South Africa prior to retirement.

A son has been born in Nairobi to the wife of Captain F. R. A. Bray, 2nd Light Infantry, attached to the K.A.R.

Mrs. D. B. Suthers, appointed Chief Inspector of Schools in Southern Rhodesia, was until recently head master of Durban Technical College.

The Rev. F. Naylor is now priest-in-charge at St. George's Church, Boma, in the room of the Rev. J. D. B. Hartshorn, who is returning to England.

Sir George Johnson has been re-elected President of the Bulawayo Branch of the Navy League. Lady Johnson is a member of the Women's Committee.

Sir Ord Hatley was 80 on Sunday, and Sir Halford Ginder, the only survivor of the first party of Europeans to make the ascent of Mount Kenya, celebrated his 81st birthday on the same date.

Lieut.-Colonel E. G. Fish, Commissioner of Police and Prisons, Captains W. Manning, R. H. Bustard, and A. H. M. Dryden, Superintendents, and Lieut. D. S. Le Poerdevre, European Inspector of Police, have been appointed Public Prosecutors under Zanzibar's new Criminal Procedure Decree.

Mrs. A. J. M. Cameron

His many East African friends will deeply sympathise with Mr. A. J. M. Cameron, a director of the Uganda Company, Ltd., on the death of his wife in Wimbledon last week. In July last Mrs. Cameron was knocked down by a girl cyclist who failed to stop. The fall resulted in a fractured femur, but the break limited well and a good recovery was expected. In recent weeks, however, it became evident that she was suffering from delayed shock to which her passing is attributed. Mr. and Mrs. Cameron had been married for 40 years.

Captain Guy Repton

The sudden death from pneumonia of Captain Guy Repton will come as a shock to his many friends in this country and in Kenya. Going to East Africa shortly after the last war, he bought Major Grant's farm at Taka, where he entered thoroughly into the sporting and other activities of the district, being at one time Chairman of the District Association. Being in England at the outbreak of this war, he joined the Royal Artillery. The Irish Guards, becoming an instructor at Kimberley. With Mrs. Repton, who joined the local forces there will be widespread sympathy.

Mr. G. V. Cameron

We greatly regret to report that Mr. G. V. Cameron, only son of Sir Donald and Mrs. Cameron and Legal Secretary to the Government of Malta, is now presumed to have lost his life as the result of an airship accident at sea last May. Mr. Cameron, who was 32 years of age, was educated at Magdalen and Brasenose Colleges, Oxford, where he gained a first in jurisprudence. After practising law in London and Liverpool, he became Attorney-General of Saint Lucia in 1934, Legal Adviser to the Government of Aden in 1937, and Legal Secretary in Malta in 1940. He had already shown considerable ability. Mr. Cameron died sometime in Tanganyika while his father was serving in that colony.

Lord Carnaby Sent to Prison

Finance Offences, Magistrate's Structures

LOD CARNABY, the well known Kenya settler, aged 50, who in 1921 dropped his title and by deed poll changed his name to John Evans Carnaby, was sentenced in Nairobi last week to two years' imprisonment with hard labour on three charges of offences against the Defence Finance Regulations. Notice of appeal was given, but the magistrate refused bail.

The charges related to the sale of a number of American aircraft shares (Lockheed Vega and United Aircraft), without the permission of the Governor, failure to make a return giving particulars of his ownership of other American aircraft shares, and failure to assign to the Governor the right to receive in America payment of £125,000 dollars (approximately $11,787) leaving the balance at a New York bank.

The defence was that the accused was a citizen of Eire and not domiciled in Kenya, and that he therefore considered himself unaffected by Kenya war legislation.

The magistrate, Mr. Wyn Harris (the Everest climber), said in passing sentence: "By your deliberate action the British Government has been deprived of the sum of £11,787 which would have been used to buy arms in the United States at a time when they were badly needed."

You claim to be a citizen of Eire and unaffected by Kenya war legislation. But you are also a British Empire subject, and for more than 20 years you have enjoyed security and residence in this Colony.

In time of trouble you dissociated yourself from the Empire which offered you a home, and broke the law designed to put arms into the hands of her defenders. Any fine would be wholly inadequate to meet the case."

Some years ago Mr. Carnaby, who owns a coffee plantation, took part in many air races. His present and third wife was formerly Miss Julie Weir-Mostly; they married in London in 1936, two years after the death in an air crash in Nairobi of his former wife, who was born in Kenya.

Mr. G. Beresford Stooke

Now Chief Secretary of N. Rhodesia

MR. GEORGE BERESFORD STOKE, Chief Secretary and Financial Secretary of Zanzibar since 1940, has been appointed Chief Secretary of Northern Rhodesia in succession to Mr. W. M. Logan who goes as Governor to the Seychelles.

After serving with the Royal Navy throughout the war, Mr. Stooke was appointed to the Government service of Sarawak in 1932. Five years later he was appointed to the Administrative Service, became a chief officer in 1937, and in 1939 Assistant Treasurer of Mauritius. Three years afterwards he returned to Kenya as Deputy Treasurer and became Deputy Secretary in 1938.

He won golden opinions in Kenya, not least from non-official political and commercial leaders.

Lords Debate Ethiopia Treaty

it carried out... They should venture to go to the right to travel about Abyssinia and to report to me through Minister upon whose personal force success would largely depend.

VISCOUNT EGYPT OF CARTHAGE disagreed with Lord Noel-Buxton's contention that the Italian was in some degree responsible for the government of Ethiopia, having undertaken to make Abyssinia independent, we could not constrain her government. Slavery was certainly a great scandal, and when the Emperor was re-established he could take representation. Meantime we should strengthen his authority so that he would have maximum power to fulfil his wishes and our regard to slavery?

It was quite right that enemy property should be preserved by the Emperor according to international law, but why was it a matter of British interest to insist upon it?

Lord WENGEWOOD, who felt that Lord Noel-Buxton had over-stressed the slavery side of the Ethiopian question, asserted that domestic slavery was not yet extinct in the British Empire, and that the peasant in Abyssinia was not much worse off than the Native peasant in South Africa or Kenya. He regarded the Agreement as a victory for the pro-Italian Roman Catholic clique in Cairo, which had always been against Haile Selassie. A hard done-by best to restrain his return to Abyssinia.

This is a document which exactly carries out, not the views of the Foreign Office which made the famous declaration of 1910, but the views of the clique in Cairo who have persuaded the Foreign Office to force through the Emperor a hand almost with a colossal bribe in Agreement which saves for the Italians all their property rights, perhaps not all their privileges, but their investments in that country, all the concessions that were made by the Italians during the Italian occupation. This is a fatal blunder.

We have been discussing in another place (from) Wedgewood was making his first speech on the elevation to the House of Lords whether the Italian civilian prisoners in Abyssinia were to be evacuated or not. We were always told by the Foreign Office that they were to be evacuated to Italy by Italian ships. Nobodys who knew Mussolini would dream for a moment that he would ever evacuate one of them from Abyssinia. Naturally he wants them all there at the end of the war to stake out a claim if not for Abyssinia, at least for Eritrea. Thus for the last six months the British taxpayer has been keeping these people... Under this Agreement they stay in Abyssinia, and supported by the British taxpayer, they will stay there when the war ends, automatically forming a civilised Italian community—I suppose you call Italian civilised! I find now that after the war we might have an international adviser in Abyssinia, but we might have Americans helping the Emperor in his administration. As I see it now, when we do step out we shall leave the Indians with all their bad traditions to take our place, as the whites of Abyssinia in the years to come.

Lord Hailey's Comments

Lord Hailey said that the Abyssinian Empire consisted not only of the old accustomed districts under the Emperor but of a very large number of tributary provinces, and in his general, and that in a form of dominion and servitude, certainly greater than could be found anywhere else in Africa.

South Africans, he said, had had a very considerable part in negotiating the Agreements for the Emperor, were very reluctant to think that purely Native rule should be re-established over a number of provinces of European colonisation, and that this long and narrow belt of tributary countries, stretching from the Mediterranean which runs through Africa. If this resulted in handing back Abyssinia to the Emperor, that part of Africa would continue in any form of despised rule, there would undoubtedly be many people throughout that area who would say that they themselves had been a stimulate block in the way of progress. The Agreement with Abyssinia, in the position as what used to be called a "temporarily occupied State," had been made without any consultation with the advice tendered to the Emperor as accepted by him.

The subsidy was inadequate, particularly in the vanishing form in which it was and Uganda already spent £1 million per year. Uganda at that time had less than £1 million, and the Sudan, in general, could not be too large to receive. At least since £1 million, of these resources, were required by the Emperor to develop the country, and carrying on modern lines. Italian scientific investigation had proved that Abyssinia's resources were very small. Where was the income to come from for development and adequate administration?

The Abyssinians, among whom Haile Selassie having murdered so many of their young and educated men, had not a single leader capable of looking after their roads, electrical installations, whom we sent as advisers. He (Lord Hailey), knowing some of the officers already working there, and the class of officer we took send from the Sudan and the Colonies, had every confidence that they would fulfil their mission. First it must be realised that in the meantime of restoration we were running grave hazards of a continuation of difficulties and indiscipline in Abyssinia which might rebound to our discredit.

Lord Hailey concluded—

I do not wish to argue the case for international management in regard to Colonial possessions, but I hope that some of your lordships may bring this matter forward, where we can discuss it on its own merits. Some of us have very strong feelings on the subject, and we have an opportunity of carrying this whole matter out in accordance with our feelings.

Let me say that the art of managing Colonies, the practice of Colonization, is not just merely a question of pure mathematics or of philosophy. It is a question of actual experience; it is an art that has to be acquired in itself, and I am not one of those who believe that we should cut ourselves off from our responsibilities any the less. If we brought into a share of them others whose methods of colonization and of administration those of us do not believe to be any better than our own.

Lord TARINGDON hoped that such a rectification of the Sudan-Ethiopian frontier would be possible, and that all Somalis would be united in one organic state.

Reply of Dominions Secretary

MICHAEL CRABBE, SECRETARY FOR DOMINIONS, replied to the debate, claimed that the Agreement might be termed one of the turning-points in modern history. It was a perfectly free Agreement, and no improper pressure had been put upon the Emperor.

Advisers were being recommended to the Emperor, but they would be his servants, not ours, and it was for him to decide whether their advice should be taken or not. It was at present contemplated that they be British, but there was nothing to prevent the Amharic Government from recommending nationalists in any other country. The idea behind the tapering system of financial aid was to diminish systematically the dependence of the Emperor upon Great Britain. The draft proclamation regarding the administration of justice was the work of a joint committee of the British and Ethiopian jurists.

As to slaves, the Emperor had declared his intention to issue a decree forthwith abolishing it. The boundaries of the country were to be the same as before the Abyssinian war. As regards private rights, the reason for the insertion of Article 11 of the Agreement was that during the campaign and the formation of Italian civilisation much private property came into the custody of the Italo-Sardinian troops, and that we were answerable for this at the peace settlement. We were handing over our responsibility to the Emperor, and had no doubt that he would act as we should have done.

The agreement in Article 11 was very general, and the meaning of it was wrong. Lord Eustace did not think the Emperor was in a position at present to give extended military help in the war, but when the Military Mission had built up a large, efficient, modern army the British Government would be glad to consider any help His Majesty might offer.

Trade with Ethiopia

The Anglo-Ethiopian Agreement having been signed, it is expected that a Central Bank for Ethiopia will shortly be established in Addis Ababa. Mr. C. S. G. Miller, who was head of the Bank of Ethiopia before the Italian conquest six years ago, is known to be on his way to Abyssinia on a private visit, but it is believed in financial circles in London that he has been asked to accept control of the new bank of issue.

The United Chartered Bank, the Corporation established by the British Government in 1917 to stimulate British trade with the Balkans, is shortly expected to extend its operations to Ethiopia. Its main sphere of activity is now the Middle East, and it has already opened branches in Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Iraq, Persia, India, and Ceylon, and has representatives in Kharjatoum, Asmara and Nairobi. The Corporation plays an important part in helping countries within the Middle East to manage to satisfy their import needs with the least possible strain upon British shipping resources.

Questions in Parliament

Major Jones asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether arrangements had been made by the Kenya Government to construct the new North Road through Central Africa, with an improved all-weather road from the port of Mombasa. He also asked whether he would arrange with the War Office to utilise the services of prisoners of war to assist in carrying out this much needed work?

Mr. George Hellyer. A road re-construction programme has been drawn up by the Central Roads and Traffic Board in Kenya, and work is proceeding as fast as staff and fuel permit. Priority is being given to those roads which have been most seriously damaged by military traffic before and during the East African campaign, and my noble friend has no doubt that the claims of the road to Mombasa have come under review by the Board. Wherever practicable prisoners of war are being employed for the road programme, for which provision of over £25,000 has been made by the Kenya Government in 1931 and 1932.

Labour on the Copperbelt

Miss Lucy Jones asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies what progress had been made in the measures in implementing the recommendations of the Copperbelt Disturbance Inquiry in Northern Rhodesia; whether further attention had been given to breaking down the colour bar and controlling its extension to the Copperbelt; and whether the Government had reached a policy in respect of permanent African urban settlement in the Copperbelt.

Mr. Harold Macmillan replied that the recommendations in respect of wages and conditions of service had been put into effect. The labour offices, of whom there were now two on the spot, were watching the position in regard to efficiency awards, and the Governor, who was satisfied that the system was operating fairly, had stated that compound managers had resources to make deductions from the cost of living bonus.

Domestic science classes for African women had been in operation for more than two years by the United Missions on the Copperbelt, and excellent work had been done in teaching cooking, knitting, handicrafts and hygiene. Similar classes were now being held in the Mindolo compound, near Nkata. A third woman welfare officer was being sent out by the London Committee of the United Missions. The management of all the copper mines had undertaken to do everything possible to encourage the making of flower gardens, and the Rhodesia Corporation now gave prizes for the best kept gardens in every compound block, the whole question being left in their hands by the Colonial Commissioner's concession with the Agricultural Department. The Governor was confident that the man-could be relied upon to do all in their power to reduce the number of slave trees in the compounds.

The elder system had now been accepted by almost all the miners at Nkana and Nchanga being assisted by boss boys. The new arrangement provided for collaboration with the labour offices and district commissioners. Arrangements had to be made for the elders (now called tribal representatives) and the bosses boys to nominate members from among their numbers to sit on the Native Urban councils.

Legislation for improved rates of workmen's compensation had been enacted, and legislative steps had also been made for the admission of payments of kind in the assessment of workmen's earnings for compensation purposes.

Stabilisation was under review, and the Governor was considering the possibility of having a complete survey of the position made. This was a time of exceptional activity on the Copperbelt, however, rendering difficult the adoption of a detailed policy. Every encouragement was now given to workers to bring their wives with them to the mines.

The question of the extension of opportunities to Africans was receiving attention. The Governor of Northern Rhodesia had reported that during his recent tour of the Copperbelt he was impressed by the measures being taken for providing recreational facilities for Africans and the attention devoted to housing.

Power Securities Report

Power Securities Corporation Ltd., reports for the year ended December '31 last the gross result amounted to £1,166,690, or £52,035 after meeting all expenses, including income tax. The balance brought forward was £18,704, making a total of £70,735, and £16,500 was retained to meet the preference dividend of 7%. Payment of an ordinary dividend of 6% less tax will require £24,000, leaving £29,735 to be carried forward. The directors are of the opinion that the value of investments and loan, including those in subsidiary companies, is in the aggregate in excess of the balance sheet figure of £1,556,250.

Profound regret is expressed by the board on the death in September last of Mr. George Balhousie, Chairman of the Corporation and of its principal subsidiary, Ballhousie Beatty & Co. Ltd., since they began business. Mr. William Shearer has been elected Chairman of the board. Mr. A. M. MacTaggart, who was appointed to fill the vacancy on the directors' committee before his re-election, as do Mr. Ian C. Murray and Mr. J. S. Selley, appointed associate directors. Lieutenant Sir John Greenly, who also retired, is standing for election at the annual meeting to be held in London on May next.

COMPANY MEETING.

Kavirondo Gold MinesMr. A. T. J. Fraser's Address.*

THE ANNUAL ORDINARY GENERAL MEETING OF KAVIROND GOLD MINES LIMITED was held in London on February 12.

THE HON. A. T. J. FRASER, D.S.O., the Chairman, said in the course of his address:

"A great loss has been sustained by our consulting engineers and managers, Messrs. John Taylor & Sons, in the death of their senior partner, Mr. Kenneth B. Taylor. He was alternate director of the De Beaufort and we very much miss his counsel. This unhappy event was followed by the destruction through enemy action of the company's offices at 50 Queen Street Place, where many records were lost. We how carry on the business from 5 Gracechurch Street, London E.C. 4."

For the year to June 30, 1941, the yield of gold was 6,700 oz., or 85 oz. more than the output of the previous year. The net proceeds from bullion sales amounted to £8,248, but this was in part offset by a charge of £3,200 for 5% royalty paid to the Government of Kenya. Expenditure in Kenya and Uganda was £6,000 less than in the previous year, and the balance of the revenue account was a profit of £7,308, compared with a loss of £1,114 for 1939-40. After deducting this profit with income tax on bank interest and depreciation, there is a net credit for the year of £2,235.

Cash Resources of £24,765

The cash resources on June 30 were £24,765, an increase of £3,320 during the year, whilst the value of stores and materials on the mine and in transit was £10,133.

The new royalty rate, which is to date from January 1941, at the rate of 1% of the value of gold mining, is to be computed after deducting certain allowances for capital expenditure and for development costs incurred before production begins. This rate is to be calculated for each calendar year, and an account will therefore have to be prepared for 1941 to ascertain the company's liability. Against such liability, if any, will be set the 5% royalty on gold produced, which will have been paid. It does not appear that there will be a liability on this company for the new tax for 1941, and we may look forward to a refund of £2,235.

The 6,700 oz. of gold recovered were obtained by milling 16,145 tons. This reduction of 15,168 tons milled was due to alterations in the Kakamega ore treatment plant to enable much more rigorous sorting of barren rock before milling. The new plant at Kakamega has also reduced the cost of power production.

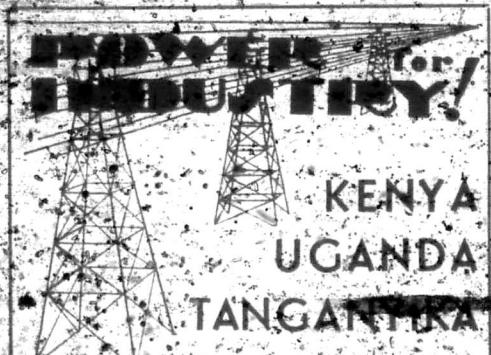

In consequence of the increased sorting of waste, the grade of ore milled at Kakamega is now 0.9 dwi gold per ton. The value of mineral in the ore was reduced to 12 oz. per ton. In Uganda the grade milled was 1.0 dwi, compared with 0.65 dwi for the previous year. At Kakamega the gold-bearing veins are very narrow, only from one to six inches wide, though they carry sufficient gold to make mining a workable proposition. A large amount of barren rock has to be broken, and development results may fluctuate sharply with any local increase of mining activity, owing to the width of the gold-bearing veins.

This company owns over properties in Kakamega with a large number of veins, both narrow and broad, and adopted the policy of exploring them to greater depth. Another company in the district has since proved that the gold-bearing veins hold down to over 1,000 ft. with good values. On our present exploratory work, in Kakamega, District No. 10, the results have been rather disappointing, results being the shallow workings at Koia Mullini, the most important, a new main shaft was sunk, and the second and third levels gave satisfactory results, but at the fourth level the vein was sparser and narrower, though this may be merely local. We decided to sink the vertical shaft to the fifth level and explore the ledge at that depth. Adequate power to deal with frequent bushings of water after heavy rain has been a constant difficulty, and a new oil engine unit was installed. Nevertheless, many difficulties increased by shortage of staff and labour, were encountered with pumping and timbering below the fifth level, and progress has been slow. Prospects depend largely upon the results of the fifth level development.

At Kakamega South we have to sink to another level below 1,100 ft. At Turnball West a new power unit was provided, the second level was driven in good ore, and sinking of the shaft was resumed. At Chausu sloping proceeded with profitable results, but new development was retarded by shortage of labour, and with work now having reached the third level, more power facilities are required. Selection for such expenditure must await the results of driving the Koia Mullini fifth level.

The company is faced with the difficult problem that the properties contain small scattered veins, each requiring its own shaft and pumping installation, and though the veins are rich, the tonnage of ore is small. The results of the year show that even on this small tonnage a profit can be made provided new development continues to yield satisfactory results. In July, August and September, 1941, we made profits, but during October, November and December the gold return was insufficient to meet all expenditure, and we expect that the first three months of 1942 will also show losses. Thereafter, if the Koia Mullini fifth level yields good results, the position should show improvement, and our ore reserves could then be gradually built up. The results of the next few months will decisively influence our policy.

cheap power is available in many areas, whether erecting a factory or installing power appliances. Refer your problems to one of the Company's offices. Special rates are available to large consumers. Very favourable terms can be secured to small growers in the large area.

LATEST MINING NEWS

Company Progress Reports

Wankie Colliery.—January coal sales amounted to 105,197 tons, and coke sales to 8,400 tons.

Tait Goldfields, Ltd.—During January 4,410 tons were milled at an estimated profit of £1,382.

Golds and Phoenix.—In January 1,600 tons were treated for a yield of 3,705 oz. fine gold and a profit of £15,388.

Korleby Reef.—January milling, 5,800 tons, accumulated since treated, 24,400 tons. Output 573 oz. fine gold £620.

Rosterman.—1,400 tons of ore were milled during January, produced 1,771 oz. gold of an estimated value of £14,876, leaving a surplus of £5,366 after meeting all mining expenditure and development costs. No capital expenditure was incurred during January.

Gabat Gold.—Ore milled in the three months ended October 31 totalled 1,000 tons, yielding 782 oz. In addition, 2,254 tons of old tailings treated gave 219 oz. owing to trouble with one 15 ft. x 10 ft. tanks it was impossible to treat larger tonnages of old tailings. The defect has been rectified.

Kentani Gold Areas.—During the six months ended December 31, 1941, 91,282 long tons of ore were treated at the Geith mine or a gold recovery of 26.51 fine oz. gold for an average cost (before depreciation) of 24.78 per ton.

As regular supplies of essential stores cannot at present be assured, it has been decided to adjust mining operations according to stocks in hand. As a result of this policy only 11,572 tons were milled in January, yielding 3,522 oz. fine gold.

No final calculation of ore reserves has been made since June last, and full details of development covering the subsequent six months have not yet arrived, but a summary is available for the three months to September 30, during which 2,707 ft. of development were done at the Geith, Little Cone, Ridge and Law Mu properties, and at Prospect 30, 1,435 ft. being driven. 1,147 ft. sampled, 732 ft. found payable with an average payability of 68%, an average width of 6 ft., and an average value of 5.5 oz. gold per ton. It is intended to restrict mine development at present, but work has been suspended at Prospect 30 as it is considered that sufficient development has been carried out until the time comes to treat the ore from this mine.

Consolidated Mines Selection

ON BUSINESS OR ON PLEASURE

YOUR TRAVEL IN EAST AFRICA CAN BE MADE SWIFT AND SMOOTH BY THE RAILWAYS OF EAST AFRICA.

THE BUSINESS CENTRES are linked by regular, speedy and comfortable train services.

FOR TOURISTS services run to the game reserves, to the excellent fishing rivers, on to the inland seas—and for tourists going even further afield—through connections with Rhodesia, the South and the Belgian Congo.

WHILE you are contemplating SETTLEMENT in East Africa, the Railways will take you in comfort to the fertile and healthy farming areas.

BEFORE you decide to go to East Africa, let the Railways tell you how they can ease your journeys.

The gun! They're off! The first fifty yards sees them in a bunch. But distance weeds them out . . . some give up, others hang on . . . but now there's only three men in the race. The last lap, a third man is coming up . . . he passes the man ahead . . . he's level with the leader . . . ten yards to go . . . he sprints . . . who's won? What a race! What stamina! Like runners, paints look much alike at the start, but where the going's heavy . . . the struggle keen . . . it's stamina that counts! That is why, if you are finding corrosion prevention a problem, you should employ "Atlas Ruskilla" Paints. Being tough and tenacious, they offer stubborn resistance to the corrosive action of weathering, steam, moisture and industrial fumes. They are elastic, and consequently do not crack under vibration or rapid changes in temperature. Capable of giving real protection and long service, these sturdy coverings will bring your painting costs down to bedrock. They are available in Black, White, Aluminium and many colours.

MATTERS OF MOMENT

THE COLONIAL OFFICE, which has stood in sad need of dynamic leadership since Lord Lloyd's untimely death, has now at its head in Lord Cranborne, a Secretary of State who is generally re-

Lord Cranborne Takes Control of Colonial Office. regarded as one of the ablest of the younger Ministers, who sees facts as they are

He, not as he would wish them to be, does not fear to act upon the conclusions to which he is led, has already shown that he can handle difficult problems with statesmanship, and has inherited his family traditions of service to the State. In Mr. Harold Macmillan, recently appointed Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, he has a colleague who has likewise a mind of his own and readiness to speak the truth as he sees it. The personal qualities of the two men to whom Mr. Churchill has entrusted the control of the Colonial Office therefore encourage the hope that they will be able to inspire that sense of urgency which has been so desperately needed. Not conspicuous in Whitehall, it has been wanting in most of the Colonies, the Governments of which have in the great majority of cases lagged behind local public opinion in regard to their contribution to the war effort, they have generally done too little too late. In administrative circles in too many parts of the Empire the old conventions persist that the enthusiast, official or non-official, must be restrained, that good task, and that the general aim must be to preserve, in and through the whole time honoured, time-wasting, time-disregarding dissipations of the past. Red tape still rules in the Colonial Office and the Colonial Empire, and mediocre men continue in key posts which they have reached merely by the law of seniority, and which they demonstrated their incapacity to fulfil satisfactorily in normal times, to say nothing of these days of stress and strain.

While Lord Moyne's keen interest in Colonial problems has been universally recognised, and his willingness to sacrifice himself in the cause of the Colonies has proved, he has given the impression during the past year of being over-tired, which is not surprising, seeing that he was also Leader of the House of Lords. One of our regrets is that that dual burden is to be borne by his successor, for the tasks to be discharged at the Colonial Office assuredly demand all the concentration and time of the Secretary of State. It is, however, an advantage that Lord Cranborne is a much younger man than Lord Moyne, being only forty-eight years of age. If he be long enough at the Colonial Office to make his influence fully felt, and that one has, unfortunately, been too often regarded merely as a stepping-stone from one the Empire as a whole the new Secretary of State may do great things. If he has difficult problems to face, he has also a magnificent opportunity to grapple with them realistically, sweep away anachronisms, and infuse inspiration. His achievements will require the removal of inefficient men and more than dispatches and speeches, (though the written and spoken word can, of course, contribute powerfully to an improved state of affairs). The war has shown how drastically the Colonial Service needs overhaul. For many years there have been inquiries in plenty, and wise recommendations without number await action by an alert Minister prepared to compel those in authority under him to move with the times or make way for men more resolute. From the Colonial standpoint these are the considerations which spring most prominently to mind in connexion with the changes in the Government. Southern Rhodesia, of course, is directly affected by the appointment of Mr. Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister, to the portfolio of Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, for it is through the Dominions Office that that self-governing Colony maintains contact with His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom.

REALISM is something very distinct from pessimism, and more widely separated still from defeatism. The first quality which we have sadly lacked in our national affairs during the last quarter of a century is

Realism more urgently needed today than

Needed at any time since the Germans launched their second bid for world domination. No serious assessor of the use the British Empire has made of its opportunities in the past two and a half years (to say nothing of the year that the locusts were allowed to eat what Hitler and his Junker allies built up their armed might) can maintain that realism has dominated British councils. The few realists prominent in public life—Mr. Winston Churchill, Lord Lloyd and Mr. Amery at the head—were kept in the political wilderness by smaller, self-satisfied, appeasement-minded men, and to make doubly sure that their warnings should remain ineffectual, they were made the subject of constant vilification. It needed the collapse of France and the overrunning of Norway to bring them to their rightful places, whence, alas!, one of them, Lord Lloyd, was all too soon removed by death at a time when he was infusing his own splendid qualities of honest thinking and vigorous action into the whole Colonial Empire. It may be remarked in passing that Mr. Churchill was himself Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies in Amery, now Secretary of State for India, proved himself one of the ablest Colonial Secretaries the Empire has ever had, almost certainly the best since Joseph Chamberlain. Though the Colonial Office has not infrequently had at its head politicians of meagre ability, it can thus be claimed that some of the keenest and most clear-sighted students of Colonial affairs were among the few public men who saw German designs.

The Colonial Office, which has had a very bad press in connexion with the civil administration in Malaya, must be prepared, as a result of Japanese successes, for our Oriental adversaries to carry their activities to the shores of British been far too marked a tendency for complacent public servants, whether soldiers or civilians, in authority in various Ministries, to disparage and disregard proposals designed to meet contingencies which seemed to them unlikely but which have nevertheless materialised to our great hurt. There must be an end to such scepticism, to such judgment by standards which have no validity in total war as the Germans and Japanese understand the term, and as we must learn to interpret it.

Only by being one jump ahead of the enemy can we expect to cope effectively with his stratagems, and there is no conceivable reason why we should not be at least one jump ahead if the knowledge of our forces and resources utilised, while Germany is still using the invisible light, and in other planes, while her propaganda has subversively and sedulously asserted, "In the incredibly stupid war for example, any nation which had the experience than a match for Japanese intelligence need is to get the right men to pool their reading of enemy intentions and of the possibilities open to foes who shrink at no gamble, and then to concert plans to meet this new phase of the war in which Africa may well play a special part."

It is possible, if not probable, that the Germans and the Japanese, acting in collusion, may almost immediately stage an onslaught of maximum intensity on the whole position of the Allies in the Middle East (taking the term in its widest sense), an stretching from Libya

India to Burma), while simultaneously making desperate endeavours at sea to levy heavy toll upon British shipping in the Indian Ocean. There may be tremendous thrusts at the British naval base at Alexandria and renewed naval and aerial attacks upon Egypt, all with the object of loosening British control of the Suez Canal and the north-eastern shoulder of Africa. That plan, as the Hun sees it, would drive the remnants of our forces back upon the Sudan, upon Aden, and upon Kenya, while at the same time the Japanese might be expected greatly to intensify their efforts against Burma and in the Bay of Bengal. Apart, however, from the possibility of German success in Egypt (a remote contingency, it is to be hoped), it is by no means unlikely that Japanese surface and submarine raiders, and perhaps Japanese aircraft-carriers, might at any moment strike at shipping off the east coast of Africa, and shell or bomb Durban, Beira, Mombasa or other ports. These are contingencies within the realm of the practical, hazards against which every precaution should have been taken—or must now at once be taken.

E. Africa's Strategic Importance

It is always in mind that a constant stream of shipping now flows along the coast of East Africa from Great Britain, America, South Africa and other countries with supplies for our forces in the Middle East and equipment for our Russian allies, who receive it through the Persian Gulf and Iran. Thus East Africa now assumes increased strategic importance. Her harbours have become indispensable links in the transport chain. Her copper output contributes vitally to munition manufacture. Her production of foodstuffs, and certain raw materials needed by the forces in the Middle East should be the means of cutting enormous economies in the use of our seriously strained shipping resources. Further, as was suggested here in some detail a few weeks ago, great assistance might be provided by the raising and training of large expeditionary forces formed from the martial tribes of East and Central Africa—led by East Africans and Rhodesians—a combination which has emerged triumphant from the test of modern war. Until it can be said that a sense of urgency reigns in high quarters the possible results of temporary Japanese successes will not have been viewed with grim and adequate alarm.

Lord Cranborne Now Colonial Secretary Attlee Becomes Dominions Secretary and Deputy Prime Minister

SEVERAL OF THE CHANGES IN THE GOVERNMENT announced by the Prime Minister last night centre to East Africans and Rhodesians.

Mr. ALEXEI Leader of the Labour Party, and Alberto Elio Phry Seal, has become Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs and Deputy Prime Minister. The Dominions (and Southern Rhodesia) are the concern of the Dominions Office; he has thus direct representation in the War Cabinet.

LORD CRANBORNE, who is regarded as one of the ablest of the younger Ministers, is now Secretary of State for the Dominions for that of Secretary of State for the Colonies. He also becomes Baron of the House of Lords.

The son and heir of the fourth Marquess of Salisbury, he is 48 years of age. He was for several years Parliamentary private secretary at the Foreign Office to Mr. Eden, accompanied him to Russia and Germany in 1938, became Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs that year, and when Mr. Eden resigned in 1939 in protest over Abyssinia, Lord Cranborne did the same. When he became Secretary of State for the Dominions last year he was created a peer taking the title of Lord Cranborne.

MR. DEVEREUX LYTTELTON, who since last July has been Minister of State in the Middle East representing the War Cabinet, has returned to England as Minister of State with the special duty of supervising production hours of the outbreak of war as Controller of Non-ferrous Metals, and in that capacity made with the Northern Rhodesian copper mining companies an agreement to purchase their output at prices they deemed reasonable to the country. After a short period as President of the Board of Trade he went to Cairo with wide powers, and within a few months he had done much valuable work, particularly in connection with the organisation of the port, transport and docks. Only last week we quoted his forthright appeal to East Africa for greater production for the Middle East Command.

MR. DUDLEY COOPER, who remains Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, is mentioned as a probable choice for the Middle East post until recently held by Mr. Enoch Powell.

Recent changes have thus removed the Secretary and Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, Lord Moyse and Mr. George Hall, M.P.

Mr. R. G. Howe in Ethiopia

Mr. R. G. Howe, the newly-appointed British Minister to Ethiopia, presented his letters of credence to the Emperor at the Palace in Addis Ababa on Thursday last. As a special mark of his pleasure at the resumption of diplomatic relations with the British Government, the Emperor sent his Minister for Foreign Affairs, Belachew Tigray, to present the Emperor's thanks and an address to the Ethiopian

Minister of War Pays Tribute to the British Forces

WHEN INTRODUCING THE ARMS ESTIMATES to the House of Commons, Mr. Captain Marquess, then Secretary of State for War [he has since been replaced by Sir James Grigg], said ~~in part~~:

"I ask hon. members to judge for themselves how much more difficult our position would be if now all the Italian armies in East Africa, Eritrea and Abyssinia comprising some 200,000 soldiers—more than one-third of whom were Italians—had not been utterly wiped out. That vast theatre of war would have become a running sore. We should have had to employ more and more men and equipment to contain the enemy's forces and material which, thanks to our final victory at Gondar, were isolated to fight in Libya and elsewhere. Acts of magnificent heroism were performed by that small British force, and by Bulgarian, Indian and East and West African troops under Italy by the most trying conditions against an enemy numerically far stronger."

The Middle Eastern Command covers not merely the whole of Libya, Egypt, the Sudan and Eritrea, but also Palestine, Syria, Iraq and Persia. The figure quoted in these criticisms covered also the East African Command. The proportions of British troops are very far from what our critics would like the world to believe. Of the total troops in the Middle Eastern Command nearly half come from this country, rather more than a quarter from the Dominions. India sends something over a tenth, and the balance is made up of Colonial and Allied contingents. I mean East and West African troops when I say 'Colonial'."

The Prime Minister announced in the House of Commons last week that he had appointed General in the Middle East, General, abolished in January, the necessity for that office having disappeared with the creation of the post of Minister of State about two months after Sir Robert Haining had taken up his appointment.

Help from Tanganyika and Zanzibar

The Acting Governor of Tanganyika recently stated that 80,000, 14, 1941, 100 Europeans, 200 Asians and 17,500 Africans from Fermeys were in the service of the East Africa Force. He added that Tanganyika battalions of the K.A.R. were prominent in the final attack on Gondar.

Sir Guy Pilling, the British Resident, speaking of the part played by Zanzibar in the East African campaign, said that to November last 16 European troops Zanzibar were serving or had served with the East Africa Force or in the Occupied Enemy Territory Administration, while 342 non-European were 201 (Zanzibar) Field Ambulance and 252 with the Mechanised Transport Unit. Valuable assistance had also been given by the 200th AA Heavy and AA Sqd in the transport of troops and supplies to Kisimayu and Mogadishu.

An African sergeant in the Royal West African Frontier Force, which served with much distinction in the campaign against Italian East Africa, is now undergoing training at Sandhurst.

Southern Rhodesia is to institute compulsory registration of European women in order to decide the number available for service respectively in the military and economic spheres.

Women between the ages of 21 and 40 are now employed as stewardesses on trains running between Beira and Southern Rhodesia owing to the number of men who have enlisted for war service.

employment at the end of the war, or to provide vocational training for their employment. A similar questionnaire for Asians in the forces is to be circulated.

The Government of Kenya has accepted the British Legion's offer to act as an employment agency for members of the forces of all races who may be discharged before the end of the war.

Casualties

Wing Commander D. R. A. Emslie, previously reported missing, and now presumed killed in action, was D.C.O. to Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brock-Popham, then Governor of Kenya, from March, 1937, until the outbreak of war. The son of Major-General A. M. S. Emslie of the Indian Army, he was born in Simla in 1902. During this war he served at the Air Ministry until he became a company of No. 114 Squadron at the end of 1940. Three months later he won the D.S.O. He had been squash rackets champion of the R.A.F.

Major J. H. C. Starley, who is reported to have died of wounds received in action in Libya, was second-in-command of the Transvaal Scottish unit which served with distinction in the campaign in Ethiopia. Before the war he was on the staff of the Victoria Falls and Rhodesian Power Company.

Mr. W. F. Baldoek, Senior Assistant Conservator of Forests, Tanganyika Territory, is among those missing, believed killed, in Malaya. Before going to East Africa he had played cricket for Somerset.

Mr. Clem Wood, R.A.F., who is reported to have been seriously wounded in Libya, joined the Southern Rhodesian Air Force on the outbreak of war, and later transferred to the Royal Air Force.

News has been received by mail that Sergeant R. M. Ronaldson, in charge of the Gatoma staff of the Southern Rhodesia, was wounded in action in Abyssinia.

Awards and Appointments

Flight Officer John Moss, No. 203 Sq., R.A.F., who has been awarded the D.F.C., was trained in Southern Rhodesia under the training scheme started in that Colony, and was commissioned in August last year. The citation states:

"One day in January, 1942, this officer carried out a photographic reconnaissance of the battle area in Libya. While flying his aircraft at 4,000 ft. above sea level, Pilot Officer Moss observed three enemy fighters flying to intercept him. Never hesitating, he counter-attacked with great dash, and when the attackers attempted to bring him down into a violent turn and spiralled down to 3,000 ft., he caused his aircraft to break away from the turn and spiralled down to 4,000 ft., reducing his visibility to a minimum."

"When below 4,000 ft. the ice cleared and Pilot Officer Moss observed that the enemy fighters were still pursuing, but, adopting both skilful anti-manoeuvring tactics, he cleverly crossed the enemy. He finally staved off pursuers in a sand storm near a landing ground, but he was unable to land there owing to the sand storm."

Realising, however, that his aircraft was becoming damaged by the wear of the sand and the lack of transport, he made a safe landing with the undercarriage of his aircraft retracted and without inserting any damage to his camera. He then commandeered a vehicle and transported his equipment by his photographs. Pilot Officer Moss displayed courage and resource in his fighting."

The following awards have been made for gallantry and devotion to duty in the execution of R.A.F. operations:

- D.F.C.—Flight Lieutenant P. E. Burton-Gyles, D.F.C., Flying Officer H. J. Sauvage, and Pilot Officer T. P. Salazar, R.A.F.V.R., all of No. 44 (Rhodesia) Squadron.

of Kenya, and the M.A.R. 16 L. Howitzer P. L. T. E. R. Royal Horse Artillery of Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia; L. Bomber P. A. H. Hasler Royal Horse Artillery also of Salisbury; and Gunner W. G. Sandall R.H.A. Royal Horse Artillery of Nairobi.

Lieut.-General Sir Alan V. H. Stone, chief of the British Mission to the Egyptian Army, who has been appointed G.O.C. British Troops in Egypt, was Assistant Commandant of the Sudan Defence Force from 1938 to 1940.

It became known on Tuesday that Lieut.-General Sir Alan Cunningham, former G.O.C. in C. East African Forces and of the Eighth Army at the start of the second offensive in Libya last November, is in a military hospital in the South of England. His health is improving.

Sir Alexander Keown-Boyd, who has recently visited East Africa on behalf of the Middle East Command, served in the Sudan Civil Service from 1907 to 1911, was then private secretary and afterwards Oriental secretary to the High Commissioner in Egypt, and afterwards served the Egyptian Government as Director-General for Foreign Affairs and Director-General in the Egyptian Department of the Ministry of the Interior.

Two Rhodesian shipmen, Messrs. Colborne and Fawcett, both of Bulawayo, who were serving in H.M.S. Hesperus when she was sunk in the Pacific, are now reported to have been saved.

Rhodesian War Committee

The Southern Rhodesian Munitions Production Board, which works under the direction of the Minister of Air, Mines and Public Works, Colonel E. Lucas Guest, is as follows: Air Vice Marshal C. W. Meredith (Chairman), Group Captain L. J. Schoon (Deputy Chairman), Colonel A. V. Adams, Major M. P. Sells, and Messrs. A. B. Cowen, W. J. McAdam and H. G. Issels, with Mr. P. H. Taylor as secretary. The Chairman of the Northern Rhodesian Production Committee, which works in close co-operation, is Mr. A. Ryden Harrison, general manager of the Shokana Corporation and Mr. Evans, Chairman of the Southern Rhodesian Electricity Supply Commission, and Major Sells, chief mechanical engineer of Rhodesia Railways, are the respective Chairman of the local committees in Salisbury and Bulawayo. Arrangements are now in train to establish yet another production committee to represent the whole of the mining industry of Southern Rhodesia.

The chairman of Northern Rhodesia has appointed a Food Production Committee under the chairmanship of the Director of Agriculture. The other members are the Director of Veterinary Services - Major M. K. Nind, Messrs. G. B. Becket, T. C. Zundel and C. Gordon James.

Mr. Wilson, a builder of Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia, is turning out armoured parts for aircraft under the Government's Munitions Board in a dozen workshop by machinery used by him for his part-time hobby. In three months 400 parts have been produced. Mr. Wilson's only helper is one African.

New Railway from Sudan to Eritrea

Press Telegrams from Cairo reported a few days ago that a railway from the Sudan to Eritrea is now under construction for military purposes.

The Occupied Italian Territory Administration, whose head is Major-General Sir Philip Mitchell, with headquarters in Nairobi, is responsible for the control of 120,000 square miles of territory with about 12 million inhabitants in East and North-East Africa.

Its administrations in Tanganyika Territory lent more than £180,000 to the Imperial Government last year from their surplus balances.

Learning that Lusaka Women's Voluntary War Workers required the sum to make up the cost of an electric cooker for the preparation of passengers' meals at the airport, Mrs. Spots wrote sending £10 in acknowledgement of the excellent day, in which from her experience she knew that air passengers were looked after.

Nyasaland's contributions for the Earl Haig Fund on Happy Day totalled £375, an increase on the previous year's figure.

Under the auspices of the British Council arrangements have been completed in Beira for the entertainment of all ranks of the Royal Navy and the British Merchant Navy. A library has been established in premises of the Manic Trading Company, and tobacco and other gifts are distributed to officers and seamen before their departure.

In order to provide social amenities for lonely members of the fighting services in the area, a hostess bureau has been established in Beira.

An appeal for French books for General de Gaulle's forces in the Middle East is made by Free French Headquarters, 4 Carlton House Gardens, London, W.1.

Duke of Aosta Seriously Ill

The Duke of Aosta, who was Italian Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief in Ethiopia, is lying seriously ill in a nursing home in Nairobi. A bulletin issued on Sunday stated that he is suffering from "an acute attack of tuberculosis, and some anxiety is felt for his present condition. He has periodically suffered from attacks of tuberculosis during the past 22 years."

Air Marshal A. T. Harris

New Bomber Chief's Link with Rhodesia

AIR MARSHAL A. T. HARRIS, C.B., D.B.E., AFC, who, at the age of 50, has been appointed Commander-in-Chief, Bomber Command, in succession to Air Marshal Sir Richard G. C. Pease, served during the last war in the ranks with the 1st Rhodesia Regiment in South Africa (the Boer Attaque Rebellion of 1914) and then in South-West Africa before joining the R.F.C. in 1915. In France he quickly gained distinction as a gunner, and received the Air Force Cross in 1918. In the following year he was granted a permanent commission as squadron leader, and after service in Iraq the Middle East and Africa was promoted air commander in 1920 on appointment to command No. 4 (Gibraltar) Group. He became A.O.C. in Palestine and Transjordan in 1924, was promoted air vice-marshal in July 1938, and two months later assumed command of a Bomber group. He was promoted to acting air marshal last June. Air Marshal Harris has been mentioned in despatches twice during this war.

Tropical Diseases Hospital Committee

We recently reported that a Tropical Diseases Hospital Committee had been set up by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, with the Under-Secretary of State as Chairman. We are now able to add that the Colonial Office is represented by Mr. W. J. Jeffries and Mr. A. G. H. Isaacs; that Sir Holroyd Worring and Light, Colonel S. P. Parkinson represent the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine; Sir Philip Manson-Barry, Mr. J. C. Nairne and Mr. C. H. Figg the Seamen's Hospital Society; Sir Edward Mellanby, the Medical Research Council; and that the India Office, Foreign Office and Ministry of Health are represented respectively by Major-General Sir Ernest Bradford, Sir

Why Singapore Falls—Singapore, with 220 square miles of comparatively flat country, had no natural qualifications as a fortress. Unlike Malaya, it had no natural protection against invasion, and the local Government long ago decided, on insufficient evidence, that the land was so marshy that it was impracticable to build any form of deep-tunnel or artificial concrete shelter. To the military mind, there still seemed not enough men on the island, even after the withdrawal from Johore. There were at least 45 miles of coastline where the enemy might attempt landings. Moreover, the island was singularly vulnerable to air attack. Combinations of men and equipment never came in sufficient quantity to make any great difference to the general situation. The Hurricanes turned out to be only slightly better than the Japanese fighters and were greatly outnumbered. Many of the white flaps, Abrahams' few conspicuous exceptions, never seemed to be physically up to the mark. Some had been too long in the tropical climate and had "gone soft"; others, only just arrived, were not accustomed to the heat of the climate. Our artillery did what it could, but the Japanese had more guns and the advantage of continuous aerial observation. The plane and even the balloon. The enemy's complete ascendancy over air had a big effect on the anti-aircrafting and an even bigger effect on the morale of our men. The general who showed the greatest quality of leadership was the commander of the Australian Expeditionary Force. Hard bitter, sarcastic, difficult, he was yet a leader through and through, imbued like his men with an aggressive, offensive and unconventional spirit. Otherwise the absence of certain leadership made itself felt from the top downwards. The same lack of dynamism, of aggressive energy, characterised the upper ranks of the civilian administration. In Malaya there was time for static to be replaced by dynamic and vital leadership.

Against this structure, the military and civilian weaknesses which have been indicated, there was suddenly launched the explosive force of a nation. The Japanese in Malaya have shown themselves to be able, determined and courageous soldiers. Until now, at least, they have been available to the Allies in the Pacific so that they can obtain else over the Japanese in the air war, going to be difficult to hold the Japanese at sea and on the land. It is not the Japanese who are strong in Britain, but the British who are weak. How to Stop Japan.—There were grave misgivings and misconceptions about Malaya by London Service leaders. We had only Buffaloes, Brewsters, Hudsons and Australian-made trainers, Wirraways to fight the Japanese fast-climbing fighters, as good as the near-best German machines. We had a few high-flying bombers while they had half-sized, low-flying ones, and dive-bombers in plenty. The main lesson is that we must have many hundreds of fighter and torpedo-carrying aeroplanes. This will require a recasting of British aeroplane production, as well as of priorities in America. The big high-flying bombers can do little in the Pacific. Australia asks whether the big bombers can play a vital part anywhere. What was the battle for Singapore Island fought at, all? More than two weeks ago it was clear that nothing could be gained. Singapore was a crowning and avoidable disaster. The 12 miles of frontage where the Japanese crossed was held by one South Australian battalion. We had a goodly part of four divisions on the island. Surely, beginning some weeks ago, a large party could have been brought off for service in India and Java. Japan can be stopped in one way only—fighter planes, mainly by seasoned pilots, torpedo-bombers, and ships sent attack her seaborne forces. Sir Alfred Murdoch.

Army Inefficiency—Two-fifths of the skilled engineers entering the Army are being wasted in the Royal Engineers (of all units), the proportion rises to two-thirds. How many of the miners so urgently needed in the pits are peeling potatoes? These figures are from the Beveridge Report, issued 18 months ago, and the War Office is still not doing enough shake up from top to bottom in Service direction, especially the Army, is long overdue. The middle income is reflected in the field. —Daily Mail.

The U-Boat Menace—How many submarines has Germany? The most probable figure is about 250, with every prospect that it will be doubled before another winter. In any navy, submarines at sea will normally be about one-third the total in service. The others will be in their way to and from port, or will be undergoing the necessary periods of rest for their crews and for the safety of the craft. Indications are that the U-boat offensive will be

Japanese Equipments—The equipment taken from Japanese prisoners is so complete that it shows that each man is able to fight independently for from two days to a month behind enemy lines, as long as he can get a minimum of food and water from the countryside. Typical equipment consists of gas mask, green hood, a combination of mosquito net and camouflage covering, helmet, face and shoulders, green corded net to cover the rest of the body, black eye-screws against sunburn. He is provided with recoil-sabre for climbing trees and tying himself in branches to prevent his rifle's recoil from dislodging him when soaping, a five-inch-long rice stick, a small bag of hard tack, half a pound of boiled sweets, a pocket of concentrated food pills, a tin of chlorine to purify water, mess kit canteen, quinine, stomach pills, gauze pads, a roll of bandage, spare socks, gloves, toothbrush, torch with folding cap, coloured lenses (one red, one blue) are arranged as a recognition device, and half a dozen sponge lenses for the eye-holes of gas masks, including some for use in zero and sub-zero weather. Some men carry small hand-fitting three-calibre revolvers of British make; others have a rifle about six inches longer than the American Springfield. Many carry a sub-machine gun modelled after the Sten gun and firing 22 calibre bullets. The most interesting weapon used with special effect in Malaya, consists of a four-inch gun which is carried on the head and shoulders and can be set up on a stand which fits the soldier's thigh. Shock troops are extremely mobile, well-trained, well-led, well-organised and completely unconventional. —Mr. C. V. Jones in the Daily Express.

Egypt's Danger—First by Japanese successes against our bases, Hitler must be saved by Alexandria, main bastion of our reduced Mediterranean hold. Whatever measures we have taken lately at home for airfield defence should be insisted upon for Egypt. Any attack upon Egypt would certainly come from three directions: Rommel, the air, and the interior. In few countries can the stage be more perfectly set for fifth column collaboration with an attacking force. In the teeming Nile Delta 70,000 Italians were at liberty when last heard. Add tens of thousands of other Axis sympathisers, many of them

Sergeant Kenneth Edge, K.A.R., and L. G. P. Joan Wood, W.T.S., were married in Nairobi on February 14.

Sir Battick Duncan has been re-appointed Governor-General of the Union of South Africa for a further period of five years.

Council-Orde Wingate will address the Royal Geographical Society on the "Geography of the Ethiopian Campaign" on Monday, March 16, at 5 p.m.

Mr. W. M. Logan, who was recently appointed Governor of the Seychelles, is expected to arrive in Mahe at an early date from Northern Rhodesia where he has been Chief Secretary.

Ms. H. G. Morgan, Attorney General of Nyasaland, and Acting Chief Justice in that Protectorate, has been made a K.C. This is the first time that a King's Counsel has been appointed for Nyasaland.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry of the American United Presbyterian Mission, who remained in Addis Ababa throughout the Italian occupation in spite of opposition and imprisonment, are again carrying on their work there.

Sir Montague Barlow, Chairman of the British Central Africa Company, and a member of the Executive Council of the Joint East African Board, has been nominated by the Bishop of London to serve on the Reorganisation Committee established in the diocese.

Sir Samuel Beale, K.B.E., a past President of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, and Chairman of Guest, Keen and Nettlefolds, Ltd., has been appointed Chairman of the business members of the Industrial and Export Council in the room of the late Sir F. D'Arcy Cooper.

The engagement is announced between Mr. Rees Jenkins, only son of the late Rees Jenkins and of Mrs. Jenkins, 2 Carlyle Mansions, Cheyne Walk, Chelsea, and Jean, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Robertson, of 5 Ross Court Mansions, Buckingham Palace Road, London (late of Southern Rhodesia).

Lord Townshend had an audience of the King on Monday and delivered up his seals of office upon relinquishing his appointment as Secretary of State for the Colonies. The Rt. Hon. G. R. Attlee, M.P., and Viscount Cranborne were received by His Majesty the same day and kissed hands upon appointment as Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs and Secretary of State for Colonies respectively.

The Johannesburg Sunday Times being widely read in Rhodesias and East Africa, there will be general interest in the announcement that Mr. J. Isanglev Levy, editor of the paper for the last 12 years, has asked to be allowed to retire at the end of this month. His successor is Mr. T. Dawson, editor of the Johannesburg Sunday Express, which was about to cease publication for the duration of the war.

Lord Carbery: $4,000

Lord Carbery, who was reported last week evicted recently in Nairobi after 14 years hard labour on three charges of selling United States securities without declaring them to the Governor of Kenya, has been released on £4,000 bail pending appeal against the sentence. He has surrendered his passport to the police.

Mr. D. C. Campbell

Mr. David C. Campbell, until recently Deputy Chief Secretary of Malaya, has been selected for appointment as Colonial Secretary of Gibraltar. Mr. Campbell, who is 36 years of age, is the son of a missionary, and was born in India. After being at school in Northern Ireland, he went to Edinburgh University. Caught in Hungary at outbreak of the last war, he remained a prisoner until the armistice, joined the Colonial Administrative Service in 1926, became Assistant Chief Secretary in Tanganyika Territory in 1933, Deputy Chief Secretary in Uganda in 1936, and a few months ago was nominated to succeed Mr. Juxon Barton as Colonial Secretary in 1939. He had, fortunately, not taken up that appointment when Spain plunged into war, and was therefore available for this new war duty. It may now be recorded that, as we have learnt from more than one Uganda source, the consideration which overcame Mr. Campbell's reluctance to leave East Africa was the thought that "it might soon be in the forefront of the Hitler war zone. Who can say whether Gibraltar stands high on Hitler's list of potential new homes of war?"

Obituaries

The death occurred recently, in his 32nd year, of Dr. G. V. Davis, a Government medical officer in Southern Rhodesia.

Mr. F. J. Foxford, who had practised in Kenya as an advocate since 1918, mainly in Eldoret, died recently in that town at the age of 59.

Miss Margaret Bryant, whose death is reported, had done much work for the Royal Institute of International Affairs, being chiefly responsible for its 1935 pamphlet on the Colonial problem.

Major-General T. H. W. Pollard, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., of the Royal Scots, who died recently at the age of 70 years, saw service in Somaliland in the 1902 despatches against the "Mad" Mullah, being mentioned in despatches. During the last war he was mentioned seven times, made C.B. and C.M.G., and received the D.S.O.

Major-General R. K. Scott, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., who died on Saturday at the age of 71, served in East Africa for a short time during the last war. A Canadian by birth, he had been Principal Ordnance Officer in Canada some years before the outbreak of the last war, and he was from 1924 to 1927 Principal Ordnance Officer at the War Office.

Captain R. Humphrey Page, first pilot of a British Overseas Airways Corporation aircraft, was killed when crashed off the sea off the south coast of England last week. After service in the Royal Air Force and United Empire Airships in 1930, did a good deal of flying in the African route, and had recently been transferred to the Atlantic ferry service. He was 31 years of age.

Pacific War Affects E. Africa

Products New in Urgent Demand

JAPAN'S EARLY SUCCESSES in her aggression have a very important bearing upon the raw material production of East and Central Africa. It has already brought into prominence by the announcement that the United States at once contracted for the balance of East Africa's output, sugar above the 115,000 tons annually already earmarked for the British Ministry of Supply.

With the loss of fibre from Manila and Java, the sisal industry of East Africa assumes a new importance. In the last pre-war year for which complete statistics are available, Mexico exported 12,000 tons, the Netherlands East Indies 80,000 tons, and British East Africa 144,000 tons, whereas 10 years earlier Mexico had ranked first with 200,000 tons, and the Netherlands East Indies (41,000 tons) made almost level pegging with East Africa (30,000 tons). Portuguese East Africa's industry has expanded rapidly. Output has been restricted during the past year, and a considerable intensification of production could be achieved in East Africa if necessary. Provided more labour is encouraged by the Governments to come out of the Native areas. During 1941 some estates did not reach even their restricted quota, owing to labour shortage. If that problem is promptly tackled this year's output should rise to about 175,000 tons.

Pyrethrum Salves to U.S.A. May Reach £1,000,000

War with Japan will, of course, immensely benefit the young pyrethrum industry of the East African territories, more especially in Kenya, which has now reached an output of about 1,000 tons a year. Not many months ago there was serious doubt whether such quantities could find a market, and the Pyrethrum Board, after balying-skinning to the point of greatest danger, was driven to impose rigid restrictions upon production. With the attack on Pearl Harbour the need for such control of the industry disappeared.

The United States, the world's leading market for this insecticide, had for years bought largely from Japan whose flowers have a lower toxic content than those of East Africa, but are also dearer at a far lower selling price. Now, with Japan no longer in the market, it is reasonable to predict that the United States will take every ton of East African pyrethrum for which shipping space can be found. Indeed, it would not be surprising if the value of United States purchases of East African pyrethrum reach the million sterling mark during this year.

Java is one of the world's great sources of tobacco leaves, which is grown in large quantities in both Tanganyika Territory and Uganda. Those peasant producers thus stand to benefit from the present position in the Pacific.

Of tin, an essential of modern armaments production, fully four-fifths of the world's total output came from the Netherlands East Indies and Malaya. Uganda's tin industry, in recent years limited to an annual value of between £70,000 and £80,000, could doubtless contribute more, even though virgin ore reserves have been exhausted. There is scope for expansion in the Bulamwe area of Tanganyika Territory, and in Rwanda-Urundi, and in the Belgian Congo. Big hills might begin to rock out of Southern Rhodesia might also make some contribution to Allied needs.

Camphor is also an essential in the manufacture of aircraft fuel, and the Netherlands East Indies' producer will

In Uganda just before the outbreak of war some 10,000 acres of Para rubber were still under European cultivation. French tapping was so irregular that in the last year before the war the export amounted to no more than 14,302 centals. This is but a trifling sum in the scale of British and American needs, but the output could be quickly expanded if the tapping force were made available. In Tanganyika, too, especially in the hinterland of Mombasa, as well as along the railway from Dar es Salaam to the Ruvu river, there are 10,000 acres of Ceara plantations, all planted before the last war, and almost entirely dead for a quarter of a century, since Ceara could not compete with Para, the price of which had during most of the intervening period been too low to justify enterprise on the part of East African plantation owners.

Before the war rubber in Nyasaland was produced on three estates; small quantities of wild rubber also were collected. From Portuguese East Africa wild rubber was at one time an export, there is also wild rubber in the Rhodesias. In all these cases the output could, if necessary, be stimulated. There are, of course, still vast resources of rubber in the Belgian Congo.

That Africa, once a considerable producer, has almost ceased to matter in the rubber world, is entirely the result of the progressively lower costs reached by the highly organised plantation industry of the territories which Japan now seeks to seize. But under stress of war-time need that economic aspect could be quickly adjusted.

The Philippines and Java together produced about 2,500,000 tons of sugar a year, a great deal of it for the American market. Every ton of sugar which British and Portuguese East Africa can now produce in excess of local needs will be snapped up for Middle East and other markets.

The decision a few days ago of the International Tea Committee to raise the export quota from 10% to 12.5% is clearly designed to provide maximum supplies against contingencies, and producers in Nyasaland, Kenya, Tanganyika and Uganda are thus encouraged to new exertions.

Reorganisation of Copra Industry Needed

East African copra production has for some years been in a languid state. War's interference with supplies from the Pacific provides an excellent opportunity for a neglected industry to be put in order. The call will be for good quality copra with regularity of supply, which may necessitate real organisation for an industry which in East Africa has never been seriously tackled with an extremely poor quality of copra as the inevitable consequence.

The threat to the Netherlands East Indies must affect Zanzibar's clove trade, for of recent years a remarkable demand had sprung up from Java and Sumatra, where this aromatic spice has been mixed with tobacco for smoking and snuff.

The Governor's Speech

Additions can now be made to the record summary of Mr. Randolph Mackenzie Kennedy's address to the Legislative Council of Nyasaland, for the text of the Governor's speech has now arrived.

Meetings of the Council are, at present, not routine functions at which the Government sought the Legislature's agreement to plans already determined upon, expenditure already decided and draft legislation settled without expectation of effective amendment. Each proposal will be closely scrutinized, examined and discussed, and the Government can be sure that if a proposal is sound, it is promptly rejected.

Mr. K. L. Hudd, for 40 years Chief Secretary, Nyasaland, appointed by Sir Arthur to the Nyasaland, Northern and Southern Rhodesia Interterritorial Conference Secretariate had served Nyasaland faithfully, had entered fully into the social and sporting activities of a sporting community, and with an enthusiasm and efficiency which came as no surprise to those who knew him best, was now performing most important duties connected with the war programmes of the three Central African territories.

Our Governor expressed pleasure that Dr. Lamorn had settled in Mzimba after 20 years' work as medical administrator, and which he performed with success in connection with sleeping sickness, warmly welcomed the knight-hood conferred upon Dr. William Tait Dowd, the father of that Council, and congratulated the Attorney-General, now acting as Chief Justice, on having been appointed C.B. on the previous week.

Nyasaland's Provincial Advisory Committee

The Northern Province Advisory Committee had been established to advise the Provincial Commissioner on plans for improved conditions in all sections of the inhabitants. The P.C. was chairman, and the other members were the provincial heads of the main technical departments, European settlers, within a reasonable distance of Lilongwe, and a missionary.

In view of Lord Moyne's circular dispatch, steps must be taken to reduce the costs of production and marketing of primary products by the improvement of communications, extension of credit facilities and the promotion of local processing. Nyasaland must be ready to participate in efforts to achieve an evening balance in that part of Africa by the promotion and encouragement of secondary industries.

As one example of existing difficulties, the Director of Agriculture reported that transport rates reduced the economic value of cotton in increased dimensions which were totally insurmountable considering the cost of the seed, the high standard of cultivation and the variety of crops which could be grown under a wide range of climatic and soil conditions. As another example, a review by the Acting Director of Geological Survey revealed that a minimum of 783 well-drilled borings and 16 ditches were still required for the improvement of health and sanitation, the relief of congestion in over-populated areas, the opening of new agricultural lands, the resettlement in some aridland areas and general drainage and reclamation.

Except in very special circumstances, I trust that the Governor "I shall not approve the alienation of any more large block of Native Trust Lands during the war." Such action is in stark contrast to certain 21 years back which by a little thought and initiative can be brought under control of settlement to the benefit of all. This was suffering from land shortage of that can be shown openly to be greater the number of established European settlers in such settlement is likely to expand thought to be practicable and desirable in the general interest.

Some will be relieved to be reminded that the Governor is bound to consider it they did not always remember that Native councils were more competent to advise or administer their own affairs of land tenure than any European, however may be brilliant or experienced, or any political office holder, or competent. Without the continued assistance of Native councils and their own people in a good scheme there will be none there, but our successors will find us out.

Dealing with the Budget proposals, the Financial Secretary stated that changes in the rates of taxation for Native insurance were not designed to increase the rates. He had suggested a form of an alternative metric of a virolic basis, the higher being charged to those who had raised the cost of all imported commodities, whose value had added still further to the price to the consumer, who would be protected by the substitution of specific duties.

The general revenue balance at December 31, 1941, originally estimated at £177,665, was now put at £166,127. Any excess over £160,000 would be lent interest-free to the Imperial Government. Income tax would be increased to 10s. per cent. during the year. The yield in 1942 should be £243,000, as in 1939 it had been £151,000. The estimated surplus of £50,000 is expected to provide £60,000 Native salaries, £11,000 and increments, £30,500.

On January 1st, 1942, an African salary of Government and military type, inclusive of allowances, in his post not less than £12.10s. for a month's work.

The total estimated expenditure (including a reduction in salaries, unpaid under the Colonial Disarmament and Welfare Act) amounted to £637,100 in 1942, compared with £341,521 in 1941. Increases pay for police, military, promotions and changes in personnel would account for £2,400; increases allowances to Government Native servants and expenses for cross-faithes to Government Native servants and expenses for £11,487; pensions and gratuities for old men, extraordinary services for £9,170; and similar works for £2,750. An estimated balance of £122,700 was left after setting up into an estimated surplus of £50,000.

Zanzibar's Satisfactory Finances

Zanzibar's finances for the past year had been extremely satisfactory, said Sir Guy Pilkington, the British Resident, when recently addressing the Legislative Council.

The local's demand for cloves had remained good, and even more fortunately so had been no dislocation of transport facilities to those markets. Clove exports, which in November amounted to 890,600 cwt., would probably be less than 845,000 cwt. at the beginning of year—a new high record for the Zanzibar clove export industry, after a bad beginning had recently imposed.

The estimated revenue for 1941 was £425,800, and it was expected that receipts would reach £508,000, or £82,000 above the estimate. From the latest returns which give larger receipts from the clove export duty, now estimated to reach £192,250, as against an original estimate of £117,000, income would show a excess of about £8,000.

The revised expenditure estimate, including debt settlement advances, was £501,000. Payments to creditors under the debt settlement scheme to the end of October had amounted to £26,000, and there remained for payment £30,000. The revised estimates for 1941 made provision for further payments of £32,000, and £50,000 had been included in the draft estimate for 1942.

Gross revenue for 1941 was estimated at £13,12, including pecial revenue of £101,863. Zanzibar had no evidence that overseas markets had ever bought their clove requirements, and there was no reason to expect a lowering of the price level or a diminution of exports provided shipping facilities were maintained, freedom from competition continued, and the tariff was reached expectations.

Net recurrent expenditure was estimated to be £411,885, compared with £399,624 for 1941.

Shortage of funds could to some extent offset by the increasing part taken by Arab "mudirs" (magistracy) in Native administration.

The Resident stated that pineapples had been planted at Selem, and that the production of exported pineapples would begin late in 1942.

Kenya Surplus of £550,000

Sir Henry Moore, Governor of Kenya, said that the surplus for 1941 was now estimated at the less sum of £550,000 (customs and excise yielding £630,000 over the estimate), while the approved estimate for 1941 would be exceeded by about £287,000. It was recommended that the true surplus on the year's working £900,000, should be given to the Imperial Government for the prosecution of the war, but this plan was abandoned in deference to Lord Moyes' dispatch on Colonial finance policy.

Thereupon a following programme of expenditure amounting to £450,000 had been recommended by the Standing Finance Committee: food construction £60,000; wages for Government African employees in Nairobi and Mombasa, £30,000; soil conservation measures in European and Native areas, £40,000; purchase of land and other works in connection with Port Reitz aerodrome £18,200; storage shed for sisal in Mombasa, £10,000; building of a hospital for treatment of disabled African soldiers £5,900.

From the total estimated surplus of £1,200,000 it was proposed to lend £500,000 free of interest to the Imperial Government.

Mr. G. E. Lockhart, the Financial Secretary, said that 1941 had opened with a surplus revenue balance of £150,000 and the budget had only just balanced. Prospects had confirmed the increase, and the first 10 blots of revenue were expected to exceed £100,000 more than was estimated. £30,000 of that sum came from customs which had actually netted less than £1,150,000, and the income tax might well be revised upwards by another £50,000.

The fiscal situation now to be applied, with imports largely duty-free, imported necessaries strengthened but to 190%, commodity taxes raised, and a new excise tax raised, involved sterilizing which would compare unfavourably with those demanded in any other Colony. At the yield on income tax had risen to £100,000, or less than £50,000 above the original estimate for 1941, and the latest increase was estimated to produce next year further receipts £75,000. This, in conjunction with the other items, tax included, that in 1942 the Government would remove from the income available to be spent or saved by the non-Native community, all over £500,000, which seems rather as it is set to go even in wartime. Sterilization and inflation would produce £500,000.

The Colony's total salary bill was £1,150,000, of which total expenditure, the Civil Service establishment for 1942 was 1,000,000, of whom 588 were Europeans and 112 in the professional Civil Service.

Kenya and Propaganda

Commenting on the conduct of the war and the policy followed by the Government of Kenya and that advocated by the Association of Eastern African Chambers of Commerce and Industry, the East African Standard says editorially that the Kenya Government's policies has not been given the support of helpful and explanatory propaganda. There has been no attempt to build up a background of understanding which would have enabled the East African merchant to relate his difficulties to the war requirements, or what issues are important; given opportunities to understand why it is desirable and desirable to impose one commodity and deny the public another when both are still available to Great Britain. This, concludes the newspaper, is a kind of problem which merits a constant attention of those charged with propaganda duties, because it offers a wide field for the dissemination of information which, if properly given, would create the healthy public opinion.

Colonies and Whitehall

MR. R. NICHOLSON, former private secretary to Lord (then Sir Frederick) Luard when High Commissioner of Northern Nigeria, and afterwards secretary of the Royal African Society, writing to The Times on Colonial administration, said a few days ago:

"This correspondence raises the basic issue—namely, how far is local administration in the Colonies in the hands of younger and more alert minds, gifted with initiative and capable of shouldering and discharging responsibility? ... In a Colonial Government, is it better that it meets the no-businesstour control from Whitehall, but, rather, with an understanding collaboration?"

The trouble is that local Governments are not always in the bright band, as the service has often had reason to know. Some years ago the diverse members of a committee at the Colonial Office, including too distinguished Governors, strongly urged that where an official had proved generally incapable, though no specific charges of inefficiency could be brought against him, he should be treated like the employee of any business concern and given six months' notice. The home office committee unanimously rejected this suggestion on the ground that it would be "bad for cutting."

That view seems to me wholly absurd. A service from which the庸碌者 are eliminated offers better, not worse, prospects of a "coterie ouverte aux talents," than one in which efficiency is not sure to secure the rewards. It fails, however, to take into account the disheartening and infinitely worse effect on the service of the block to the promotion of beginners engaged in the retention of the limpet with a marketing and diving tool at the stroke of the clock mentality.

The first consideration is efficient service to the public. The interests of an individual official come second. Never the less, they too will best be served by ensuring that the right men come to the top. If the deadwood is cut out, the burden on Whitehall will be materially lightened.

Sir William McLean wrote:

"The Colonial civil servant is selected, prepared with high academic qualifications who are judged to be able to deal with the problems of undeveloped tropical countries with trying climates. During their service they are usually unable to save anything from their moderate pay owing to the necessity of maintaining a wife and family at home in most cases. They are separated from augmenting their pay by investing or participating in any Colonial business. On retirement, which is at a comparatively early age, and may be compulsory at any time, they may expect a modest pension. As their efficiency deteriorates prematurely, there are administrative methods of dealing with such cases as arise."

The business man, on the other hand, who starts with the same or comparable qualifications, has the chance of retiring at fortune in many cases, and he may even continue his business association with the Colony from this country. The colonial servant has no such chance of fortune; and when he joins the Colonial service he knows there is little likelihood of ever being employed at home again."

In view of the advantages in pay, promotion and security of position offered by Government and local authorities in this country, it is surprising that the Colonial Service is able to secure such a fine type of men. It shows that the spirit of adventure and the missionary outlook are not dead, and that we do not lack men able and willing to carry out the great policy of trusteeship for the Colonial people."

Mr. Walter Fletcher, who began the correspondence, said in an interim reply:

"The rigours of the Colonial Office and others cannot weigh against the present announcement of Sir Shenton Thomas, Governor of Malaya, who said: 'The day of minute papers has gone.' There must be no more passing of files from one department to another. Similarly, the day of letters and reports is over and written matter should be in the form of short notes. Every officer must accept this responsibility in full. In taking decisions the essential need is speed in action. Nothing matters which is not directly related with defence, military, and no should be treated with it."

So far this announcement of a change in existing method proves that it has not been able to bring the strain of unnecessary operations."

I have taken pains not even to appear to minuscule which chipping, but must point out that part of the trouble originates from the apparent impossibility of shifting the Colonial Service here and overseas what has been done so frequently in naval, military and air services. Here the substitution of younger and more alert minds at the top will be found is taking place, as well as the testing of men to prove the immediate leadership that has been imposed in the large extension necessitated by the war. The apparently aged officials that are the slaves, not the masters, of

Rhodesian Amalgamation Archdeacon Glossop's Plan.

ARCHDEACON A. G. B. GLOSSOP, of Nyasaland, has recently sent to Edinburgh his implications in this country and Africa in order expressing his views to the amalgamation of Nyasaland with Southern Rhodesia.

Elemental people and members of the Rhodesia Commission have uttered a warning against any hasty amalgamation of Nyasaland with Southern Rhodesia on the grounds of racialism and in the interests of the latter have been much more forcible than the former.

There is scarcely anyone in Nyasaland who desires amalgamation with Southern Rhodesia. We are wondering why Southern Rhodesia, still further to the south, wants it. What is the motive?

In every way, geographically and climatically, the Zambezi is the dividing line between Central and Southern Africa. If Southern Rhodesia desires incorporation with its larger districts and Government would let them not unite with the Union of South Africa, they would not wish to do so. Neither do they wish to be united with Southern Rhodesia. What is their motive? Is it not indifference to our uncivilised Natives, on the one hand, that the capitalist community towards labour, which they visit in their own interests? But that is not the last consideration. Britain has pledged to the African peoples that she will abandon the idea of racialism. She has a right to speak for the Africans as I have world wide influence in East Africa for 46 years.

The Governor of Nyasaland, Sir Harry Johnston, has been an admirable one, of which Great Britain may be proud. The District Commissioners appointed by the Home Government, and not locally, have really looked after the welfare of the Africans and they cannot speak.

We appeal to the Home Government not to abandon their Native sons. As well have the Natives been protected and guided that they should under no circumstances do otherwise. That is why Mr. F. J. Huggins was able to remark that they had, if anything, a very democratic expression of opinion. If they pursued such an amalgamation would mean, they would rise as one man to protest against the taking handing over to a capitalist community whose Native policy is so diametrically ours.

Why then the Prime Minister of Southern Rhodesia speaks finally of the opinion of the Home Government? I thought that if you wish to acquire a sheep owned by your neighbour it was only right to respect his opinions as to the ownership of the sheep.

It would appear to all true labour men to be opposed to amalgamating Nyasaland and Southern Rhodesia.

The Main Contentions Examined

With all respect for Archdeacon Glossop, who has given us a century of useful service to Nyasaland, some of the above statements demand correction.

The assertion that "Southern Rhodesia desires to 'grab' Nyasaland completely ignores the historical facts." Until about 1930 Southern Rhodesia's active workers for amalgamation were, with very few exceptions, persuaded that the wise course was to aim at union with Northern Rhodesia as a first step, and not complicate the issue by proposing the inclusion of Nyasaland. Alarmed at this prospect, the principal leaders of Nyasaland made urgent and repeated representations against such a programme, and they have continued to this day to press for the inclusion of Nyasaland in any constitutional reform affecting these three contiguous territories. Indeed, as we reported as recently as Jan. 22, 29, these non-official members of the Legislative Council, Sir William Talbot, Mr. H. B. Wilson and Mr. M. P. Barrow, have been appointed to represent Nyasaland at the forthcoming interterritorial conference which is to discuss this matter. It is then not Southern Rhodesia which plans to "grab" Nyasaland, but Nyasaland which has done everything in its power to avoid being left out of the Greater Rhodesia which must sooner or later be created.

It is amazing to read Archdeacon Glossop's statement that "there is scarcely anyone in Nyasaland who desires amalgamation with Southern Rhodesia." We are astonished to find that 10 out of 20 African correspondents recently of almost every public body in the Protectorate afford evidence against the Archdeacon's contention.

To suggest that the Zambezi is the dividing line geographically between South and Central Africa, and that Southern Rhodesia should therefore unite politically with the Union of South Africa, is both to argue from false premises and to ignore the character of Rhodesians—whose Native policy is unquestionably much closer to that of the Eastern African Dependencies under Colonial Office rule than to that of the Union.

Opponents of amalgamation have often declared that Southern Rhodesia desires to absorb Nyasaland in order to secure control of African labour, but they have never tried to explain why, if there were such a danger, the tobacco and tobacco planters of Nyasaland should be inclined as to advocate a policy which would involve them great difficulties. It has also to be remembered that no public leader in Africa has been more courageous in warning his fellows of the importance of raising African standards of wages and living than Sir Godfrey Huggins, who, far from being a champion of high-bound, retrogressive and repressive capitalism, as is suggested, is an enlightened protagonist of public participation in such enterprises as mining, power supply, and certain secondary industries. Sir Godfrey, indisputably the outstanding public leader of British Central Africa as a whole, is a man of affairs of vision and character, who stands head and shoulders above his contemporaries, and is much more likely than any other Rhodesian to encourage growing Liberalism in Native policy.

Arusha Plantations

ARUSHA PLANTATIONS LTD. report a trading profit for the year ended June 30, 1941, of £10,082. Interest on the debenture stock, other interest, and remuneration of debenture trustees required £5,034; depreciation reserve and amortisation took £4,437, and there was a debit balance forward from 1939-40 of £22,455, making £31,516, and leaving £3,522 to be carried forward to 1941-42, or £35,824. The directors have waived their fees.

The company's production of sisal totalled 855 tons, compared with 880 tons in the previous year. Of the 1940-41 output 97.7% was of No. 1 or 1A sisal, 4.3% of lower grades, and 0.6% of tow. The Themi and Loliondo estates together produced 50 tons of coffee. There are now 4,800 acres under sisal and 140 acres under coffee in Themi, and 314 acres under coffee at Loliondo.

The issued capital of the company is £100,000. ## Questions in Parliament

Mr. Sorensen asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies whether he was aware of the resentment of African and other coloured peoples in the Colonial Empire at the employment of the term "nigger" in reference to them; what representations and protests he had received in this matter; and what steps he had taken to prevent the employment of this and similar derogatory words in broadcast items and otherwise.

Mr. Harold Macmillan replied that no recent representations had been received on this subject.

Mr. Sorensen asked if Mr. Macmillan appreciated that there had been complaints since he (the questioner) made a similar query 12 months previously; would he consider them sympathetically and take action.

Mr. Macmillan: "Certainly, but these are rather matters of good feeling and taste."

Mr. Creech Jones asked whether a statement could be published of petitions submitted by Colonial Governments but not adopted under the Colonial Development and Welfare Act. Mr. Macmillan promised to consider the point.

"War for Britain," by Donald Cowie (Chapman and Hall, 12s. od.). Mr. Cowie, a New Zealander with a wide sense of Empire, here surveys the war from the viewpoint of the total Imperial effort, and though in the present fast-moving drama any summary to September, 1940, must be outdated, the author's handling of his material is adequate. Of most interest to readers of East Africa and Rhodesia will be the brief chapter dealing with the Italian occupation of British Somaliland (the high light of which was the fine defence put up by our greatly outnumbered forces) and with the references to the preliminaries to our crushing rejoinder which ended Italy's master African dreams.

Fighting Yellow Fever

A year ago last, "Africa and Rhodesia" drew prominent attention to the risks of the spread of yellow fever as a result of the extension of communications, particularly by air, between African areas in which the disease is endemic and those in which this scourge has never appeared, but in which the particular mosquitoes carrying the disease appear. The severe outbreak of yellow fever in the Sudan in 1940-41 emphasised the danger which has its military aspects in present conditions.

An inter-departmental Committee was accordingly set up under the chairmanship of Dr. A. L. H. Smart, Medical Adviser to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, to consider these matters, and a most valuable interim report has recently been rendered.

The Committee recommends that all persons who are likely to travel by air in or through the zone lying between 14° and 21° latitude (slightly to the south of Khartoum) and the southern boundaries of the Belgian Congo and Tanganyika Territory should be immunised against yellow fever, and that all non-Africans living in that area or visiting it should be inoculated every two years, and compelled to carry with them a certificate showing that they have so protected.

Amongst other things, the Committee stresses the importance of disinsectionation of aircraft as a measure for the prevention of the spread of yellow fever. It also emphasises the need for extensive and systematic surveys of the disease mosquito, particularly in urban areas, along transport routes and at aerodrome sites. The Committee feels that the danger of the spread of yellow fever to non-endemic areas will be increased unless adequate steps are taken without delay to ensure that proper measures are adopted in those areas.

We understand that it is likely, in order to implement these recommendations, that an officer may be appointed to visit and inspect aerodromes and advise as to the measures to be adopted and implemented.

The Director of Agriculture of Kenya recently estimated that there would be a reduction of about 50,000 bags in the Colony's wheat crop, and that there would also be such a reduction in the next crop that wheat would have to be imported. He added that the country could be assured that this would not happen for a third consecutive season.

In order to maintain food production, the Government of Northern Rhodesia will, under an arrangement for a period of three years, a minimum price of 12s per bushel for maize and 24s for wheat. A Standing Committee has been given powers to put land and implements to the best possible use, who has authority to loan surplus land and implements, and to administer emergency loans up to £6,000.

Statements Worth Noting

In returning my speech I shall be saying a quiet word and confidence in the war strength of South Africa.

I have already accepted the acceptance of a Deed received from Kenya authorizing the Hon. Mr. J. C. Wright, M.L.C., Kenyan Minister.

Since the signing on Jan. 18, 1943, of the £1,000,000 war indemnity, been arranged in Southern Rhodesia, Mr. T. L. McMillan, President of the 1890 Club Society,

The motion is one of the most important which you mentioned, but I am prepared to accept it. Hon. Mr. Welensky, Leader of the Opposition in the Kenyan Legislative Assembly.

Some days ago I had the pleasure of writing to you which I lost, but a rough copy of it follows:— "Dear Sirs.—I am enclosing a copy of my letter to you, dated January 20, 1944, merely for my own information. —Lord Baden-Powell, M.L.C., Kenya."

I would stress the need for a minimum centralized authority for roads in Eastern Africa. —Mr. J. A. D. Small, addressing the Astor and Chambers of Commerce and Industry of East Africa.

East Africa, generally speaking, is incurably religious and is accepting Christianity in place of many of his animistic beliefs, which cannot survive the scientific spirit of the age. —The Rev. H. M. Grace.

Administration has become so centralised in Kenya that the Provincial Commissioners cannot decide on building in the provinces they are alleged to govern. —Mrs. Gita Watkins, M.L.C., addressing the Legislative council.

The richest fruits of partnership between European and African are seen in the growth of an enlightened Christian opinion among Africans themselves. —The Church in Africa is the nucleus of forces moving for social progress. —C.M.S. Annual Report.

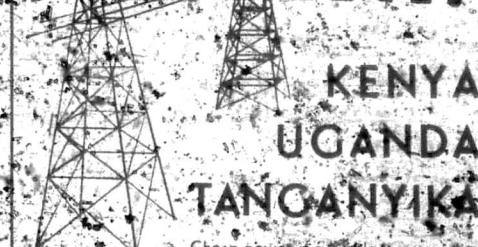

The total exports of all the Colonies in 1943 were £210,000,000; of this amount exports from this country totalled £70,000,000 and to the U.S.A. £50,000,000. The total imports were £210,000,000, those from this country being valued at £49,000,000 and from the U.S.A. at £10,000,000. —Mr. Noel Sabine.

The fact that a man is not called up because he happens to be a farmer or engaged in one of the reserved occupations does not mean that the right is conferred on him to carry on his business in a spirit of pre-war complacency, thinking he is sheltered from the obligation of military service so long as he remains in the industry. —Mr. Addison, Chief Recruiting Officer, Southern Rhodesia.
