

Red-blood-cell potassium as a practical index of potassium status in elderly patients.

Bahemuka, M; Hodkinson, HM

Date: 1976-02

Abstract

Red-blood-cell potassium has been measured using a simplified technique on 292 geriatric patients. The measurement was found useful in reflecting changes in potassium status whereas serum potassium was unhelpful.