

We report on seven cases that presented a benign soft-tissue mass in the thigh muscles. Ultrasonography provided the diagnosis of hydatid cyst. Total pericystectomy was performed. We point out the importance of preoperative diagnosis and the need for radical excision to avoid recurrence.