

ABSTRACT

The proceedings of a workshop on approaches to rural-urban development in Kenya, organized by the Institute for Development Studies, University of Nairobi in May 1985, are presented. Four seminar sessions dealing with a agriculture and rural incomes, non-farm activities, urbanization strategies, and urban finance and mangement, are documented. Finally, a brief synthesis presents a concluding discussion among workshop participants. The workshop programme and a list of participants are included.