

FACTORS INFLUENCING WORK ATTITUDE AMONG ‘Y’ GENERATION (A CASE OF AFRICA NAZARENE UNIVERSITY)

John N. Kamau

Department of Business administration, Africa Nazarene University

Mary M. Njau

PhD Students, University of Nairobi Kenya

Jacinta Wanyagi

Nairobi Hospital, Administrator

---

Abstract

There are three generations active in the work force today that include Baby Boomers (born before 1950), Generation X (born between 1950s and 1980s) and Generation Y (born in the late 1980s to 2000). These generations show different attitudes towards work. The purpose of this study was to determine factors influencing work attitudes among generation Y. The specific objectives of the study were to identify variables that affect generation Y attitude towards work and decompose the identified variables into factors that can be subjected to further analysis. Data was collected using questionnaires from part time students in Africa Nazarene University. Factor analysis was carried out using SPSS version 17 and the study identified eleven factors that express generation Y attitude towards work. These factors include: relationships, ambition, technology friendliness, self-assertiveness, instant orientation, autonomy among others.

---

Keywords: Generation Y, work attitude, employment.

Introduction and Background

Employing the so called generation Y is one of the great challenges that managers are facing in the twenty first century. This generation is completely different from other generations as far as work attitude and other social and economic behaviors are concerned. All over the world the workforce is dominated by the younger generation or the so called Y generation. Statistics from developed world indicated that this generation is not as populous as in the developing world. Kenya has a population of about forty million people out of which thirty million or two thirds constitute the young people (2009 Census). The work place is dominated by this group of people unlike in the developed world where older people dominate the work place.

Generation Y

Generation Y comprises of the people born in the 1980s and 1990s, although experts do not agree on when this era started (Alch, 2000). It is also known as the millennium generation (Barr, 2007). Most of them are in their late teens, twenties and early thirties. This generation is now entering or has already entered the workforce. Generation Y constitutes youths who have a different attitude towards work from the older generations. Work means something different to them than it did to their parents or grandparents. They do not like to work as hard as their parents but desire to enjoy good life. They do not live to work; they work to live (Barr, 2007). Generation Y attitudes towards work, doesn't mesh with the traditional, or the "9 to 5" schedule of work. It does not place much emphasis on how and when the work gets done, just that it gets done (Alch, 2000). Characteristics of the generation vary by region, depending on social and economic conditions. However, it is generally marked by an increased use and familiarity with communications, media, and digital technologies. In most parts of the world its upbringing was marked by an increase in a neoliberal approach to politics and economics (Barr, 2007). Teenagers and young adults - the so-called Generation Y have watched with horror as their parents worked up-to odd hours in their scramble for money and status. Today as this group goes out in search of jobs, they have different priorities from their parents. Their negotiations is not much about salaries but flexible working schedule, time to travel and a better work-life balance, a demand which employers must meet (Broadbridge et al, 2007).

Employment and Y generation

Hiring new young talents who are just out of college is a process that is challenging some already established practices of management which is changing today's corporate culture. With the onset of employing the Y Generation, companies are finding that they come with different attitudes and work habits that may need to be incorporated into the existing culture. There is a common response from global human resources departments in dealing with generation Y in that it is not unusual to hear the three "Ds" in their descriptions of this generation: difficult, demanding, and direct. It must be understood that, there are real issues that companies are now facing globally in trying to deal with this generation. In an attempt to discern why this group appears to be difficult, it has been concluded that Generation Y has a very different world view than preceding generations, a fact that cannot be overlooked (Broadbridge et al, 2007).

Work attitudes

Attitudes are expressions of inner feelings that reflect whether a person is favorably or unfavorably predisposed to some objects such as a brand, services, work etc. It's an outcome of psychological process that is not directly observable but must be inferred from what most people say or do. In work place context, attitudes are learned predisposition to behave in a consistently favorable or unfavorable way with respect to a given tasks and work in general. Mutoko, (2012) indicated that Generation Y employees have arrived at work place with a new attitude and are shaking things up. They seem to be ambitious, technologically savvy, hungry for success and impatient. They may be starting their working life at the bottom but this is not to say they'll accept rock-bottom salaries. By the time they graduate from universities, most of them already have professional qualifications under their belt. They walk in with high expectations of their jobs and employers. Modern conveniences like internet and computers are assumed to be a given right in work place. They focus on getting to the top in the shortest time possible. Expecting them to stay in the same job for twenty-five years with a pension as a reward is likely to provoke laughter. If not satisfied with a job they will move out fast. Generation Y has never known life without the Internet, cell phones, fax machines, voice mail, and chat-rooms. Weaned on technology, this generation would have no personal reference for a time before ATMs, VCRs, PCs, CDs, MTV, and MP3's. The Internet and export of American culture via TV shows, dress and music has resulted in some startling similarities in the way young people think and behave worldwide. They mistake the speed of the Internet for their own speed (Mutoko, 2012).

Employers need to seek greater understanding and more ideas relating to hiring and retaining generation Y. This is because it is evident that generation Y has a different attitude towards work from the previous generations. They are not motivated by the worries that bothered their parents and do not want to do the same thing their whole life but expect to change jobs as many times as possible. The new generation can be described as ambitious and self-confident and are viewed by older people as arrogant. They have high expectations and seek new challenges and are not afraid to raise questions if something is unclear. They want everything and want it now thus require instant gratification. They crave for feedback and options and have been found to be self-centered possessing a short attention span and also restless. They are also lazy towards office schedules and have little respect for authority. They have very high rate of absenteeism, frequently reporting to work late and have high rate of changing jobs (Mutoko 2012).

A survey conducted by NAA (2006), shows that most Millennials in the 18-28 age group use instant messaging, text messaging, or email as their primary sources of communication. Conflicts at work with this new generation have been reported and employers are already experiencing trouble and tension between older generation and the millennium generation. Occasionally there are clash of views as the Y generation do not want to be seen as young and inexperienced but think they can show others a few things when it comes to work. They crave for mentoring and want their managers to be engaged with them. From the above, it is evident that there is a problem that lies with the attitudes that Generation Y has towards employment and work. The purpose of this study is to identify and analyze factors that influence generation Y attitude towards work

Objectives of the Study

The main objective of this study was to identify factors that influence generation Y attitude towards work and employment and specifically the study sought to:

Identify underlying factors affecting generation Y attitude towards work

Decompose the identified variables into meaningful factors that can be comprehended and subjected to further analysis

Methodology

A sample of fifty students was picked all from the evening program at Africa Nazarene University. The sample was quite representative of the evening students who work part-time and study as well. The target on evening student program was suitable for the study as it constitutes Y generation that is both a work force and students. Questionnaires were issued to target population to facilitate data collection.

Data analysis

The data collected was analyzed using factor analysis as the study main interest was to identify and classify those factors. The study targeted 50 respondents out of which 41 questionnaires were returned, completely filled representing response rate of 82% which is taken to be good response.

Identification of underlying factors affecting generation Y attitude towards work

The first objective of this study was to identify underlying factors affecting generation Y attitude towards work. From literature review thirty nine variables were identified. These variables were too many and could not be easily comprehended. A list of these variables is provided in table 1 below.

Table 1: List of variables affecting generation Y attitude to work and explanations

	Explanation of variables var1.	They accesses information instantaneously
var2.	Completely different from their parents as far as work attitude is concerned
var3.	Generation y does not like work
var4.	Generation y does not live to work but works to live
var5.	Generation y increasingly uses modern media for communications in work place
var6.	Cares less about salaries but prefers more flexible working hours
var7.	This generation prefers balancing work and social life

var8.	Generation Y is difficult and demanding to deal with in work place
var9.	Its ambitious and hungry for success in career pursuit
var10.	Changes jobs within the shortest time possible
var11.	Craves for freedom and questions work methods
var12.	Seeks instant fulfillment in the work place
var13.	Has no respect for authority from their bosses
var14.	Generally lazy in completing their tasks
var15.	Craves for mentoring with in the work place
var16.	Always creates conflict in the work place with the other people
var17.	Highly receptive to new technologies
var18.	They do not want to be considered as young among colleagues at work
var19.	They do not want to be viewed as inexperienced in the work place
var20.	They believe that they deserve the position they want at work
var21.	They are looking for a new job with a new company at any given time
var22.	They have been described as a flexible to work related changes
var24.	They want to start at the top, or at least be climbing the corporate ladder by their sixth month on the job
var25.	Expect to relate with their employers as with their parents
var26.	They discriminate relationship with colleagues on basis of education qualifications
var27.	Base their respect for colleagues on the strength of their wallets
var28.	Loyalty to work is based on meaning attached to it var29.	Conventional eight hours work-day is a challenge to them
var30.	They prefer to extend leave days
var31.	Generation Y does not like working on weekends
var32.	Always visiting social networks during working hours
var33.	They are the most technologically friendly generation in the current workforce
var34.	They freely communicate with their age mates at work place especially in coded language
var35.	They accesses information quickly at work place
var36.	Lacks total commitment to duty
var37.	Absenteeism from work is a common trend among Y generation
var38.	Generation Y fakes sickness as an excuse from work
var39.	Rate this generation overall attitude towards work with (1) least favorable and (5)most favorable

Decomposition of variables into meaningful factors

The second objective of this study was to reduce the many variables of study into meaningful factors that can easily be subjected to further study and analysis. To accomplish this objective the respondent were asked to rate their agreement and disagreement with the identified variables on a scale of 1 to 5 where 1 stands for strongly disagree and 5 strongly agree. Using SPSS version 17 factors analysis was carried out using Principal components analysis approach.

In testing the goodness of the model, KMO and Bartlett's Test gave the results in table 2

Kaiser-Meyer-Olkin Measure of Sampling Adequacy.	.406
Bartlett's Test of Sphericity	Approx. Chi-Square	791.562
	df	528
	Sig.	.000

The results of this analysis indicates chi-square statistic 791 with 528 df which is significant at 0.5. The value of KMO statistic (0.406) is relatively good as it comes close to 0.5, which is a statistically desirable value and a significance level of 0.0 indicate that model of decomposing the variables was appropriate for this study.

Table 3 Total Variance Explained

Component	Initial Eigenvalues			Extraction Sums of Squared Loadings			Rotation Sums of Squared Loadings
	Total	% of Variance	Cumulative %	Total	% of Variance	Cumulative %	Total	% of Variance	Cumulative %
1	7.008	21.236	21.236	7.008	21.236	21.236	4.018	12.175	12.175
2	4.209	12.755	33.990	4.209	12.755	33.990	3.616	10.956	23.132
3	2.620	7.939	41.929	2.620	7.939	41.929	3.521	10.669	33.801
4	2.421	7.338	49.266	2.421	7.338	49.266	2.373	7.191	40.992
5	2.088	6.326	55.593	2.088	6.326	55.593	2.258	6.842	47.834
6	1.488	4.508	60.101	1.488	4.508	60.101	2.065	6.259	54.093
7	1.480	4.484	64.584	1.480	4.484	64.584	1.805	5.468	59.561
8	1.385	4.197	68.781	1.385	4.197	68.781	1.698	5.144	64.705
9	1.284	3.890	72.671	1.284	3.890	72.671	1.679	5.087	69.793
10	1.173	3.554	76.225	1.173	3.554	76.225	1.634	4.953	74.745
11	1.071	3.246	79.471	1.071	3.246	79.471	1.559	4.725	79.471
12	.929	2.816	82.286

Table 4: Explanation of variables Extraction Method: Principal Component Analysis.

variables	Factor 1	F.(loading)	Proportion	Name
VAR00013	Has no respect for authority from their bosses	.875	12.175%	Evasive Relationships
VAR00014	Generally lazy in completing their tasks	.842
VAR00027	Base their respect for colleagues on the strength of their wallets	.770
VAR00026	They discriminate relationship with colleagues on basis of education qualifications	.691
VAR00016	Always creates conflict in the work place with the other people	.638
Factor 2
VAR00032	Always visiting social networks during working hours	.746	10.956%	Sly Conduct
VAR00009	Its ambitious and hungry for success in career pursuit	.714
VAR00034	They freely communicate with their age mates at work place especially in coded language	.686
VAR00030	They prefer to extend leave days	.667
VAR00019	They do not want to be viewed as inexperienced in the work place	.609
Factor 3
VAR00021	They are looking for a new job with a new company at any given time	.879	10.669%	Ambitious
VAR00024	They want to start at the top, or at least be climbing the corporate ladder by their sixth month on the job	.673
VAR00010	Changes jobs within the shortest time possible	.659
VAR00033	Most technologically friendly generation in the current workforce	.637
VAR00008	Generation Y is difficult and demanding to deal with in work place	.599
Factor 4
VAR00005	They accesses information instantaneously	.833	7.191%	Technology friendly
VAR00001	Generation y uses modern media for communications in work place	.739
Factor 5
VAR00011	Craves for freedom and questions work methods	.815	6.842%	Autonomy
VAR00004	Generation y does not live to work but works to live	.687
Factor 6
VAR00018	They do not want to be considered as young among colleagues at work	.844	6.259%	Self-assertive
VAR00025	Expect to relate with their employers as with their parents	.633
VAR00002	Completely different from their parents as far as work attitude is concerned	-.573
Factor 7
VAR00012	Seeks instant fulfillment in the work place	.877	5.468%	Instant oriented
VAR00020	They believe that they deserve the position they want at work	-.560
VAR00017	Highly receptive to new technologies	.518
Factor 8

Using Eigen values of loadings greater than 1, 11 factors were successfully extracted. These factors explained 79.471% of the total variance in the entire matrix. The variables were rotated to distribute their weightings as shown in the table 3 above. The model captured a very high proportion of variables (80%) that explained the generation Y attitude to work.

Identification of factors

The eleven factors extracted constituted various variables and required to be defined. these factors were defined to capture the expression from the variables constituting each factor as presented in table 4 below.

Discussion, conclusion and recommendations

The main objective of this study was to identify and decompose factors that affect generation Y attitude towards work. Factor analysis was conducted on the explanatory variables with the primary goal of data reduction. The principal components analysis method, using Varimax rotation, reduced 39 explanatory variables to eleven (11) factors each of which had Eigen value greater than 1.0. Each factor was composed of a number of variables that had loadings of 0.50 or higher but the last three factors had only one variable indicating that a high level of significance. Table 4 lists the factor in the order of strength as they were extracted. From the table (4) the factors extracted that explain generation Y attitude toward work include: evasive relationships, sly conduct, ambition, technology friendliness, self-assertiveness, instant orientation, autonomy, leisure, mentoring affinity, flexibility and irresponsibility. These findings to a great extent are in line with what literature review identified as characteristics and attitudes of generation Y attitude towards work but in addition reduces them to a more comprehensive and exhaustive list.

Evasive relationship was perceived to be the greatest factor affecting generation Y attitude towards work. The factor carried the highest proportion of the total variance explained as 12.175%. Relationship is considered by behavioral scientist as the greatest contributor to employee performance, others being environment, equipments as well as motivation. This generation has a problem of building constructive working relationships especially with the supervisors and other senior managers in organizations leading to low productivity. The Y generation has problem of relationship not just with employers but also with parents. The employers have to find ways of training this generation on the importance of building firm and healthy relationship for success of businesses and society in general.

The second important factor identified is sly conduct. Generation Y is unwilling to comply with code of conduct in the work place. This factor scored 10.956% of total variance explained. This means that the generation seeks to do things its own way and generally dislikes work. This is a major challenge for employers who want work done and results produced. If this is not addressed the generation might lead to the decline of economies of most countries.

Another equally important factor is ambition that scored 10.669% of total variance explained. This generation is extremely ambitious making it hard to manage and retain in the work place. It is always on the move and may never settle in a job. This might affect growth of companies as the employees may never own or give their best as they are always looking for greener pastures.

Technology friendliness and desire for freedom are other factors affecting generation Y attitude towards work. The factors explained 7.191% and 6.842% of total variance respectively. This generation prefers spending time on social networks and on internet in general often resulting in poor performance as more of their energy is spent on attending to alerts especially from their mobile devices such as phones, iPod's and so on. It's a fact that modern information technology has brought about major developments but on the other hand may act as setback to productivity among generation Y and by extension to most employees.

Managers must devise ways of ensuring that employees are not distracted by the modern technologies in the work place. The desire for freedom and avoidance of being under authority is a major concern as it points to a generation that hates accountability. Employers must find ways of availing freedom of expression but not at the expense of performance.

Self-assertiveness and instance orientation are other major factors explaining generation Y attitude toward work. Each of the factors contribute 6.259% and 5.468% respectively of the total variance explained. This generation feels it knows it all and may not be willing to consult. This is a dangerous trend as it may lead to poor performance in businesses.

The findings of this study are in agreement with what was pointed out earlier in literature review that generation Y wants everything happen instantly. This is due to interaction with technology that creates a mentality of instant happening. This generation therefore ignores processes of life and creates conflict with those who think otherwise. Other significant factors include craving for mentoring, flexibility, irresponsibility and desire for leisure as opposed to work. These factors reveals a generation that needs to be understood especially by the employers if they want to make the best out of their potential. Most of the employers however are in generation (X) and baby boomers and must embrace realities of generation Y and give leadership.

This study merely identified the factors behind the Y generation attitude towards work. The employers should seek to understand this generation before declaring it difficult direct and demanding. Generation Y likewise must seek to understand their employers to create a conducive working environment. There is need to offer training forums that facilitate rapport building between Y generation and the older generations especially at work place. It's highly recommended that companies strategically budget for these forums to bridge the gap and tap into the potentials of two major generations at work place today.

The causes of perceived gap between generation Y and other generations in reference to work attitude have not been established authoritatively. More studies should be done towards this end. The study should also be carried on a larger scale to find out if the identified factors in this study hold in other sectors and other geographical regions. It would be of interest to find out how Y generation Y attitude to work impacts the younger upcoming millennium generation.

References

- Alch M. (2000) Get ready for the Next Generation. Training and Development, 54(2), 32–34.
- Axelrod M.,Quinsland, L and Schull J (2006) Multi-chat: persistent, text-as-you- type messaging in a web browser for fluid multi-person interaction and collaboration, Rochester Institute of Technology, 1-9
- Barr S. (2007) Bringing Generation Y into the fold Washington Post, Retrieved from <http://www.washingtonpost.com/wpdyn/content/article/2007/09/23/AR2007092301072>
- Broadbridge, A. M, Maxwell, G. A., & Ogden, S. M. (2007). Experiences, perceptions, and expectations of retail employment for Generation Y. Career Development International,12(6), 523–544
- Mutoko M (2012) Managing younger workers: Like it or not, even in the workplace, things go round and round in the circle game as a new generation moves to the forefront
- Newspaper Association of America - NAA, (2006) Growing Audience, Media Usage: A Generational Perspective