

Dr. Javier Gordon Ogembo gave an informative talk on “Mapping Epstein-Barr virus entry and replication mechanisms for the development of prophylactic and therapeutic vaccines”

Dr. Javier Gordon Ogembo is an experienced scientist and Assistant Professor in the Department of Medicine of the University of Massachusetts Medical School. His background is in cellular and molecular virology, with research interests in virus - host interaction, cancer malignancies associated with immune-compromised patients and vaccine development. His current research focuses on developing therapeutics and prophylactic vaccines against gamma-herpes virus.