

Kenya hosted the 8th Biennial Pan African Congress of Radiology and Imaging (PACORI). The inaugural and second congress was held in Nairobi, Kenya in 2001 and 2003 respectively and brought together for the first time stakeholders in radiation medicine within Africa and other continents.

The main objectives were to avail a platform where allstakeholders could share knowledge and professional experience as well as look at workable solutions in the African set-up. Since then PACORI has seen major strides in the improvement of diagnostic and therapeutic imaging in Africa. The last congress was held in Kigali, Rwanda in 2013.
